DISASTER

Schooner Sunrise Sunk By Collision With the Whaleback Barge 133.

The Barge Was in Tow of the Wooden Steamer Gratwick.

The Steamer Merida and Schooner Tasmania, Ore Laden, Are Aground.

Chicago, May 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The schooner Sunrise was sunk by a collision with whaleback barge 133 in tow of the steamer W. H. Gratwick (wood), in mid lake, about sixty miles from Chicago early this morning. The crew of the lost schooner arrived here this morning on board the Gratwick. According to the story of Capt. Buchanan, the Sunrise was runing free with a south wind, all light canvas being in, when the three blasts of the steamer were heard from the fog. She passed the steamer all right with nothing to indicate that she had a boat in tow. The next thing he knew, the whaleback barge had cut his bow clean off, fifteen feet back. The boat was immediately lowered and the eight members of the crew succeeded in getting into it before the Sunrise went down.

Louis Bressay, the mate, was badly jammed between the yawl and the schooner. The tow line had been parted by the collision, and the Sunrise's crew was taken on board the whaleback. The Gratwick did not discover that the barge had been loosened until she had gone fifteen miles. She then returned, picked up her tow and took the crew of the Sunrise aboard. The Sunrise was owned by Henry Scheele, of Sheboygan, and Capt. Buchanan, was worth $8000 and had no insurance. Capt. Buchanan lost $98 in money which was in the cabin. The lost schooner was bound light to Cockburn island.

TWO BOATS AGROUND.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., May 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The steamer Merida, bound down with ore, is aground at the Dyke. The schooner Tasmania, also bound down with ore, is aground at the light crib at the Encampment. She is two feet out.

THE ESCANABA RELEASED.

Escanaba, Mich., May 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The steamer Escanaba was released from Gull Island after jettisoning 400 tons of ore and brought here this morning.

ANTI-BOND BILL.

Senate Renews Discussion of Butler's Measure.

Washington, May 22.—There was a noticeable increase of the senate attendance today in anticipation of a renewal of the exciting debate of yesterday. The chaplain's prayer had hardly closed when Mr. Butler renewed his motion to take up the bill prohibiting the issue of interest bearing bonds. After some sparring, Mr. Hill interposed the objection that this was too important a question to be considered "without a quorum." This was the first evidence of a renewal of obstruction, but a quorum being found very quickly, the motion was carried—yeas, 34; nays, 20, as follows: Yeas, Republicans: Brown, Dubois, Hansbrough, Mitchell (Ore.), Perkins, Pettigrew, Pritchard, Shoup, Teller, Thurston, Warren and Wilson—12. Democrats: Bacon, Bate, Berry, Blanchburn, Chilton, Cockrell, Daniel, George Harris, Jones (Ark.), Martin, Mills, Pasco, Pugh, Turpie. Vest and White—17. Populists: Allen, Butler, Kyle, Peffer, Stewart—5. Total, 34.

Nays, Republicans: Allison, Baker, Burrows, Chandler, Davis, Frye, Gallinger, Hale, Hawley, McBride, McMillin, Morrill, Nelson, Sherman and Wetmore—15. Democrats: Caffrey, Gray, Hill, Lindsay, Vilas—5. Total, 20.

With the understanding that the Butler bill should not be prejudiced, it was passed to quiet title to lands in persons, who purchased the same in good faith, without notice and for a valuable consideration, and to enable the government to issue patents on such lands, and that commutations of homestead entries shall take effect from date of settlement and not from date of entry. Mr. Mills then gave notice that he would object to any business until the pending bond bill was disposed of.

Mr. Pettigrew presented a partial conference report on the Indian bill, which, being privileged, was admitted and agreed to, the chair ruling that it could not be debated so as to displace the bond bill.

Mr. Mills again demanded the "regular order" and Mr. Hill began his speech in opposition. He spoke calmly at first, gardually warming up in emphasis and feeling. "The crime of 1873 will be as nothing," said Mr. Hill, "to the crime which will be perpetrated if this bill passes and becomes a law. It is a bold proposition to repeal the resumption act, to repeal the only law which exists for the redemption of the paper currency of the country. By declaring that for no purpose whatever shall money be raised on bonds this measure is in effect a repeal of the act of '75. It is a startling proposition. It will not solve the silver question. It will simply put in peril the finances of the country."

The senator spoke derisively of this "self-confessed Populist measure. It might pass this body," he said, "but no senator believed it could relieve the conditions. The most he regretted," said he, "was that here in the senate he must differ with close friends on such a question as maintaining our integrity in the resumption of the paper money of the country. The present tariff law confessedly did not yield sufficient revenue to meet the expenses of the government. In the face of this fact vast appropriations were being made. How then," asked Mr. Hill, "can you expect to maintain a fund for the redemption of the outstanding paper money of the country?"

IN THE HOUSE.

Washington, May 22.—The conference report on the river and harbor bill was agreed to in the house—189 to 56. The speaker reappointed Messrs. Hooker, Herman and Catchings conferees.

QUAY AND M'KINLEY.

Former Visits the Latter at Canton Today.

Canton, Ohio, May 22.—Senator M. S. Quay, of Pennsylvania, accompanied by J. Hay Brown, of Lancaster, Pa., arrived in the city this morning over the Pennsylvania railroad at 10 o'clock. Governor McKinley having received a telegram that Senator Quay would pay him a visit, met him at the station in the modest family carriage.

To a reporter on the train Senator Quay declined to talk as to the object of his mission, saying merely that he was paying Governor McKinley a friendly visit. Mr. Brown said he was merely traveling as Mr. Quay's companion and had no knowledge as to the nature of his mission, and that Senator Quay intended returning East at 2 o'clock this afternoon. It is believed here this afternoon that the visit is friendly in every way.

WILL LAY THEM OFF.

Reduction of the Force at Lakewood.

The board of public works has decided to reduce the force at work at Lakewood and the men at work on the trenches will be laid off tomorrow night. This action was taken at its meeting today. Mr. Reed was designated to make a report to the council of payment already made on account of the work and of outstanding obligations.

The board decided to make the Garfield park assessment. A number of objections of a general nature were received, but it was nevertheless considered by the board that the property, the first cost of which was $50,000, would receive special benefits to the amount of $9,836.15, the sum of the assessment.

It was determined to meet on June 5, to make an assessment for planting trees on both sides of Superior street, between Eighth and Twenty-second avenues east, and the publication of a notice to that effect was authorized.

BOMB INCIDENT REPEATED.

Madrid, May 22.—Another bomb was exploded last evening near the palace.

ARNOLD

Author of Light of Asia Describes the Moscow Procession.

A Glittering Panoply of Almost Barbaric Extravagant Display.

Ivan's Heir Was Gracious to the Crowd's Plaudits--The Czarina.

London, May 22.—Sir Edwin Arnold, who went to Moscow on behalf of the Daily Telegraph, in his dispatch to that paper describing the scene at the Kremlin and the entry of the czar into Moscow, says:

"Why cannot one write in colors? There was never anything seen on any stage like the living kaleidoscope of fanciful attire, of fantastic hues and embellishments visible around me, particularly in the Oriental element, and all the far Eastern nations. The officials from Khiva wore magenta colored velvet robes, gold embroidered and sugar loaf hats. New China contributes a dazzling group with flowered satin frocks and vermillion buttoned hats. Now a bevy of magnates from Lake Baikal astound the eye with fur trimmed brocade and long red boots. Now I recognize the gray surtout and amber cap strings of the Coreans, and try one of them with a greeting in Japanese. He politely murmurs a response.

"Some of the Kirgese Tartars then appear in yellow silk and scarlet shawls, outdoing all, and at a window of the Gostinnoy Dvor there is a beautiful vision of a Circassian lady in black and orange brocades, glistening with pearls and turquoises. I abandon in despair the poly-chromatic aspects of this point of the pageant. The Cossacks guard were gloriously uniformed in scarlet and gold, riding little, weedy, Roman-nosed nags, with only a snaffle and bridle, and with gold and black bandoliers, looking quite fit to pace in front of the czar.

"After these came upon the scene, almost the chief interest for me personally, since I saw gravely and significantly riding along as the vassal friends of the great white Khan all the chiefs of the Central Asian kingdoms and provinces over which his eagles cast the shadow of their wings. They passed demurely upon noble Arab stallions, the very least among them mounted upon animals covered from crest to haunch with the costliest trappings of silver and gold cloth.

"But these and other parts of the pageant paled before the grand master of ceremonies, borne haughtily onward in such a golden chariot, as I thought, existed only in heaven or in classical pictures, holding a wand of gold topped with an emerald as big as a walnut. I note that a Catholic archbishop of America has been deprecating the abolition of war by arbitration. He would have been consoled by the spectacle I witnessed in the red square—a dazzling illustration of the pomp, pride and circumstance of glorious war.

"But here at last comes the august object of this unparalelled manifestation, the successor and heir of Ivan the Terrible. His handsome and manly young countenance is pale with the prodigious sensation which such a scene must naturally excite, and he holds his gloved right hand almost perpetually to his regimental cap. He bends his head gently to this side and that, to acknowledge the boundless welcome. Every man is bareheaded, and every woman is waving a 'kerchief or shawl, or violently crossing her loyal bosom in a prayer for "the little father."

"The czarina also sat all alone, dressed wholly in white, even the jewels, pearls and diamonds seeming to mar by their color the effect of this pure apparel, which caused her to resemble a marble saint within a golden shrine. Most unmistakable were the affection and loyalty of the crowd, and I saw more than one poor peasant woman's eyes fill with tears of sheer joy to behold this fair lady. One honest fellow fell upon his knees to say his prayers as though he had seen something divine, till a Cossack bundled him back into the crowd."

of SCOTT'S Emulsion in the baby's bottle every time it is fed will be most surprising in its effect. You have no idea what it will do for them. It seems to be just the element that is lacking in their food, and they thrive on it the same as delicate children of a larger growth do. Although it is not properly a baby's food, YET IT IS A FOOD VERY BENEFICIAL TO BABIES AND CHILDREN.

IS HOPE GONE?

Are You in the Grip of Nervous Troubles?

Read the Wonderful Cure Wrought by Dr. Charcot's Kola Nervine Tablets,

In the Case of a Lady Who Was Ill For Years and Was Ready to Despair.

Onalaska, Wis., Oct. 4, 1895.—Gentlemen: For ten years I have been the suffering victim of nervous prostration and nervous dyspepsia. I cannot begin to tell you or remember the remedies I have taken or the prescriptions I have tried. Take what I would I grew worse instead of better and was well nigh discouraged. Then came the grateful change. One month ago—on the advice of my brother, who sent me a box—I commenced taking Dr. Charcot's Kola Nervine Tablets. I have taken one box and gained five pounds. But that is nothing compared to the physical relief I have experienced. I am better and happier than I have been for five years. If I could make the recommendation stronger I would gladly do so.

Yours gratefully, Mrs. Lulu Gleason.

We have hundreds of letters from grateful women similarly restored to health, hope and happiness. This great remedy is not a cure-all, but for nervous diseases and all their kindred is infallible. Convince yourself by a trial.

To Explore the Lands.

S. P. Hovey, of Detroit, Mich., is in the city, accompanied by his engineer, H. L. Phillips, of St. Paul, and they will start soon for the Gun Flint Lake country. Mr. Hovey represents a syndicate which has acquired options on a large amount of the mineral land in the country up there and around Grand Marais. The lands are to be explored. There have been all sorts of rumors in connection with the operations in that country. Some reports say that nickel has been discovered and is to be prospected for. The plans of the people who have the options are said to provide for building a railroad into the country.

REPORTS

Presbyterians at Saratoga Heard a Number of Annual Reports.

Dr. Withrow, the Newly Elected Moderator, Appointed Standing Committees.

A Change Recommended Regarding Deacons in the Church Constitution.

Saratoga, N. Y., May 22.—The second day's session of the Presbyterian general assembly was opened with devotional exercises led by Rev. George D. Lindsay, of Galena, Ill. The business of the day consisted in the reception of the reports of the special committees appointed in 1895. Some standing committees were announced by the moderator as follows:

Bills and overtures, ex-Moderator Dr. Robert R. Booth, of New York; judicial business, Dr. Francis C. Monfort, of Cincinnati, who was interested in a case that was to come before this committee; church policy, Dr. John R. Davies, of New York; home missions, Dr. William P. Kane, of Bloomington; foreign missions, Dr. Benjamin C. Henry, of Canton, China; education, Dr. Everett N. E. Thompson, of Crawfordsville, Ind.; church erection, Dr. William F. Jenkins, of Mont Clair, N. J.; theological seminaries, Dr. David R. Breed, of Pittsburg; ministerial relief, Dr. George B. Stewart, of Harrisburg; aid for colleges, Dr. Thomas F. Cleland, of Duluth; and benevolence, Rev. Henry G. Smith, the newly elected professor of the theological seminary at Cincinnati, Ohio. Other committees were promised for Monday.

The report of the committee on denominational missionary periodicals was made by Dr. McIntosh, of Philadelphia. It showed successful operation during the year, in spite of a slight decrease in circulation. An outline of a Christian training course for young people's societies was proposed on behalf of the periodicals, and after some discussion was adopted.

Dr. John Fox, of Brooklyn, reported on the temporalities of the church, recommending a change in the constitution of the church in regard to the office of deacon, and suggested that the property of the churches be committed to the board of deacons when possible.

Upon account of a point of law contained in the report on temporalities, it was continued, and made a special order for tomorrow morning. Special reports on new editions of the constitution of the church and of the digest of the deliberations of the assembly were made by the stated clerk, Dr. Roberts.

The final report of the morning called forth a warm discussion. It related to Sabbath observance, and was presented by Elder William R. Morrell, of New York. The report denounced all work on Sunday; various theories of individual liberty, excursions, ball games, bicycle riding, lax views of the Sabbath, social entertainment, and the Sunday newspaper. Christian people were scored for their lax observance of Sunday.

The resolutions, which were adopted, reaffirmed former deliberations as to the perpetual binding obligation of the Sabbath. They also commended the efforts made in Sunday schools and young people's societies for the better observance of the Sabbath, appointed a Sunday in October as a day for the special consideration of the subject, and commended the work of the American Sabbath union and its auxiliaries.

Elder L. H. Main, of Kearney, Neb., introduced a resolution expressing "lack of sympathy with the criminal prosecution of those persons who honestly and conscientiously observe the seventh day of the week, instead of the first," but he met with opposition and his motion was tabled.

The final address of the morning session was delivered, on invitation of the assembly, by Dr. Martin Kneeland, of the Boston Sabbath Observance committee, on the work of his association. The docket for this afternoon's session contains three subjects upon which reports are expected. They are as follows: On Polygamous converts in India; on young peoples' societies and their relation to the church and on the conference with the theological seminaries.

DEAD FROM WORRY.

Cleveland, May 22.—Word has just been received here of the death of Henry W. Childs at Washington this morning. Mr. Childs was senior member of the late firm of Childs, Groff & Co., whose failure three months ago caused such a profound sensation. It is believed that death was caused by worry arising from the failure of the firm. Childs, Groff & Co. were extensive wholesale boot and shoe dealers, and their failure was due to the embezzlement of a junior member of the firm.

HOLT WILL CASE.

Mrs. Briggs Gives Some Significant Evidence.

Washington, May 22.—The relations of the Throckmortons to the late Judge Advocate General Holt were threshed over at length in the Holt will case today. Some significant evidence was adduced. Mrs. Emily E. Briggs, a newspaper writer, testified that Judge Holt had informed her he had left his affairs in the care of Washington Holt, a nephew and one of the heirs at law. The admission of Mrs. Briggs' testimony yesterday afternoon regarding the strained relations of the families was the keynote of a series of objections made today by the beneficiaries' counsel, but the objections generally were overruled by Judge Bradley.

Mrs. Briggs testified that in 1881, while conversing with the late judge advocate general, she asked him as to the health and whereabouts of the Throckmortons. "Judge Holt," she said "turned about as if angry and said, 'I don't know the Throckmortons.' Again, at a White House reception, where I had gone with Judge Holt, Maj. Throckmorton came up and shook my hand. Then he offered his hand to Judge Holt. The latter refused to recognize him and turned his back on him with an air that frightened me. About the time of the Tilden will contest," Mrs. Briggs continued, "while discussing the subject of wills generally, Judge Holt told me if I had any property I had better dispose of it before my death. As for myself, he added, my nephew, my brother's son, will take care of my affairs, and I am sure it will be well done. He said something about Washington, though I did not know whom he meant."

Despite objections of the beneficiaries' counsel, the court ruled this evidence was admissible in view of the mysterious feature surrounding the documents. A deposition was read from Mrs. B. L. Ricketts, of California, setting out that about three years after the date of the alleged will, 1873, and again at a reception given by Secretary Blaine, she heard Judge Holt express the bitterest feeling towards the elder Mrs. Throckmorton.

PORTLAND CHOSEN.

Methodists Make That an Episcopal See City.

Cleveland, May 22.—A struggle for the location of an episcopal residence in the Northwest marked the opening of the Methodist conference today. The location as recommended by the committee was Portland, Ore. The friends of a foreign residence desired to amend by substituting Shanghai, while Tacoma was named also. After much discussion the recommendation for both Shanghai and Tacoma were laid on the table and Portland was named. This completed the list.

For secretary of the Sunday School and Tract society but one ballot was required. Those nominated were Dr. J. S. Hurlbut, former secretary; J. C. W. Cox, of Ohio; G. J. Stearns, of West Texas, and O. S. Richtel, of New Hampshire. Dr. W. N. Brodbeck was nominated, but withdrew. On the first ballot Dr. Hurlburt received 276 out of 413 votes cast, thus re-electing him.

But one ballot was necessary to elect a secretary of the board of education. Those nominated were Dr. Charles H. Payne, the present incumbent; George H. Bridgman, of Minnesota; C. C. Lashy, of Nebraska, and W. N. Brodbeck, of New England. All promptly withdrew their names, except Payne, and he received all the votes, 367 in number.

The manner in which bishops should be assigned to cities was the cause of a great deal of argument. The committee reported in favor of the bishops selecting their residences in the order of their election, but a bishop who desired to continue in any specified place was to have the right to so remain. Many were the arguments made for and against the latter portion of the report. Various motions to amend were lost, and finally Dr. Kynett proposed a substitute by which the conference should assign the bishops to their residence. By this plan the conference took entire control in its own hands and left the bishops out in the cold. It has been a much-disputed question and the debate was spirited. The test on the motion to lay the substitute on the table prevailed by a vote of 229 yeas to 199 nays. The report as submitted was adopted.

The election of editor of the Methodist Review was short and brief. Dr. W. F. Kelly, who has served as editor for some time, was renominated, and was elected on the first ballot by receiving 265 votes out of 445 cast. The remarkable popularity of Dr. J. M. Buckley was shown when nominations for editor of the Christian Advocate were called for. The only name presented was that of Dr. J. M. Buckley, the present editor. Three attempts to suspend the rule and nominate him by acclamation failed, by reason of Dr. Buckley's protesting against such action. When it was announced that Dr. Buckley had received 414 out of the 440 votes cast, the applause was deafening. From all parts of the hall came cries for Buckley and he finally rose where he was sitting. Shouts of "take the platform," arose, but Dr. Buckley shook his head and attempted to speak. His voice was drowned in the applause and for several moments he tried to speek, but was finally forced to take the platform, where he said he construed the vote to mean "leave to print." It was the most remarkable demonstration of the conference.

Ex-Governor Mansur of Vermont presented the report of the committee on arbitration. It was in the form of a memorial to the president of the United States. It set forth the advantages of peace over war, and says that it will be a happy day for the world when all international disputes find peaceful solutions. The committee made no suggestions, but left that to the superior intelligence and wisdom of those in authority.

Asbury Park, N. J., May 22.—The eighty-second anniversary of the American Baptist Missionary union was the order at the Auditorium today. The celebration will continue until tomorrow evening. The appointment of committees, reading of the reports of the executive committee, treasurer, and committee on arrangements concluded this morning's session.

This afternoon the home secretary conducted a "special consideration of the home relations to the work abroad" with prayer and conference. The election of officers will take place later in the day.

Ball Team Has Been Reorganized and Will Play Sunday.

New Duluth Team Has Been Selected as the Victim.

Strong Nine is Said to Have Been Brought Together.

The West Duluth ball team has been reorganized and will play Sunday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, with the New Duluths, at the West Duluth grounds. The batteries will be Burns and Method for the West Duluths and Erickson and Crawford for the New Duluths.

Burns, who will pitch for the West Duluths, is a new man, coming from Stillwater, who is said to be quite a twirler. The old members of the club who will play this season are Kringle, Method and Elliott. Method played in the field last year, but he will, on Sunday, play behind the bat, and if he shows good work will probably be retained in that position. Kringle will take his old position as short stop, and Elliott will again be placed in the box.

The West Duluths have lost some of their best men, and it is doubtful if the new timber in the club will equal the old timers, the best pitcher the club ever had, is in New Duluth, and it is understood that he has decided not to play ball this season. McLaughlan has gone West, and M. Day is now playing with the Duluth team. However, the West Duluths are a pretty fair collection of ball players, and with good management the team should do creditable work the coming season.

A woman never really knows the meaning of happiness and content until she is the mother of a healthy, happy child. The health of the child depends on the health of the mother, both before and after birth. Most all of woman's weakness and particularly the weakness that most strongly influences the health of children, comes from some derangement or disease of the distinctly feminine organs. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will cure all troubles of this nature. It should be taken regularly by every woman during the entire period of gestation. It gives strength to all the organs involved, lessens the pains of childbirth and insures the health of both mother and child.

Mr. Kingsley Here.

Nathan Kingsley, of Austin, is in the city, and Mr. Kingsley is after the nomination on the Republican ticket for attorney general of the state. Four years ago, when Mr. Childs was nominated, Mr. Kingsley was a candidate for the office, and was Mr. Childs' strongest opponent. Two years ago Mr. Kingsley was urged to be a candidate. He declined, because he thought Mr. Childs entitled to renomination. He understood then from a friend of Mr. Childs that the latter would not be a candidate this time and would assist him. Mr. Kingsley says, however, that he never received any such promise from Mr. Childs himself. Mr. Kingsley is a prominent lawyer of the state, having been prosecuting attorney of Filmore county for some time.

Wheat Went Up and Down With the Conflicting Reports Today.

Reports of Insect Damage and the Liverpool Market Still Firm.

The Bears Drew Inspiration From the Lightness of Seaboard Clearances.

There was a rather uncertain situation in wheat today. Reports of insect damage were numerous. But the weather map was decidedly favorable in all respects and very little rain fall was shown, duly started at 61½c against yesterday's close of 61c. It fell off to 60⅝c on liberal selling and reports of heavy crops in Kansas and the Southwest. Then the downward course was checked by the bulls and by noon the market was up to 61½c. The bears were surprised when they found that the Liverpool wheat market was firm and no lower, notwithstanding the decline of 1¾c per bushel in the American markets on the day before. That was a very unkindly cut to the brotherhood of bears in Chicago, who calculate upon always having Liverpool with them, even if Argentine, Australia, India and the rest of the outside world, including Michigan, Ohio and the Red River valley become their enemies. Besides the firmness of the Liverpool market the mail brought an endless number of letters from different parts of the country reporting crop damage more or less serious. Towards the close, however, the bears paraded the market and forced the price down to 60⅞c.

The Minneapolis and Duluth receipts were 295 cars against 274 a week ago and 277 last year. The Chicago receipts were 5 cars and shipments 54,543 bus. The seaboard clearances were surprisingly and encouragingly light, amounting to only 67,000 bus of wheat and 4500 barrels of flour. That was the principal source of the bears' inspiration. New York wired early in the day better inquiry for the United Kingdom and look for business to be done during the day. The Modern Miller had a crop summary for the week fully confirming the private reports of crop damage which have been so plentiful and so generally doubted. The feature of the Duluth trading was the further gains of ¼c by September which is now ½c over July. The mills bought 50,000 bus to arrive at ¼c under July and the shippers took a similar amount at ⅛c under July. The close was unchanged, except December, which advanced ¼c. Following were the closing prices:

Wheat—No. 1 hard, cash, 61¾c; May, 61¾c; July, 62½c. No. 1 northern, cash, 60¾c; May, 60¾c; June, 60¾c; July, 61c bid; September, 61½c. No. 2 northern, cash, 57¾@58¼c. No. 3, 56@57c. GOSSIP.

Chicago, May 21.—The wheat market to-Received over private wire of B. E. Baker, grain and stock broker, room 107 Chamber of Commerce and 307 Board of Trade. Chicago, May 22.—A slightly higher opening in wheat was followed by a decline which brought out another lot of long wheat. In the absence of outside buying a few pit traders tried to bull the market but every time it got up around the opening price it was deluged with wheat. The close was at about the lowest point and the feeling grows weaker as the market declines. Liverpool seems to be making an effort to hold their prices up but our two days' break will probably bring a response tomorrow. Crop news was not so plentiful today but what came was possibly a little more hopeful as regards the growing crop. There is little in the situation that is new. Stocks of wheat are now piling up at the seaboard and but little disposition is shown to move them out.

Corn and oats had but a moderate trade with slightly easier feeling but the price is so low that the market yields slowly.

Provisions excited and lower, some buying of lard early, but the bear pressure was on pork and each fraction decline induced free selling on stop loss orders.

Puts, July wheat, 60¾@61c.

A RISE IN COPPER.

New York, May 22.—A private London cablegram made public by a Wall street bureau says: "The rise in copper is caused by consumers and the public finding consumption exceeding production. While supplies are offered freely, speculators absorb them readily. There is more demand for refined copper for India and elsewhere. A contract has been placed for the French Pacific cable which requires 900 tons of copper wire. American electrolitic copper has been repurchased owing to reduced output in American mines."

REGULATIONS NEEDED.

Some Talk Favoring a Plumbing Ordinance.

Several complaints have been made to the building inspector of the improper sewer connections made by inefficient, or possibly dishonest plumbers.

An investigation of a case of this kind by the inspector today disclosed the fact that a sewer connection had been made without a trap. The ordor that filled the house was sickening, and had been at first attributed to decaying offal in the meat market on the first floor. It was only after a survey by the inspector that it was discovered that the most important feature of the connection, the trap, had been omitted by the plumber who had done the work.

This and similar incidents have directed the attention of some of the members of the council to the fact that the city ordinances do not afford citizens adequate protection against botch work and dishonest practices in the all important matter of guarding their homes against the invasion of disease that follows on imperfect methods, and the use of faulty apparatus in carrying off water. Duluth, it is said, is the only city of its size in the country, having no regulation insuring the fitness of those who engage in the plumbing business and of the material used. So generally recognized is the unfitness of what is known as "standard" pipe, for instance, that its use is forbidden by many cities. This pipe is made of old stove castings, and similar material. It is brittle and very liable to fracture, and is not suitable for house plumbing.

In the matter of traps, too, St. Paul and Minneapolis set this city a good example in a provision of their ordinances requiring that each fixture should be separately trapped. Here, there is nothing to prevent half a dozen fixtures being attached to the same trap, and a rat trap at that, or anything that comes handy. There are provisions in their ordinances, also, regulating the weight of pipe and the character of the fittings, as well as for the water and air tests to be made in the presence of the inspector on the completion of the work. Examinations as to the skill in the trade are provided for, a certificate of fitness from some competent authority, usually a plumbing inspector, being required before the business can be engaged in. Of all these safeguards, say those familiar with the subject, Duluth stands in need.

GETTING DESPERATE.

The St. Paul Dispatch, one of the chief buglers of the Merriam-Clough-Bixby machine, has detailed one of its staff to manufacture political yarns in order to help out Mr. Clough's waning for tunes in the Sixth district. It contained the following yesterday: "The story is that the anti-Towne men are trying to draw the congressman into the support of Lee, knowing that Lee has little or no chance of winning out at the state convention. Once they have Towne on their side, they will herald the fact from one end of the state to the other. In this way they will have Towne antagonize the friends of Clough throughout the district so strongly that the defeat of Towne would be certain. Then O. D. Kinney will step in and demand that he be made Towne's successor."

This is really laughable, in view of the well known fact that every man in St. Louis county who is actively supporting Clough, outside of a few officeholders, is known to be a political opponent of Mr. Towne and ready to knife him at any time. Of course, these men profess friendship for Mr. Towne now and are pleading that they are supporting Mr. Clough in the interest of Mr. Towne, but the rank and file of the Republican party here are not misled by their hypocritical talk. They know that the effect of a victory for Clough would be to once more place the Minnesota Iron company in the saddle and thus destroy the fruits of the victory gained by the friends of Mr. Towne two years ago.

The Dispatch's reference to Mr. Kinney's attitude is a gratuitous insult. Mr. Kinney is a warm admirer of Mr. Lee and supports him because he considers him the best candidate in the field and because he believes it is the duty of St. Louis county Republicans to work in harmony with the rest of the district. Nor has Mr. Towne any truer friend than Mr. Kinney, who has repeatedly stated that in his opinion it would be a misfortune should Mr. Towne not be renominated, in view of the position of influence he has attained in congress. Mr. Kinney would not consider for one moment the idea of accepting the nomination instead of Mr. Towne, and he is now doing all in his power to secure Mr. Towne's renomination by acclamation at St. Cloud. This dirty attack on Mr. Kinney's motives is inspired by the Merriam-Bixby-Clough machine, which fear his influence and seeks to discredit him. The machine is certainly getting desperate when it resorts to such despicable tactics. Impending defeat has made it reckless.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

A Washington correspondent asserts that there is no doubt but that President Cleveland has fully made up his mind to veto the river and harbor appropriation bill in any shape, and it is stated by those who claim to know that he has already prepared his veto message, which only awaits the finishing touches as to details. It is also asserted that he will employ vigorous language in denunciation of the extravagances of the bill and reflect severely upon the disposition manifested by congress in other directions to incur immense outlays without the slightest reference to the ability of the treasury to met them.

It is pleasing to learn, however, that the supporters of the bill are confident that they are strong enough in both house and senate to pass the bill over the veto, and meantime they are exceedingly anxious to secure concurrence of the report of the conference committee, pass the bill and send it to the president so as to insure a veto and action upon it without the ten days' constitutional period prior to adjournment. The bill, as reported from conference, provides a total immediate appropriation of $12,561,350, as against $12,752,350 as it passed the senate and $10,453,860 as it passed the house. It provides as it came from conference, for ultimate appropriations under the continuing contract system of $56,357,308. As it passed the house it carries under this system $51,721,210, and as it passed the senate $60,473,121.

THE SATURDAY HERALD.

Bright, crisp and sparkling are the special articles for The Saturday Herald tomorrow. Ever progressive, there will be a decided improvement in all the departments of the popular Saturday editon tomorrow, while a large number of specially attractive features will be proseuted for the amusement and instruction of its many readers. Queen Victoria, whose birthday anniversary falls on Sunday, is now nearing the eighties, and her feeble health creates fear that she will not see another May, and there is a gossipy article, accompanied by a picture of the queen, taken this year.

The handsome MacMonnies monument erected at West Poin: to the memory of regular soldiers who fell in the civil war will form the subject of a sketch, with illustrations.

Few people are aware that Archbishop Ireland, of St. Paul, has lost nearly all the immense fortune which he had accumulated. The Herald will tell all about it tomorrow.

It is hardly necessary to say that the bicycle, dramatic, sporting, labor and social pages will be complete in every particular, or to call special attention to the column devoted to the National Guard, the department of science and invention and all the other attractive features always found in The Saturday Herald.

The ladies will find much to interest them in Agate's column "Across the Tea Table," and in "The Gossiper," by the Up-to-Date Girl, while they will be charmed with the splendid fashion page, adorned with beautiful illustrations of the latest designs in gowns and hats. In fact, all classes will find something in The Saturday Herald tomorrow to please and instruct them.

A correspondent writes: "Will The Herald please explain why Representative J. M. Smith, who claims to be friendly to Mr. Towne, is supporting Dave Clough for governor, when Mr. Towne's interests demand that his friends should support Mr. Lee?" The answer to this query is very simple. As reward for his vote and services in the senatorial contest, Governor Clough promised that Mr. Smith should be made chief deputy grain inspector at Duluth. The supreme court's decision prevented the appointment. Mr. Smith's term in the legislature expires next January. Then he will be eligible for grain inspector, and he probably wants Clough re-elected so that the latter may redeem his promise.

The Elk River Star-News is very much excited. It says: "We understand an effort is being made to shove a free silver plank down the throats of the Sixth district Republicans regardless of what the national platform may be. Supposing the national convention adopts a sound money platform and the Sixth district a free silver platform, what kind of a campaign will Republican newspapers in this district conduct?" Well, that certainly would be a perplexing position for The Herald's Republican contemporaries, but they managed to worry through the campaign when Mr. Comstock ran the last time for congress and when the national and district tariff planks were radically different. The Star-News survived that horrible experience.

It has been figured out by a Spanish paper that in the event of this country becoming engaged in war with Spain, the Southern states would remain neutral and the republic would be dismembered. The Spanish paper is evidently very ignorant of the state of feeling in the South. The people of that section of the country would be found fighting side by side with their Northern brethren.

The political young man of the St. Paul Dispatch is evidently envious of the place of Ananias in history. At least his false statements about matters in the Sixth district create that impression.

Support of Mr. Lee's candidacy strikes a blow at the Merriam machine and also paves the way for Mr. Towne's renomination by acclamation. These two reasons should be sufficient for every Republican in this county.

For all the news as well as the best special articles, read The Saturday Herald tomorrow.

The only supporters of Clough in this county are the state pap suckers and a few friends.

St. Louis county Republicans will not support the Merriam-Clough-Bixby machine.

BILL MERRIAM'S GAME.

This year Merriam is playing directly for the highest stake which this state has to offer, a seat in the senate of the United States for himself, says the Minneapolis Journal. The stake being a large one, the plans to secure it have been laid on a corresponding large scale. There is nothing small about Merriam or his methods. He easily adapts himself to political conditions, and in his own superb way is a diplomat of the Machiavellian pattern. I give him full credit for the admirable personal traits which make him such a delightful companion; for the splendid power of mind and tireless energy which have made him a figure of magnificent strength in the business world; for the thorough knowledge of men, which has stood him in such good stead in politics and contributed in part to his wonderful success as a public man—but while doing this, I express the deliberate opinion that he is the most dangerous man who ever crossed the path of the Republican party in this state, and that the party will never be in position again to command the support and esteem of intelligent and law-loving men until Merriam and Merriamism are of the past and forgotten.

Merriam has made himself a man of consequence in Ohio, and with McKinley as president will have much to say in the dispensing of federal patronage in Minnesota; he wants Tams Bixby, who stands closer to him than any man in Minnesota, to succeed R. G. Evans as the Minnesota member of the Republican national committee; to these sources of power and authority he wants to add the control of the state machinery, through the governor—all to the end that his path to the senate in two years may be smooth and strewn with flowers.

To bring about this no stone is being left unturned. It has been common talk over the state for months that federal patronage was being promised right and left in return for help for Clough—patronage which Merriam does not yet control; state appointments and favors through the governor's office are understood to be on the market in the same way; employes in the different departments under the governor are at work over the state for Clough, with a zeal worthy a better cause, and the chairman of the state central committee, who is devoting all of his time to Mr. Clough's candidacy, and giving that candidacy the exclusive benefit of information which it has taken the Republican party as a whole many years and cost much money to collect.

It is not difficult to understand why Merriam wants to name the next governor of the state, and why failure here will weaken him in possibly a vital point. Thousands of Minnesota people know how largely the employes of the various state departments contributed to the results in the Davis and Nelson senatorial campaigns; know how strong a pull these men have upon the legislature and how persistently they haunt the lobbies whenever measures are pending in which they are told to interest themselves. No lobby in the state so effectively influences legislation as the lobby made up of men whose names are on the pay-rolls of the state in various subordinate capacities. Their ability along this line explains why they are in office. Every man of them is an expert politician and knows his business thoroughly. Indifferent services would many times be accepted by the state if by this plan the machine might the better avail itself of concurrent political skill.

When Merriam became governor he filled these positions, whose number is almost legion, with men after his own heart; I need not say that the administration which followed Merriam inaugurated no change in this respect. The same old men were retained, save as changes would occur in the natural course of events, and the executive employes are today men in every way as useful and as acceptable to the machine as those whom Mr. Merriam installed. There has not been a house cleaning at the state house, in any appointive place controlled directly or indirectly by the executive, since the days of Merriam's first term; and this rule applies to many of the higher places as well as to the lower.

The Republican party in Minnesota has too much at stake this year to go into the coming fight without a thorough understanding of who the enemy is and what his strong and weak points are. Nothing pleases Merriam more than to create false issues and keep the public off the true scent. He wants the fight against Clough to be a personal one, knowing that in this way Clough will gather strength through sympathy. He wants the public to think what it pleases, so long as it does not find out his scheme and uncover it. If the rank and file of the party can be made this year to take an intelligent interest in this important matter, the result will not be uncertain, and the state will be rid forever of the political methods which have come to make Merriam's name a synonym for political trickery wherever it is known.

A BUSINESS PROPOSITION.

Grand Rapids Magnet: The opposition to the renomination of Mr. Towne will come from the gold monometallists and they are so much in the minority in the district that they cannot accomplish the defeat of the present able representative. Independent of Mr. Towne's views on the financial question, it is admitted that he is the most able representative the district ever had. This, then, being a fact, what can be accomplished by defeating his renomination? If the district expects to obtain what it requires and what it is entitled to from the general government, it becomes a business proposition to renominate Mr. Towne, so that he may be enabled to continue the work he has been so successful in during his short sojourn in congress.

AND HE WILL NOT.

Fergus Falls Journal: It is quite apparent that the Clough forces are going to have the cheek to try to take Otter Tail county away from Moses E. Clapp. If Gen. Clapp can't carry his own county we will take the responsibility of retiring him from the race. He can't be nominated with his home county against him. It is not thought that Clough can be.

THE NAPOLEON CRAZE.

Washington Star: Mr. Hanna is rapidly creating the impression that the first election of the Napoleonic craze was a mere bagatelle to the one which he is now bringing to public notice.

NOTICE TO ST. LOUIS.

Detroit Tribune: However, the citizens of St. Louis will do well to make provision for a last ditch or two, in case of an emergency.

MORTON'S LIBERALITY.

Chicago Dispatch: It is costing Governor Morton $1200 a week to prove that this is a McKinley year.

THE IRON ORE TAX.

Minneapolis Journal: Possibly the feeling throughout the state in this matter would be less strongly in favor of a change were these companies not universally regarded as filching from the commonwealth one of its chief resources in future-giving wealth, and carrying it away for the benefit of the manufacturing centers of the East. In other words, had they manifested a desire for the upbuilding in this state of an iron and steel manufacturing industry, under which the millions upon millions of dollars now spent in reducing the ore to finished forms, inured to the benefit in the slightest degree of Minnesota, instead of to its rivals, this law, which was designed in part to aid in this very growth of local manufacturing, might now be regarded as a deserving portion of the statutes, and its legal status be not too closely probed. It is hard to say just what the mining companies might have done in the way of such an extension of their business, but the fact remains that they have never sought to see, and at this time the mines of Minnesota are more intimately connected with great aggregations of manufacturing capital in the East than are those of any other iron ore state or district on the globe. This insures the mining and shipment of our ore, but it also throws a barrier of the most adamantine character in the way of the local iron and steel manufacturing competition, and helps, in no small degree, to nullify the chief argument for the passage of the law in question, and the only possible argument, outside the question of constitutionality, for its continuance.

Minneapolis Tribune: The 1-cent-a-ton law has worked hardship to counties and municipalities in which the iron lands are situated, especially as it affects those lands from which little ore has been raised. For instance, the owner of a 160-acre tract might mine a small quantity of ore each year and escape with a small tax—and in any event the ore tax goes into the state treasury and leaves the local treasuries in the lurch. The opinion of the attorney general is an able one, and appears to be conclusive. The county and municipal organizations are sometimes obliged to incur large expense to protect mining property and maintain the peace of the community. It is only fair that the mine owners should pay their share of the cost of local government, and pay upon a fair cash valuation of their properties.

St. Paul Globe: There has been no shadow of a doubt in the mind of any lawyer during all the fifteen years since that piece of paternal jobbery, the iron mining tax, was enacted, that it was a gross, indefensible violation of a plain, comprehensible provision of the constitution of the state. It was a job in its inception, worked through a congenial Republican legislature by the persuasive arguments of Charlemagne Tower, who recently died and bequeathed to his heirs an estate of $20,000,000, a large portion of which was the taxes of which the state has been cheated by its complacent legislators. He pleaded poverty then, and the same poverty afflicted the millionaire owners of these mines when, in 1883, an effort was made to increase this oppressive tax of 1 cent a ton to 3.

THE DAKOTAS.

NORTH DAKOTA.

About seventy-five invited guests from Wahpeton witnessed the marriage ceremony of one of Wahpeton's estimable young ladies, Miss Mamie Amelia Keith, of this city, to Arthur A. Bentley, of Fargo, N. D., both well known in Wahpeton society. The bride has grown up from childhood in this city and is highly respected for her accomplishments, her beauty and modest yet happy disposition. The groom came to Wahpeton four years ago to attend the Red River Valley university with a view of preparing for the ministry, but being thrown upon his own resources with which to acquire an education and provide for himself his plans were frustrated somewhat and he sought other methods of livelihood. Having spent two years at the university he closed his school days and learned the art of photography, and for the past year has been located in Fargo, where he has one of the largest art studios in the city.

Andrew Anderson, an unmarried man, committed suicide at the residence of his brother last Friday near Towner. Anderson was found by one of the neighbors, sitting on the edge of a bed, with a shotgun resting on the ground, the muzzle in his mouth, and the whole head, from the upper lip, blown off, the brains being scattered all over the room. Anderson had quarreled with his brother's wife. He then went to town, got a couple of gallons of whisky and two gallons of hard cider, and came home carrying the shotgun behind him. He then had an altercation with his brother. He frightened his brother away, and was found some time afterwards by the neighbors.

Robert Coyle and James O'Malley were today sentenced to a year each in the state penitentiary at Bismarck for attempting to escape from that institution. They, in company with twenty other convicts, made a break for liberty while at work outside the prison, only one escaping, and the rest have been tried and sentenced to from one to four years each as soon as their terms have expired.

Judge McConnell has rendered his decision in the divorce case of Herman Toaspern vs. Lolla Toaspern at Fargo. He refused a decree to the husband and granted it to the wife, with $200 attorney fees and $7 per week for support of the child. Toaspern is an art lithographer of Brooklyn, employed on Puck, Judge and Truth. The case against Sheriff McCabe by the county commissioners of Putnam county, was dismissed at Paulina, the sheriff paying $1000 excessive fees, which the commissioners claimed he collected.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

The magnitude of the interests involved near Pierre, in the annual spring roundup of the Missouri river ranges, which started Wednesday are hardly appreciated by those who see the transactions of the stock industry carried on day by day, and much less so by those who are not in a position to note the work as it is carried on.

The number of cattle which will be handled by the roundup this year is not less than 200,000 head. These cattle have been wandering at will over the range the past winter and the work of the roundup will be to separate the brands of different owners and to brand the calves running with the stock. To look up all of these cattle it will be necessary to ride over a section of country covering, approximately, 12,000 square miles, a section larger than many of the Eastern states. Each roundup party is assigned to a certain district which will be thoroughly gone over, every range of hills and ravine being "ridden" to see that all the cattle are found.

Rev. J. Robinson, Episcopal minister at Sisseton agency, brings the sad news to Wilmot that since the government has refused the Indians part of the money due them, and the stores not being able to credit them any longer, there is untold suffering among them for want of something to eat, especially among the aged Indians, and that Wo-wi-Mnaka, an old Indian, and one who was faithful to the whites in the massacre of 1862, has just died of starvation. Many more are sick and not expected to live, and great excitement prevails. Unless something is done trouble is feared, as the Indians will not submit to this treatment as long as the money is due them.

The twenty-sixth annual meeting of the General Association of Congregational Churches of Dakota is in session at Pierre. About 100 delegates are present, and the convention will continue to Sunday night. A number of questions will be discussed and the handling of the prohibitory question is given a prominent place.

Cashier Koetting was convicted on this charge and sent to prison for five years.

BELOW PAR.

Mazeppa Tribune: From all over the state comes news of the desire of the public to see Clough beaten for the gubernatorial nomination. Clough stock is now quoted below par.

TO HOLD THEIR JOBS.

Redwood Gazette: Every appointee under the state machine is expected to rustle from now until the state convention, or immediately resign their job. Every one of the number will be held accountable for their respective county or ward, and if it does not come up for Clough for governor something will be heard to drop.

SPECIE RATES ADVANCED.

New York, May 22.—The Compagnie Generale Trans-Atlantique has advanced the freight rates on specie ½ per cent on lots of $500,000 or over on either gold or silver. On gold the new rate is 5-32 per cent on lots of $250,000 up to $500,000, and on lots of $250,000 to $500,000 the rate is 11-64 per cent. At the office of the company in this city no explanation of the advance could be obtained, but it is suggested that probably the home office has been notified of a higher railway rate on specie from Havre to Paris.

MAY FESTIVAL.

Big Crowds Attend the Cincinnati Events.

Cincinnati, May 22.—There is no diminution of interest in the concerts of the May Festival association. The social eclat has been heightened by the unheralded presence of ex-President Harrison and his bride. They were naturally the center of attraction, but they were not strangers. Mr. Harrison's ancestral home is in the suburbs, and Mrs. Harrison's mother spent the greater part of her life near Cincinnati.

The managers of the festival are proud of the size and character of their audiences so far, and are especially pleased with the general verdict of delight in the performance of "Samson and Delilah." All the soloists, the orchestra and even the chorus are strongly commended for the work done. Only three more concerts remain, in which two new soloists are to be introduced—Klafsky and Corinne Moory Lawson. The advance sale of seats for these has been very large.

A WORD TO BICYCLISTS.

The Cycle Club Ordinance Committee Appeals.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Kindly allow me, as chairman of ordinance committee of the Duluth Cycle club, to say a few words to the bicycling public. Had this committee had the support it should have had, the amendment to the former ordinance would not have passed. Now that it has passed, it should be enforced to its limits, with nominal fines. This will show you that you do not have the rights you should have. We ask all members of the club to do nothing to antagonize the law, but give this committee the support it should have and overcome the obnoxious points in the proper manner. You should have bells and lanterns, and not ride on sidewalks at all, nor "scorch" in the thickly settled portions of the city. We have written to several large cities for copies of ordinances where, we understand, they allow wheels on sidewalks in the scarcely settled regions, also where streets are in bad condition. We invite all wheelmen to attend a special meeting Monday evening to join our club and give us your support.

Watch the new wheels come to town. One train this morning brought ten new ones. All these wheels are not owned by "kids" and senseless boys. We think we can bring pressure to bear that will grant us a few sidewalks in the suburbs, such as Park Point, east of Lester river, and towards Woodland, Proctorknott and Second Lake, where streets are in bad condition. There is reason in all things, and our aldermen will listen to reason if presented in the proper manner.

Excursion to Fond du Lac.

The finest summer resort in the Northwest will be formally opened at Fond du Lac on Sunday, May 24, 1896, and will continue open during the entire season. This resort is located on the famous Nekuk island, where many an Indian council took place in time of the war of the Chippewas with other tribes. It was selected by the Indians on account of its natural surroundings where they could be in peace and happiness, just what the people need for a day's rest from their business cares. Every arrangement will be made, so that every person visiting this resort will enjoy themselves. Trains will leave Union depot at Duluth as follows: 9:30 a. m. and 2:30 p. m., and will return at 5:40 p. m. and 9:30 p. m. Free lunch all day; dancing pavilion free.

A BAD MIXUP.

Phaeton Smashed in a Runaway Yesterday Afternoon.

Four men, two horses, a buggy and a phaeton were piled up at the corner of First street and Third avenue west sherily after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The men and horses were unraveled by the bystanders, and it developed that they had escaped without a scratch, but the phaeton resembled a wood pile that had been struck by lightning.

H. A. Hamblin, a blacksmith doing business in the rear of 315 West First street, with an employe, was driving down Third avenue west, when, at Second street, the horse took fright at a flying piece of paper and dashed down the avenue at a break-neck rate. Along First street, in front of the Board of Trade building, in blissful unconsciousness of the cyclone that was coming, jogged two young men in a phaeton. The latter had just driven into town, and although they were prepared for stirring scenes, what followed exceeded all their anticipations. As they reached the corner Hamblin's horse, which had just got good headway on, appeared running like a scared jack rabbit, and with a leap that lifted the buggy from the ground attempted to clamber over the phaeton. As the collision occurred Hamblin and his companion, who had jumped and were in the air, descended on the already badly mixed up mess, and a grand kaleidoscopic view was presented.

After the matinee and the participants had been straightened out, the wreck of the phaeton was gathered together and stacked up at Lerch's stable.

WRIGHT WAS TIRED.

Wanted to Get Away From the Rock Pile.

A member of the county's rock pile staff, named Wright, made a desperate break for liberty today. Mr. Wright was attached to the staff by order of Judge Edson, the cause of his being in durance being an untamed appetite for whisky.

Mr. Wright wearied of the dull monotony of a life where three meals a day and lodging are a sure thing. He longed for the excitement of the pursuit of the "hand-out" and free lunch, the exhilaration of being a freebooter for bed and board. Accordingly, as the rock pile contingent passed into the shed where they perform their labors, Mr. Wright darted off, with Officer McManus in close pursuit. Across a vacant lot and up an alley sped the two until Seventh avenue east was reached, when Mr. Wright's wind gave out and he was led ingloriously back to captivity. The dungeon and bread and water will be Mr. Wright's lot for a space.

CREWS

Duluth Boat Club Will Be Well Represented This Year.

Makeup of the Eight Who Will Row Against the Minnesotas.

Senior and Junior Four-Oared Crews Have Been Picked.

The crews of the Duluth Boat club are actively at work and from now to the time of the regatta will be in hard training. For the first time Duluth bids fair to have a fine representation in all the classes. An eight-oared crew, and senior and junior four-oared crews are to be sent down and it is more than probable that a double and one or two singles will be entered. Tomorrow morning the eight-oared crew which will row the Minnesota eight at the opening of the Hotel Lafayette at Minnetonka on June 27, will get together and work in earnest. Six of the boys are sleeping at the house and the balance of the several crews will all be there by Monday. The time for getting in shape is short, but the boys can do it nicely.

The eight-oared crew is made up as follows, and this, by the way, is not as given in the morning paper: Calhoun, stroke; Mac Thompson, 7; George Gibson, 6; Sid McPhail, 5; Murray Peyton, 4; Julius Barnes, 3; Clint McCormick, 2; Frank Thompson, bow. The coxswain is not yet selected. This is a fine crew and every one of them have rowed for several seasons. They will not fail to make a good showing.

The senior crew will be made up of two men from the winners last year and two from the year before. They are: Calhoun, stroke; Mac Thompson, 3; George Gibson, 2; Sid McPhail, bow.

The junior crew is expected to be as follows: Emil Meinhardt, T. J. McKeon, W. Stewart and Frank Thompson. All are strong and active young men and Duluth with them will undoubtedly carry off the junior prize for the third time.

ATTENTION, MACCABEES!

A School of Instruction will be held at Odd Fellows Hall, Lake ave., north, Friday evening, May 22, under the direction of Hon. D. P. Markey, Supreme Commander.

All members of the Order are requested to be present. A large class of candidates is to be admitted.

School Board Contract.

Contracts for improvements and repairs in school buildings and grounds have been let by the school board as follows: Building retaining walls for the Washington school grounds, to N. F. Nelson, at $273; sewer at Lester Park school, to E. A. Fitzgerald, at $228; concrete sidewalks on the avenues on the east and west sides of the High School grounds, to Ole Samling, at 25 4-10 cents per lineal foot. For water pipes at the Lester Park school Thompson & Waugh submitted two propositions at $331.50 and $352.50, respectively, which were rejected. Three bids for this work were rejected because no checks were enclosed. The bids were widely divergent in amounts. For retaining walls, the highest bid was $525 and the lowest $273; for sewer at the same building, the highest bid was $402.50 and the lowest $288.

Strikers Gave In.

The striking nailers and packers in the flour mills at Superior gave up their struggle yesterday, after being out a week. They sent a committee of citizens to confer with the mills yesterday, but all the managers would grant was a promise to take back all the old men as there were vacancies for. They absolutely refused to grant a raise. The conditions were accepted and as many of the men as can find places are returning to work.

The Winnipeg's Earnings.

The statement of Receiver Fitch, of the Duluth & Winnipeg railway, for the month of March has been filed in the United States district court. The receipts during the month were $19,342.77 and the disbursements $12,918.78. The amount of cash on hand March 31 was $75,527.65. The net earnings from Oct. 12, 1894, the time of the beginning of the receivership, up to March 31 are $91,649.58.

FOR YOUR PROTECTION.
Catarrh "cures" in liquid form to be taken internally usually contain either mercury or iodide of potassa, or both, which are injurious if too long taken. Catarrh is a local, not a blood disease, caused by sudden change to cold and damp weather. It starts in the nasal passages. Cold in the head causes excessive flow of mucus, and, if repeated, by neglected, the results of catarrh will follow, and oftentimes an offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles, and contains no mercury nor any injurious drug.

THE ROUNDER.

A certain young lady is undergoing considerable teasing at present because of an unpleasant predicament in which she found herself—at least the greater portion of it was unpleasant. She was in one of the churches one morning a few days ago and was playing on the pipe organ and being fond of music the noon hour arrived before she knew it. When she was ready to leave she found that the janitor had locked all the doors. An examination of the windows showed them to be covered with screens. What to do was the question. She wandered around for some time and finally found a small window which was unlocked. Through this she made her escape, but found herself little better off. She was in a yard with a high fence all around it and no way to get out but to climb over.

Now to scale a wire fence encumbered with the present style of ladies' skirt is a feat not easily accomplished and the young lady viewed with dismay the situation which confronted her. She pluckily tackled it, however, but was making poor success. A young man saw her and came to her assistance, very gallantly on his part, you might say, but he was a designing young man and planned to get a reward out of it just the same. He convinced the young lady that the proper thing to do was for him to climb on the fence and she should then clasp her arms around his neck and he would pull her up to the top and land her safely on the other side.

She seized him as directed and he raised her up. As she neared the top that terrible skirt caught in the wire and refused to release itself. There they were, he on the fence and she hanging with both arms clasped round his neck, a veritable "Romeo and Juliet" picture except that instead of the moonlight which they would have much preferred, the sun was shining brightly. The skirts were finally released and she was landed safely, but not until the passers by had enjoyed the scene immensely. Find out who the young man is and ask him if he did also.

Not many days ago a gay party went to a lake not a thousand miles from Duluth on a fishing expedition. They had some fish when they returned, which they claimed to have caught. Also, in order to avoid traveling in the well worn rut of fishing stories, they introduced, as a unique feature, the statement that in addition to the fish they took home they left twenty-five in the boat. While they are under suspicion, still there has been no positive proof as yet of the falsity of their tale. But if they were all as frank as a school teacher in the party, the truth would be out in short order. In talking over the events of the day, this person claimed to have caught a majority of the fish.

"I don't see when you had the time; you sat under a tree and spooned all the while," said another of the band.

"This spoon fishing is often successful," somebody also remarked.

"I should say so—I caught the biggest fish in the lot," said the first person. Even then she might have been safe, but she tried to take it back. And now she can't see how the others could be mean enough to laugh.

FAITH CURE A GOOD THING.

In Some Diseases, But It Is a Failure In Stomach Troubles.

Mere faith will not digest your food for you, will not give you an appetite, will not increase your flesh and strengthen your nerves and heart, but Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will do these things, because they are composed of the elements of digestion, they contain the juices, acids and peptones necessary to the digestion and assimilation of all wholesome food.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest food if placed in a jar or bottle in water heated to ninety-eight degrees, and they will do it much more effectively when taken into the stomach after meals, whether you have faith that they will or not.

They invigorate the stomach, make pure blood and strong nerves, in the only way that nature can do it, and that is, from plenty of wholesome food well digested. It is not what we eat, but what we digest that does us good.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold by nearly all druggists at 50 cents for full sized package, or by mail from the Stuart company, Marshall, Mich.

MR. BURROWS HOME.

He Thinks Sound Money Will Save the People.

M. S. Burrows, who returned yesterday from Chicago, where he made the merchants of the Windy City, who make a few what they call big deals themselves, stare at the big purchase he negotiated of the whole of Kuh, Nathan & Fischer Co. spring and summer stock of suits and pants, says that business is dull in that city.

"Everybody is waiting," said he, "for the outcome of the conventions of the two great parties. When they have announced their respective positions on the financial questions and have named their candidates, business, being given a certain ground on which to tread, will move on. Sound money will save us, and business only needs a little encouragement in the way of settling of conditions to revive. Times are good in England and Germany and the wave will soon reach our shores."

"Well," said Mr. Burrow, with a laugh, in response to a remark about his big purchase, "I guess some of the offete Easterners will make up their minds that we dress in something besides birch bark in the West. It is a big lot, but we have a big market and there will be no trouble about disposing of the line at the prices we will make. I named my own price and we can afford to and will give our customers a bargain."

Coal Men Led it.

"The coal men were the first people to begin the carrying out of the half-holiday idea," said W. C. Sargent today. "A. R. Macfarlane began to agitate it five years ago. The Pioneer Fuel company, the Philadelphia and Reading, myself and others closed up for half the day on Saturday and were the first to do it."

LISBON

Directory Man On Trial in the District Court Today.

Slick Manner in Which the Concern Worked Business Men.

The Signatures Are Admitted But the Contracts Are Denied.

The jury in the Fowler case, for assault with attempt to commit rape, went out early yesterday afternoon, and last evening it came in with a verdict finding James W. Fowler guilty of indecent assault, a lesser offense than for which he was indicted, but still a felony. Fowler has been an undertaker at the West End. He is a married man nearly 50 years of age.

The trial of Samuel D. Lisbon, for uttering a forged instrument, was taken up after the Fowler case was given to the jury yesterday afternoon. The particular count upon which he is being tried is for an advertising contract calling for $15 for an advertisement published in a Chicago business directory for Stryker, Manley & Buck. It was signed by C. W. Buck and he admitted the signature, though he did not admit the contract.

A SLICK SCHEME.

The manner in which the scheme was worked is a clever one, but it is surprising that it caught so many wide awake business men. Last summer the town was thoroughly canvassed by an agent who was soliciting advertisements for the directory before mentioned. It does not appear that many advertisements were secured, but most of the merchants who were approached were perfectly willing to have their names published in the directory free of charge. They were asked to sign papers purporting to contain their written consent to this, and many of them did so.

Later, in the hands of Samuel D. Lisbon, the defendant, these turned up again, but they were in the shape of contracts for paid advertising, and Mr. Lisbon was around for collections. Some of the merchants taken in this way paid up, but while attempting a collection from C. W. Ericson, Lisbon was arrested and is now being tried.

The signatures are all genuine, though the men who made them deny that they attached them to any such instruments as they are now appended to. Lisbon claims to be an innocent party. He will probably not deny that the contracts are fraudulent, but he will deny any such knowledge at the time he began to make the collections.

Lisbon is tall, dark, rather slender, intelligent looking, and he views the progress of the trial coolly and unconcernedly. He is defended by John M. McClintock, of Duluth, and Seymour Stedman, of Chicago. The case was still on trial at noon.

There was no change in the other court rooms. Judge Moer was still hearing the case of Stanislaus Yanka against the Hartford Insurance company, and Judge Ensign was still engaged in the trial of Hare against the Eastern Minnesota at noon.

CITY BRIEFS.

In the municipal court today, M. Persall, Andrew Jackson and Samuel Thompson were each fined $10 and costs for being drunk. The first named was committed to jail in default of payment and the other liquidated.

The police have as yet found no owner for the harness and robes which were in the possession of Henderson and Boice, who were arrested by Detective Troyer yesterday.

A marriage license has been issued to Charles B. Martin and Mary A. Piptoe.

J. E. Cooley has received a large collection of seeds from the agricultural department at Washington, and is anxious that St. Louis county farmers will call on him and get them.

The scow which is in use at the new water plant operations at Lakewood was blown ashore yesterday afternoon and the rocks put several holes in her bottom. She was in tow of the tug Fisk.

The Bucket Upset.

Casper Corsky, a laborer employed at the Ohio coal dock, and residing at First avenue west and Eighth street, was struck by a bucket load of coal which was upset by striking the edge of the hatchway while being lowered into the hold in which he was at work, this morning. He was knocked down and bruised, but was able to walk to the dock from whence he was taken home in the patrol wagon. Dr. Braden, who was called, said he would be around in a few days, unless it should develop that he had sustained internal injuries.

FOR GOLD

Wealthy Englishmen Who Are Investing in the Seine River District.

Formed a Company in London to Develop Kelly-Mosher Property.

Mine Workers' Union Conferring With the Minnesota Iron Company.

Tower, Minn., May 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—A number of wealthy Englishmen have organized in London the Seine River, Ont., Gold Mines company, limited, to develop the Kelly-Mosher property purchased this spring by W. D. Ferguson. The capital stock of the company is $500,000, of which $75,000 is treasury stock, $125,000 of the capital to be subject to call, and the balance said to be paid up. The sum of $125,000 has been placed to the credit of the working capital, and Mr. Ferguson, who is an associate of the Royal School of Mines, has commenced sinking one working shaft and several test pits. The work is proceeding somewhat slowly on account of the scarcity of skilled miners. The average assay on the three principal veins of the property is $28.50 in gold per ton, the veins being true fissures and lying in decomposed granite, and the ore is supposed to be free milling. As soon as the property is in shape to get out ore a mill capable of treating from 80 to 100 tons per day will be erected, and the estimated cost of treating the ore is $5 per ton, which will leave a handsome margin of profit.

Work at the Foley mine has been vigorously pushed all winter, and it is hoped by next fall to have the mine in such shape that a twenty-stamp mill can be kept busy. The ore may be classed as free milling, although it is the intention of the company to put in a cyanide plant to treat the concentrates, which, it is estimated, will contain from 5 to 10 per cent of the value of the ore.

Christie & Knauff, of Fort Frances, have sold to Toronto parties an eighty-acre location on Mud lake, in the Manitou district, for a consideration said to be well up in the thousands.

John Berg, the Rainy Lake merchant and mine owner, left here yesterday for St. Paul to close the sale of some properties in the Manitou district.

Robert Askew, of Ishpeming, Mich., president, and William Mudge, of Negaunee, secretary of the Mine Workers' union, are here to confer, together with President Wasley, of the Soudan branch, with the officials of the Minnesota Iron company in regard to the relations between the latter and the union, and they expect to adjust matters amicably. Mr. Askew says that the miners of this state are now thoroughly organized, nearly all having joined the union. Owing to the fact that employment agencies are shipping in numbers of men who can get no work, and who become burdens to the community, the officers have issued the following notice to miners: "Keep away from the Mesaba and Vermilion iron ranges, as there are scores of men who cannot find work. Do not believe employment agencies or other advertisements, as they are false."

RAINY LAKE DISTRICT.

Miners at the Foley Wild Over Results.

Frank Robitaille states that only one shift is now working on the Foley mine, as most of the miners have gone prospecting, wild over what they saw in developing the mine and desirous of finding as good for themselves, says the Rainy Lake Journal. The 150-foot level which has been drifted eastward a distance of seventy-five feet, and the 200-foot level is now driven 100 feet. The ore in both is as good as in the shaft, and there is no let-up in the width of the vein. Mr. Robitaille is satisfied that it is a great gold mine.

The property recently sold by Messrs. Berg, Aspelund and Franson has been capitalized for $1,500,000. The Sawbill lake property of the Wiley boys, probably the greatest property so far discovered in those new gold fields, has the modest capitalization of $100,000.

The Rat Portage Record says W. D. Ferguson has gone to Mexico to examine some mining property and will be gone a month or so.

Alex Carlson, the foreman of the Sultana gold mine at Rat Portage, was found dead at the bottom of the shaft last week. It is supposed that he slipped from the ladder and fell as he was going to work ahead of his gang of miners.

Don't think for a moment that all of the gold claims are taken in the Rainy Lake gold fields. There are miles and miles of territory here yet that never has been trod by the feet of white men, and as the formation is all right, gold mines will be found there by those who will seek.

Word from the Seine states that Superintendent Whiteley, of the English syndicate on the Kelley-Mosher property, is hiring a big crew of miners and other workmen and getting ready to push that great property to the front.

It is only about three years since an option on the famous Independence mine, in Cripple Creek, from which $1,000,000 has been raised in a day, went begging around Duluth for about $50,000. It was then held by Barbour & Bates. The owner agreed to sell it for $45,000 and the agents were to have all they could get over that sum. Amongst others to whom the agents then sought to sell the property were C. A. Congdon, a well-known attorney and not long ago a resident of St. Paul, and his associates. They became interested in the property and were very favorably impressed with it, but they finally concluded that $80,000 was too much money. The Journal is satisfied that the day is not distant when there will be stories of neglected opportunities in circulation in not catching on to the good things of the Rainy Lake gold fields.

ST. LOUIS RACES.

Debutante Stakes to Run Off This Afternoon.

St. Louis, May 22.—The big feature of today's card will be the Debutante stakes for 2-year-old fillies, worth $2500, the richest prize, save the 2-year-old championship of $3500, ever given for 2-year-olds by the St. Louis Fair association. The field will introduce the greatest lot of 2-year-old fillies seen at the fair grounds in some time and the race will be especially interesting because of the high class character of the contestants. A number of noted jockeys are expected to be present.

Among the most noted of the 2-year-olds will be the Pastime stable's Albertine, Joseph D. Lucas, Cremona, Briggs, by Buckmaster; Whittier Bros., In the Swim; Elsi Smith and Shasta Water, of Burns and Waterhouse's string, entries from the Charter Oak and Ed Corrigan's stables, and John Hoffman's Lilly Beatrice. Mike Dwyer's celebrated jocky, Sims, will have a mount. Earl Cochrane will ride for his brother's stable, Eddie Jones will represent Burns and Waterhouse, Charlie Murphy will ride for Caesar Weutherford, and Willie Martin will be the comique entry.

PROTEST

Vessel and Tug Men Are Sending Angry Protests to Washington.

Condition of Range Lights in the Harbor Excites Their Ire.

Some Are Not in Range and Part Are Always Out.

Vessel and tug men at the head of the lakes are entering a vigorous protest against the condition of the range lights in Duluth and Superior harbors. There is actual danger and much annoyance in the situation, and though these protests have been going up for some time, nothing has yet been done in the premises. It is said that the range lights are placed haphazard to the channel, and that they not only do not follow the channel, but that they are not in range. Furthermore, it is said, that the lights on the ranges are kept in execrable shape. Part of them are always out and some of them have lanterns which blow out when there is wind. Several boats have been compelled to wait at their docks for daylight, because they dared not move while the range lights were unlighted. In her last trip the Ongko waited twelve hours at the Missabe dock for that reason. If it had not been for that she would have been twelve hours away from the schooner Ayers or Lake Michigan, and the collision which sent the schooner and her crew to the bottom would not have occurred.

Many who know nothing of the situation have confounded the lights with the buoys. There is no complaint at all against the buoys, and they appear to be kept in excellent shape.

STATE SUPREME COURT.

Nine Decisions From Justices Collins and Buck.

St. Paul May 22.—The supreme court handed down nine decisions. Six are by Judge Collins and three by Judge Buck. The St. Paul City Railway company wins in its case on appeal against D. E. O'Connell. O'Connell brought suit for damages for being run into by a cable car on Selby avenue while driving a horse. The State Bank of Duluth is defeated in the following action:

"Robert F. Fitzgerald, as assignee of Simon Clark et al., respondent, vs. the State Bank of Duluth, appellant: First, Simon Clark & Co. being an insolvent mercantile firm, a meeting of the principal creditors was called, at which the cashier of the defunct bank, a creditor, presided, one of the firm being present. It was there agreed that one A. W. Miller should be given entire control of the business pending the return of the senior member of the firm from Scotland, where he had gone for the purpose of raising money for the use of the concern. Miller was to dispose of the stock on hand, collect debts, purchase and pay for such goods as might be necessary for carrying on the business, and was to deposit all moneys as received in two banks, one being the defendant, such moneys to be deposited in the name of 'A. W. Miller, agent.' It was agreed that he should not pay out any money upon the then existing indebtedness of the firm. Miller proceeded under this arrangement until the senior member returned, and then the firm made an assignment under the laws of this state for the benefit of all its creditors. Held in an action brought by the assignee against the bank to recover the amount of the deposit that the latter was equitably estopped from offsetting as against the deposit notes of the firm held by it. Second, held, also, that upon the state of the evidence at the close of the trial the court below was justified in ordering a verdict for plaintiff for the amount due on deposit account. Order affirmed. Sig. Collins, J.

The question of legality of service of summons out of a justice court is passed upon the following decision:

Ole J. Vaule, appellant, vs. David Miller, respondent. Judgment reversed. Sig. Buck, J.

Errors in proceedings of courts must always appear in the record, says the supreme court:

Charles E. Bowers, respondent, vs. Mississippi Rum River Boom company, appellant. Application of the rule that error in the proceedings in the trial court must be made to appear from the record on appeal and will be presumed. Judgment and order affirmed. Sig. Collins, J.

The question of conveying property from husband to wife through a third party is passed upon and held valid in the following action: "Helen Jorgenson, respondent, vs. Minneapolis Threshing company et al, appellants. Judgment affirmed. Sig. Collins, J.

An attorney is estopped from collecting fees by the findings of the court, inasmuch as his own actions operate as a bar: Charles J. Berryhill, appellant, vs. William C. Resser et al, defendants; William C. Resser, respondent. Judgment affirmed. Sig. Buck, J.

The supreme court in the following decision held that a chattel mortgage is a prior claim over a lien of stablekeepers for boarding horses: Joseph Peska, respondent, vs. George A. Dallimore, appellant. Order affirmed. Sig. Collins, J.

The conveyance of real estate to the securing of a judgment by a creditor is held to be valid and the court sustains the lower court in its findings: Swan Anderson, appellant, vs. C. E. Lindberg et al, respondents. The supreme court holds it is proper to put in evidence a promissory note when suit is had to secure its payment. Emily B. Elliott, respondent, vs. Susan Roche et al, appellants. Order affirmed. Sig. Buck, J.

His Wagon Upset.

Charles Pickthorne, driver of a wood wagon, was injured by the upsetting of his vehicle on Third avenue west, near Fourth street, yesterday afternoon, several of his ribs being broken. He was taken to St. Luke's hospital, where his injuries, which are described as not being serious, were attended to. He passed a comfortable night and is progressing favorably today.

The accident, which occurred about 3:30 o'clock, was caused by Pickthorne making too short a turn in driving out of the alley between Third and Fourth streets onto Third avenue west.

PHOEBE COUSINS ILL.

And Has Not a Surplus of Funds.

Los Angeles, May 22.—Miss Phoebe Cousins, the noted lecturer and woman suffragist, who came to this city a few months ago on account of a severe attack of rheumatism, has rapidly grown worse and is now very ill. While not in absolute want, Miss Cousins' exchequer is somewhat depleted and in consequence she applied to the Suffragist association for a loan in order that she might leave this climate, which does not agree with her.

She wrote to Mrs. Sargent, president of the Suffragist association at San Francisco, and Miss Susan B. Anthony, but neither would come to her aid, and Miss Anthony replied that they needed all the money they had for campaign for woman suffrage in California. Miss Cousins spoke pathetically of her neglect by Miss Anthony, to whom she said she had been a loyal supporter and defender.

CRAZY JEWELER'S DEED.

San Francisco, May 22.—Alva E. Sheppard, a jeweler, last night murdered his cousin, Mrs. L. E. Aweny, and then cut his own throat. The woman was addicted to the use of morphine and it is believed from a note left by Sheppard that he considered it his duty to kill Mrs. Aweny. Sheppard was a devout Spiritualist and it is said that religious ardor had impaired his mind.

Drank Carbolic Acid.

Little Stuart Strief, 15-months-old son and only child of Stuart Strief, a bartender residing at 914 Garfield avenue, died in agony yesterday from the effects of a drink of carbolic acid. The child was being treated for a skin disease, one of the applications being carbolic acid diluted in water.

Yesterday morning Mrs. Strief was called from the room just as she was preparing to give the child the treatment, the latter seizing the bottle as the mother's back was turned and swallowing some of the acid. When Mrs. Strief returned the child lay writhing on the floor with its cheeks and lips already blistering from the acid.

Dr. Phelan was summoned but his efforts were unavailing, death ensuing shortly afterwards. The funeral will take place today from Bayha & Tibbett's undertaking establishment.

The board of county commissioners met at 2 o'clock p. m. this 9th day of May, 1896, pursuant to adjournment.

Present—Commissioners Swenson, Miller, Dinham and Chairman Helm.

By Commissioner Dinham—

Whereas, the board of county commissioners are of the opinion that a wooden bridge at Short Line Park would be continually exposed to fire from locomotives which would pass under the same and from surrounding forests, and

Whereas, it has been made to appear that a steel structure would be more economical in the end, and

Whereas, it is shown that the bid of the Harton Bridge company was the lowest and best bid made for the steel bridge, and that by giving said company the contract for erecting said bridge nearly all the materials entering into its manufacture will be furnished by home concerns, and that all labor performed thereon will be by citizens of St. Louis county and will result in helping to build up home industries,

It is, by said board of county commissioners, resolved that the contract for erecting a steel bridge with superstructure over the tracks of the St. Paul & Duluth and the Duluth & Winnipeg railway tracks at Short Line Park, be and is hereby awarded to the Harton Bridge company, of Duluth, Minnesota, in accordance with plans and specifications submitted with their bid, and

Be it further resolved, that the bond required of said Harton Bridge company shall be in the sum of $3000 to be approved by this board, conditioned for the faithful performance of said contract.

Commissioner Miller moved the adoption of the resolution, and it was declared adopted by a unanimous vote.

No further business appearing, upon motion of Commissioner Dinham, the board adjourned.

(Seal.) O. Halden, County Auditor.

Will Take All Sorts of Risks That Men Refuse.

Women who shop do not confine their operations to the big department stores, dry goods bazars and weekly sales that are advertised in the papers, says the Chicago Chronicle. They are always on the lookout for new fields of effort, and their daily explorations in search of bargains lead them into channels which are as strange as they grow to be fascinating. The desire to save a few pennies on a purchase, no matter how important or trifling, is so much of a feminine instinct that it grows to be irresistible. The ticket scalpers evidently know that women hate dislike to pay full railroad fares when they are going to travel. Indeed, if it were not for the patronage of women their business would be a sorry means of making money, for more than one-half of all the tickets they sell are purchased by feminine travelers, who would rather risk the chance of being put off trains by inexorable conductors because their tickets were bogus than be sure of safe and uninterrupted journeys on tickets purchased from the companies' authorized agents. They buy railroad books on all of the different trunk lines and unhesitatingly take off their gloves, pick up pens, write clever forgeries of the signatures of the original purchasers and, having thus fortified themselves to escape the scrutiny of inquiring collectors, gatemen and conductors, still their conscience with the reflection that they have saved enough money to pay for Pullman berths and meals while they are on the road. The most dangerous kinds of tickets, that would be ordinarily unmarketable, are purchased by scalpers under the belief that female patrons will take them off their hands and run risks that would appall even a traveling salesman, and they are seldom disappointed.

Some women seem to want to know only that they have made rare bargains, and that is ample compensation for the risks they subsequently run. But after a few days' experience than threaten men under the same circumstances, for railroad officials have never evinced a disposition to press women travelers too closely when they are suspicious of their transportation. They may indicate pretty plainly to a fair holder of a mileage book that they believe she is a forger and a fraud and that she is preparing on false pretences, but there are not many cases on record where they have carried their interpretation of company rules to the extreme of ejecting women from trains. There is probably a two-fold reason for this. One is the danger that might arise from the sympathy of other travelers, who would not remain idle while a woman was being subjected to harsh treatment; the other is that she might possibly be all right, and a mistake would reflect too heavily upon the railroad whose employes were guilty of throwing her out of a car.

MEN RUN FEW RISKS.

Men who patronize scalpers think deeply about their chances. They know that scant courtesy will be shown them if they are caught in a railroad's net of identification, and that there will be no recompense for the humiliation of being publicly branded a fraud by the conductor and forcibly ejected from a train by a muscular brakeman. They can heap anathemas upon the head of the scalper who sold them the unlucky tickets, and that is all the satisfaction they can get. They therefore exercise caution in buying tickets, and disdain to touch those that are liable to be subjec to too close scrutiny, especially on lines that are hostile to scalpers. Traveling salesmen and others who are on the road a good deal of the time never take risks. If they cannot get tickets that are safe from scalpers they will buy from the companies, for the reason that traveling is their business and they cannot afford to be placed in the position of having been thrown off a train. Then, too, they are more familiar with the dangers of traveling than women, who only make occasional journeys, and that circumstance might explain why they avoid indifferent tickets.

LOOK FOR BARGAINS.

In their shopping among the ticket scalpers' offices women exhibit the same traits of painstaking economy that they do when they go to dry goods counters and ribbon sales, and they will bargain and haggle over the prices that the scalpers put on their wares with the patience and persistence of a professional horse trainer. Unlike most men who patronize scalpers, they first take care to inform themselves of the exact fare to the points they desire to visit.

For this purpose they will visit the terminal passenger station of the line they intend to ride over or the downtown ticket office and ask the man behind the window or desk every question that feminine prudence can suggest, and then, after having ascertained all they want to know about rates, they hasten to the office of the nearest ticket scalper. Men rarely take this precaution. They go the scalper, relying upon his generosity to tell them all about railroad rates. If the scalper deems it advantageous to name a sum in excess of the regular rate he may do so, and the man would hardly be wiser until experience taught him better. Nine men out of ten will buy their tickets from the first scalper they visit and ask no questions, but women never do that. If they did the charm of shopping would be lost, and they would not know at the end of the day whether they had bought the cheapest or the dearest ticket.

They go right down the line of offices, visiting one after another, and carefully noting the price that each scalper places on the tickets they want to buy. Their patience and persistence are as inexhaustible as their stock of questions, and they have no more hesitation in refusing to buy a ticket after having occupied a clerk's time for half an hour than they would in laying down a bolt of ribbon after having unwound and pawed it until its very color underwent a change. The spirit of bargains is the only thing that can sustain a woman in her self-imposed task of wandering from one scalper's office to another in search of a cheap ticket, for there are no rich displays of finery that delight the eye and appeal to her artistic instincts—only ugly looking cabinets with dirty yellow and red and green tickets, and brusque clerks, whose only ambition is to make a sale.

But these things do not discourage the ticket shopper. She pursues her mission to the end, and when, after hours of persistent effort to save a few pennies, she lands in the last office on the row, she concludes to make her purchase if the scalper will take her word for it that some other scalper offered a ticket for 10 cents less than his price. And the scalper, who understands the feminine propensity, never doubts what is told him, but concedes the point without a word and sells the ticket.

SCALPERS' EXPERIENCE.

There is a legend among scalpers that the last man who is visited by a female ticket shopper always makes the sale—that is, if she really intends to buy and is not bent on shopping for the sake of shopping.

"You would be surprised," said one of the best-known scalpers to a reporter, "if you you knew how many women have contracted the habit of visiting our offices just for the sake of inquiring about railroad rates, handling our tickets and discussing routes of travel. They come singly, in pairs and in parties, and sometimes when I see them ranged around the counter, shutting out men who would buy if they got a chance, I wonder what motive can possess them to act as they do. We get the shoppers every day. They come in under the pretext of inquiring the rate to a certain place—say, New York—and after they have found out what we have over the various Eastern lines their curiosity gets the better of their prudence and they ask questions about every route they can think of. They want to know what it will cost to travel to New Orleans, to Winnipeg, to San Francisco, to Omaha and to every other place on the continent they can think of. We tell them our prices and then they want to see our tickets, and we have to exhibit them. What the shoppers find in the tickets I cannot tell, for they are not pretty to look at.

"We have women, too, who are businesslike, who know what they want and get it, and pay their money just like men. When I say just like men I don't mean that they do business like men, for that wouldn't be true. They are more acute more careful with their money. They will buy cheaper than men nine times out of ten. Who are our customers? You would be surprised if you knew. Some of the best-known women in Chicago patronize us.

"They come in, get their tickets and think they save money and that is all they care about. They will take longer chances than men for the reason that they are aware that they are in less danger of land treatment on trains. Only two days ago two women, evidently mother and daughter, came in here and asked for tickets to St. Paul. We had three or four on different lines that were all right, but we couldn't afford to sell them for much less than the regular rates. We also had a limited ticket that was pretty tender property. We sold the ladies about it and explained that they might have difficulty in getting through the hands of the conductors. Indeed, we made them understand that the chances were more than even that they wouldn't be able to pass the man at the depot gate and that their investment might be a dead loss. The signatures on the ticket were in German and neither mother nor daughter could write or speak German, but do you suppose it feazed them? Not a bit when they found out that the tickets could be had at a 60 per cent reduction. I don't mind telling you that all the profit over that we reserve for ourselves, even at that. They took the tickets and were very happy, and as we never heard of them again we took it for granted that they got through all right."

A KALEIDOSCOPIC THRONG.

It is a curious sight to stand in a scalper's office and watch the procession of women moving in and out. There are pretty girls among them—girls with bright eyes, good teeth and nice complexions and good clothes. They look as if they could afford full-rate tickets, but they simply don't care to buy them while they can shop among the scalpers. It is among these pretty young women that some scalpers are always looking for enemies who may cause them trouble. They have found by experience that the railroads cannot hire better detectives than these same women, for they have a way of insinuating themselves into the confidence of men that precludes the possibility of discovery. Some of the most sensational exposures of the ticket-scalping business that have been made in Chicago have resulted from women shoppers. But the feminine trade constitutes such a large percentage of all the business they do that they have to take the chance of selling to everybody who asks for tickets.

A QUEER SHAVE.

In an account of Capt. Cook's last voyage to the Pacific ocean, in the New London Magazine for September, 1785, is recorded a very curious method of shaving adopted by the inhabitants of the Friendly Islands, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. While Capt. Cook (says the writer) was at Hapaee, he observed a woman shaving a child's head with a shark's tooth stuck into the end of a piece of stick. She first wet the hair with a rag dipped in water, applying the instrument to that part which she had previously soaked. The operation seemed to give no pain to the child, although the hair was taken off as close as if one of our razors had been employed. Capt. Cook tried one of these singular instruments upon himself, and found it to be an excellent succedaneum.

But the men have another contrivance when they shave their beards. They take two shells, one of which they place under a small part of the beard, and with the other, applied above, they scrape that part off. In this manner, they are able to shave very close. The process is rather tedious, but not painful, and there were men among them who seemed to profess this trade. It was as common to see the sailors go ashore to have their beards scraped off, after the fashion of Hapaee, as it was to see their chiefs come on board to be shaved by our barbers.

INFESTED BY TRAMPS.

Boston is infested by hundreds and thousands of tramps, most of them existing by begging in the streets and sleeping in 5-cent lodging houses, says the Boston Herald. The managers of the home of industry have offered to provide work for all who needed it, but many have preferred to beg. The managers have also made a kind of census of these unemployed, and within a few days it is proposed to make a descent upon the lodging houses and arrest everybody in sight. It is not expected that many tramps will be found, because due notice has been given, and, although the season is early, the panhandlers will probably take to the country.

TIME VS. RELIGION.

A novel argument against standard time is made by Col. W. W. Bruce, of Lexington. In a communication to the Argonaut Col. Bruce says: "Believing in the Lord, and trying to obey His commandments, I can not believe in standard time. The Lord made the sun overhead at 12 o'clock (not standard time, but the good Lord's time). I don't think, as a Christian, I have the right to go against His will by adopting standard time. I asked my cook the day the clock in the rear of the residence was changed why dinner was so late, and she replied, 'Why, boss, it is only 2 o'clock.' 'But,' says I, 'that is standard time, twenty-two minutes slow; I want my meals on God's time.'"

WOMEN FIGHT BULLS.

Barcelona Bull Fights Are Different From Others.

While Spain is howling against reform in Cuba the most disgusting bull fights go on in her leading cities, especially in Barcelona, where the American consulate was recently lired on.

The Barcelona bull fight is quite different from the same kind of sport in other Spanish cities, for it is there that the woman bull-fighter is born and bred and makes her introductory killing before an admiring audience. Some of the aristocracy of the old regime deplore the existence of the woman bull-fighter, but the middle classes adore her, and every year makes an increase in the ranks of the feminine matador.

In the old days the bull-fighter was a gentleman of the bluest blood, who rode into the ring on an Arabian charger, decked with almost his weight in gold. It was a great accomplishment in those times, and the young gentleman who ranked as the cleverest bull-fighter was a man of vast social distinction. He did not fight in the manner of today. He carried a simple javelin, four feet long, and slew the bull unaided with his own hands, at the same time putting his spirited mount through a series of intricate evolutions, to show off the paces of the animal and his own horsemanship.

He was supplanted by the bull-fighters who entered the arena for hire. These men at first took more desperate chances than the others, and, moreover, rode poor, broken-down horses, which were so slow and nerveless that they could not avoid the cumbersome charges of the enraged bull.

The next step in the degeneracy of the bull ring, according to Spanish authorities, came with the appearance of the woman fighter. From the ranks of Barcelona mill hands, girls of suitable physique, handsome in face and sufficient in courage, are not difficult to select.

As mill hands they are virtually slaves, earning only enough to keep body and soul together. As bull-fighters they are the idols of the people, the recipients of showers of adulation, with fine clothes and plenty of money to spend.

It is almost needless to say that the most popular of these Amazons are the prettiest and shapeliest. They wear the same garb as the men bull-fighters, and they ride the horse astride. If they rode with the side-saddle it would be a most dangerous proceeding, for a firm seat is essential to safety of life and limb.

In the ring at some little distance it is quite impossible to distinguish the sexes. The girls are as tall as the men, and almost as heavily built. There is nothing feminine about them either when the fight begins.

On the day set apart for the women bull-fighters there are only women in the ring. The picadors ride in on equine wrecks garbed in the costume of the Spanish knight of the middle ages. These women look very handsome, and ride with considerable grace. Following the picadors are the chulos on foot, who wear wonderful cloaks, and enough ribbon to stock a small shop. They group themselves so that the swirling mass of variegated colors will aggravate the bull. After a short pause in comes the matador with a naked sword in her hand. She, of course, is the queen of the day. The right hand holds the sword, and in the left she carries the muleta—a slender stick with a red or scarlet silk attached. The picadors take up a position in the center of the ring with their long lances held firmly. Then the bull is driven in. This is a critical moment. The experienced ones in a moment can tell if the bull is a natural fighter, or whether he is peaceably inclined. If the former, they know that they will get their money's worth in blood. If the latter, they have their doubts. The lumbering bulls are supplied by the duke of Veragua, the descendant of Christopher Columbus. The duke's income is supplied by this business.

If the bull is quiet and shows no disposition to attack at once, the picadors ride round him, prodding him where they can with their long lances. The chulos excite him by the flashing of their gorgeous colors. It is not in the bull's nature to stand for this any length of time, and soon he begins to charge right and left. Horses are bowled over and gored. When the bull has been worked into a perfect frenzy, the matador prepares for her dainty task.

To kill him at one blow is considered bad form, although it is most difficult. The popular matador sticks him here and there until he streams blood in a score of places. When he is at his wildest the matador, by a few deft steps, works to his left side, and at the proper instant stands up on her little toes to her full height, and with a downward thrust of the sword sinks it to the hilt immediately behind the shoulder-blade. If the aim be true, the sword-blade cuts the heart in two, and the bull drops dead at the victor's feet. This is considered a great performance, and the lucky matador who accomplishes it the first time is caught in a shower of jewels, coins and flowers from all sides of the arena.

The cleverest women bull-fighters in Spain today are Providencia Almeda and Marfa Alvarado. They are great rivals, and each has an immense following.

Promoter Hoagland Will Introduce it in St. Louis.

St. Louis, May 22.—Alexander Hoagland, president of the Boys and Girls Home and Employment association, who is heading the new municipal reform movement known as the "curfew ordinance" is in the city, and will, through the national board, at an early Louis city council.

The colonel stated today that the ordinance was in force at Omaha and Lincoln, Neb., and at St. Joseph, Mo., and 200 smaller cities and towns. Lincoln officials report a falling off of 75 per cent in crimes and arrests among the young of that city for the first month.

CROP REPORTS.

Hessian Fly Doing Lot of Damage to Grain.

Toledo, May 22.—The grain firm of C. A. King & Co. during the past four days have received 4368 crop reports. Prospects for winter wheat are favorable in Kansas and most of Michigan, Missouri and Illinois fair. Indiana becoming worse, and promises less than three-quarters of an average crop owing to Hessian fly. Ohio a trifle over half a crop. Prospects in six states average a trifle worse than two weeks ago.

Recent rains have been beneficial. Kansas and Missouri show slight improvement. Illinois and Ohio no change. Indiana suffered materially from Hessian fly and drouth. Michigan had excellent prospects, but some sections are badly damaged by Hessian fly. Harvest will average ten days earlier this year.

JACKSON PARK.

World's Fair Wreckers Have Completed Their Work.

Chicago, May 22.—Tomorrow, the wreckers who have for nearly three years been removing the remains of the great World's fair, will formally turn the grounds over to the Jackson park commissioners. The only things which remain as a reminder of the grandeur are the art palace and La Rabida convent, both of which are well preserved, the dilapidated German building and the badly soiled statue of liberty.

The park commissioners will at once begin to restore the desolate grounds to their former beauty as a park.

EX-SENATOR WALLACE DEAD.

New York, May 22.—Ex-United States Senator William A. Wallace died at his home, 170 West Eighty-eighth street, this city, at 7:25 a. m. Mr. Wallace has been seriously ill for several months, and for a month past he had been unconscious for a great part of the time.

The following officers and delegates to the assembly were elected and the officers installed: D. S. Lapham, president; William H. Hills, vice president; Jerry Lawson, recording secretary; John Douglass, financial secretary; Frank Perry, treasurer; Matt Holin, sergeant-at-arms; D. S. Lapham, W. F. McFall and H. Hauson, delegates to assembly.

"Hamm's" Coming Tomorrow.

Tomorrow and Saturday, weather permitting, the Hamm's Export nine will try it again in Duluth, and the Duluth boys are hoping that the weather manipulater will drop a little of his ungracious behavior for the occasion. The brewers are said to be a crack amateur nine, and not only will the games be interesting, it is hoped, but it will be an opportunity for the Duluth club to show what stuff it is made of. The Hamm's had to cancel a date with Mankato to get here.

Women's Bicycle Race.

Alderman Conley, of St. Paul, and Sam Atkinson, of Duluth, have arranged for a six days' women's bicycle race to take place at the West End ball park in June. Dot Farnsworth, Miss Baldwin, and the other female bike celebrities who have been racing in St. Paul, Chicago and elsewhere will take part and the race is expected to be exceedingly interesting. The manager of the female scorchers has a patent track which solves the question of what they are going to ride over at the ball park. The track will be seven and a half laps to a mile and racing will end at 10:30 every night. The track will be illuminated by electricity during the race, that the audience may better see the race and the contestants.

Another Whisky Thief.

At a late hour yesterday afternoon, Detective Troyer arrested Robert Keman, wanted for complicity in the theft of some whisky from Zien's saloon on Saturday afternoon last, the capture being made on the Lake avenue viaduct. Keman, who travels at times under the alias of Smith, made an attempt to bluff the detective, but it was no use and he was taken to the station. He was at once taken before Judge Ellison, who set his examination for May 23 and fixed the bail at $250, in default of which the prisoner was committed to jail.

Session of the British Parliament Adjourned Early This Morning.

Five Members, Including John Dillon, Suspended For Cause Shown.

Raid on Restaurants By the Hungry Horde of Lawmakers.

London, May 22.—At noon today the house of commons was still in session, having been sitting continuously twenty-four hours, with the prospect of further weariness for the members. The deadlock began yesterday after the discussion of the agricultural rating bill, providing for the reduction of rates on agricultural land. The house was in committee of the whole from 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and at 3 o'clock this morning the closure was moved. But several members refused to enter the division lobby, whereupon the speaker, Mr. Gully, was summoned, and he named John Dillon, the anti-Parnellite leader, Dr. Tanner, Donald Sullivan, David Lloyd-George and John Herbert Lewis, the latter two being Welsh members, for disobeying the chair.

The Conservative leader, Mr. Balfour, moved the suspension of the members named, and the motion was carried by a vote of 209 to 58, the members being suspended for a week.

Michael Davitt and Daniel Macaleese, members for South Mayo and North Managhan respectively, persisted in remaining in the house during the division, whereupon the sergeant-at-arms was summoned by the speaker to remove them. This was done in the usual formal manner, Messrs. Davitt and Macaleese repudiating any intention to show disrespect for the chair.

Sir William Vernon Harcourt, the Liberal leader, thereupon moved to adjourn the debate, claiming the house was not in a fit condition to continue the discussion, but the speaker declined to accept the motion and the discussion was continued.

Mr. Balfour said the government proposed to continue the sitting until the bill should be completed. The secretary of state for the colonies, Mr. Chamberlain; the under secretary of the foreign office, Mr. Curzon; the secretary of state for India, Lord George Hamilton, and Mr. Balfour occupied the treasury bench all night long in the evening dress they had worn the night previous. Throughout the night suppers were in progress in the coffee room, and from the fact that 1000 eggs alone were consumed it may be judged that the appetites of the members were sharpened considerably by their stay in the house.

At 5 o'clock this morning the manager of the coffee room made a sortie and succeeded in purchasing the entire contents of a fish store located in the neighborhood of the house. He loaded these provisions into a cab and conveyed them to the house. He then started on another foraging expedition and eventually returned with two cabs full of fresh bread, butter, milk, coffee, tea, rolls, sausages, bacon, ham, etc., and the prospects of starvation for the members soon vanished. After a good breakfast the commoners began to look more favorably at the agricultural rating bill, and amicable discussion was resumed. Finally, at 1:30 p. m., just as the members were getting hungry again and longing for luncheon, with the manager of the coffee room preparing for another reconnoitering expedition, all the clauses of the bill were agreed to, and with many sighs of relief the house adjourned until June 1, and the members hurried away to their clubs or homes for luncheon.

CZAR WAS NEAR DEATH.

The late Russian general, Tcherevin, was the founder of the Okhrana, or czar's bodyguard, composed of men of high rank or great wealth, who were sworn to protect the person of Alexander III. It is related of Tcherevin that one night, as he lay extended in the dark in front of the czar's bedroom, a figure approached. Tcherevin, believing the man whom he saw had designs on the life of his sovereign, sprang to his feet and leveled a pistol at the intruder, who simultaneously pointed one at the head of Tcherevin, each demanding to know why the other was there. Their voices revealed them to each other. The man was Alexander III himself, who, having a haunting dread of assassination, was on a round of personal inspection of the palace.

GLASS EYES.

Artificial Optics Made For Horses, Dogs and Cats.

San Francisco Chronicle: "Got any horse eyes?" asked a well-dressed man the other day of W. D. Fennimore, a Kearney street optician.

"Lots of 'em," replied Mr. Fennimore, briskly, "and we've also an assortment of cats' and dogs' eyes, and a very complete set of Chinese eyes."

The inquirer went on to explain he was the owner of a fine-blooded mare, which could trot in 2:08¼. A few weeks previously she had caught her head in the manger, and in some incredible manner had gouged her left eye out. He wished to sell the animal, and wanted a glass eye inserted before attempting the sale. When asked as to where his animal was, he said it was in his private stable, near the outskirts of the town. He had kept the accident a profound secret.

Mr. Fennimore filled a case full of eyes, accompanied the horseowner to the stable, and returned in an hour with a $10 greenback tucked in his vest pocket.

"But when that horse begins to trot is his eye not likely to drop out?" asked a curious man.

Mr. Fennimore laughingly replied that there was no danger of that, and then proceeded to give some rather interesting information about glass eyes in general.

"Most people," he said, "are under the impression that glass eyes are molded, but that is not so. They are blown out of a thin tube of glass, and colored while in the molten state. The eyes when completed are hollow and very thin, but, as the material used is of the highest grade, they are not very brittle. Very few eyes are made in the United States. Most of the eyes in use here are imported from Germany. The American eyes are very dull, and lack that life which distinguishes the German eyes. P. Ad Muller Sons, of Wiesbaden, furnish most of the eyes now used in this country.

"We have people come in every day who buy glass eyes. The majority are or have been miners who have lost their eyes in the mines by explosions. Pennsylvania has a larger percentage of one-eyed people than any other state in the Union. This is accounted for by the number of men who work in the foundries and are hurt by pieces of steel striking their eyes.

"It is very difficult at times to match an eye perfectly, though we have always several thousand eyes in stock. Some times we send off and have eyes made to order.

"An eye cannot be used much longer than a year. The fluids about the socket eat into the glass, and cause it to become so rough that it irritates the lids. A first-class eye is worth $10. The inferior grades are sold as low as $5. At times, in very cold weather, an eye is liable to crack. If this happens it must be immediately discarded, for it might cause considerable trouble.

"Again, an eye must be taken out each night and washed very clean before it is replaced in the morning. To persons earning their living, it is, to speak plainly, a vital question to hide as much as possible the loss of one eye, for a person with only one eye does not easily find lucrative employment, although one sound eye may be quite sufficient for the fulfillment of his duties."

A one-eyed Chinaman, accompanied by numerous friends and relatives, entered the store not long ago, and asked for a glass eye. Mr. Fennimore inserted one for him, and the fellow turned to his friends. They were delighted.

Then he walked to the door and placed his hand over his glass eye, and proceeded to gaze at a building opposite. Then he placed his hand over the good eye and raised his head in a vain attempt to see with the glass eye. Not succeeding, he refused to buy the eye, saying that it was no good. A one-eyed sailor, in applying for a glass eye not long ago, said that the captain had refused to ship him because he had only one side light.

BRONCHO BOB SUSPECTED.

A sojourn of over a month in the East had made Broncho Bob no less an object of suspicion among his old companions than he had been a lion during his visit, says the Detroit Free Press. But a place was made for him at the card table, where the usual game of draw poker was in progress.

"Gimme a stack o' red chips," he said carelessly.

He was accommodated and the game proceeded in silence.

"I don't see ez he talks no different," said Piute Pete in a whisper to the man next to him.

"Jist wait," said Three-fingered Sam. "It'll come out sooner or later. He'll be takin' ginger ale on the side or sayin' 'eyether' jis' ter show off. An' as soon ez he begins ter sling any serciety aroun' here Thar's goin' ter be trouble a foo: thick. What'll yer hev ter drink?"

"Some red liquor," replied Broncho Bob, when his turn to speak came.

As they drew cards Three-fingered Sam muttered:

"Wants nothin' but red chips an' calls fur red liquor. Seems ter me somebody's gettin' purty blamed heeele aroun' here.

Broncho Bob bet the limit and when all the others had signified their intention to stay out Piute Pete shoved in the requisite number of chips and queried:

"Whutcher got?"

"Nothin' much," was Broncho Bob's nonchalant reply. "Jest a red flush; all hearts."

Three-fingered Sam had pulled his gun in a jiffy.

"Look yere," he said in a husky voice, "ye've bin mixin' weth 'the slight an' dawdlin' weth the cream delly cream, but yer might ez well understand thet ef yer settin' out ter start a four hundred in this settlement ye'll hev ter git along without the other three hundred and ninety-nine."

"Whutcher mean?" asked Broncho Bob.

"Whut I mean is thet if ye're tryin' ter ring in a pink tea unbeknownst we're dead onter ye an' we won't stand it."

A FAKE HOLD-UP.

How a Railroad Detective Was Fooled.

Washington Star: "This story I see going the rounds of the newspapers about the gang out West scheming to hold up a train with Vanderbilt, Depew and other rich meat on it," remarked a detective to a Star re, rter, "reminds me of one similar that occurred in my bailiwick when I was working in California."

"As to how?" questioned the reporter.

"A chap out there came to me just as the fellow did in the case of this detective and said he was one of a gang that was going to hold up a train with a lot of 'Frisco millionaires aboard, but that as I had been a friend to him when he needed it which was true, or he would have then been wearing stripes, he was going to give the snap away. It looked to me to be the chance of my life, and I at once began operations to thwart the robbers. I told the chap to go ahead and help the gang get ready for the train, and that when it was held up they would hear something drop, and that he had better keep in a safe place or it might be him along with the others. The train left 'Frisco one night at 9 o'clock, and I was informed that the hold-up was to take place in a lonesome spot about an hour out of 'Frisco. I had a carload of armed men ready.

"As we struck the dangerous place I was pretty nervous, and so was everybody else, but we meant business, and braced up with a drink or two for whatever work we might have. It came at last with a light on the track, where a man stood swinging a lantern, and the train pulled up. As it stopped there was a volley of half a dozen shots pouned into the train from the woods near the track, which my men responded to on the spot, much to my chagrin, for I had wanted the robbers to board us, where we could have them in good shooting position. My men were green, though, or at least, most of them were, and they were so rattled by the volley that they forgot what they were doing and banged away.

"Nothing was left then but to give chase, which we did for a few hundred yards through the woods, but they got away in the dark, and we found nothing except as we came back to the train my friend, the informer, Him we found lying in the gutter on top of his lantern, scared half to death. We took him in, and as the train pulled out I explained his part in the affair and the millionaires were so pleased with his heroic conduct in saving them that they made up a purse of $3500 and presented it to him on the spot and offered him a railroad job, where he might have a chance to lead a new life.

"He took the money and the job, and the next time I saw him he was in jail at Sacramento with a bullet hole in him. Before he quit living, however, he told me with a laugh that the hold-up was a fake from start to finish, and that his wife did the shooting from the woods with a revolver and ran away as fast as she could. They figured that the rich men would make up some sort of a purse, and if they didn't get more than a hundred dollars it would have repaid them amply for all their expense and trouble. As for the risk, there wasn't any; I was glad nobody heard the scoundrel tell his story, for it made me mighty sore, and I never told it till I had been away from California for five years."

HE BUILT THE HOUSE.

Portland Telegram: He stood at the street intersection examining with interest the gray stone mansion, which, with its spacious yard and well-appointed conservatory and stables, occupied nearly the whole quarter of the square. He stood so long that the policeman who had been conversing with the nurse maid half way down the block became suspicions and drew near.

"Nice house," said the officer. "D'ye think ye'd know it again if ye was to pass it in the dark?"

"Yes," said the stranger. "I think I would. And it is a very nice house. It cost money, too."

"It did that," said the officer. "You guessed it first crack."

"I built that house," the stranger volunteered.

The stranger's garments were not such as would stamp him a millionaire. He wore no collar, and his coat threatened speedy disintegration.

"Wid a spade and hoe, belike," said the officer.

"No; with the money left me by my uncle. It is not exactly as I would have designed it. I never saw it before, but—"

"You never saw it before?" interrupted the officer. "And it ain't just as you'd like it, but you built it with money left you by your uncle? I think, me gay lunatic—"

"It's all true," said the stranger. "The owner was my lawyer."

IMPEACH

Populist Howard, of Arkansas, Sprang a House Sensation This Morning.

Wanted to Impeach President Cleveland for Several Alleged Misdemeanors

The House Sat Down on Howard With a Unanimous Vote.

Washington, May 23.—Mr. Howard, a Populist from Alabama, the author of "If Christ Came to Congress," at the opening of the session of the house today sprang a sensation, but it was short lived. The house with practical unanimity suppressed him. As soon as the Journal had been read, Mr. Howard, whose seat is in a remote corner of the hall, arose dramatically in the center aisle and flourishing a paper his hand demanded to be heard on the resolution, which he sent to the clerk's desk. The resolution was as follows: "I do impeach Grover Cleveland, president of the United States, of high crimes and misdemeanors on the following grounds:

"1.—That he has sold, or directed the sale of bonds without authority of law.

"2.—That he sold or aided in the sale of bonds at less than their market value.

"3.—That he directed the misappropriation of the proceeds of said bond sales.

"4.—That he directed the secretary of the treasury to disregard the law which makes United States notes and treasury notes redeemable in coin.

"5.—That he ignored and refused to have enforced the 'anti-trust' law.

"6.—That he has sent United States troops into the state of Illinois without authority of law and in violation of the constitution.

"7.—That he has corrupted politics through the interference of federal officeholders.

"8.—That he has used the appointing power to influence legislation detrimental to the welfare of the people.

"Therefore be it resolved by the house of representatives that the committee on the judiciary be directed to ascertain whether these charges are true, and if so, to report to the house such action by impeachment or otherwise, as shall be proper in the premises, and said committee shall have authority to send for persons and papers."

When the clerk ceased reading, Mr. Howard, who had arisen to address the house, was suddenly taken off the floor by Mr. Dingley, the floor leader of the majority, who raised the question of consideration against the resolution. The question was promptly put by the speaker and by a practically unanimous vote the house declined to give Mr. Howard a hearing. The house then settled down to dull routine.

IN THE SENATE.

Washington, May 23.—Mr. Mills offered an amendment in the senate to the filled cheese bill, to impose an internal revenue tax of 5 per cent on all articles in excess of $10,000 per annum manufactured by any person, company or corporation in the United States from iron, steel, copper, nickel, brass, lead, zinc, cotton, wool, hemp, silk or flax, the receipts to be applied to the purchase and extinguishment of the interest-bearing debt of the United States.

Mr. Sherman moved to lay the amendment on the table and Mr. Mills called for a quorum. The motion to lay on the table was carried, 42 to 15.

Mr. Allen moved an amendment to impose an additional tax of $1 a basket on beer, ale and porter. Mr. Sherman agreed to lay it on the table, and the motion was carried—35 to 22.

Mr. Gray moved a tax of 10 cents a pound on tea imported into the United States. Mr. Gray's amendment was lost—7 to 19—and 2 o'clock having arrived, Mr. Allen arose to speak on the bond bill.

MILWAUKEE BOYCOTT.

Mayor Issues a Proclamation Regarding It.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 23.—Mayor Rauschenberger today issued a proclamation calling attention to the prevalence of the boycott as an incident of the street railway strike, and requesting all law-abiding residents of the city to assist in putting an end to the commercial war. He declares that the boycott is injurious to the business interests of the city, and that if persisted in, it will cause permanent injury in all parts of trade.

It is realized that an end must be put to the warfare on business men, who permit their employes to ride in the cars and who deal with the street railway and its employes.

OHIO DEMOCRATS.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 23.—The Democratic convention of the Twenty-first congressional district, held in this city today, elected ex-Congressman Tom L. Johnson and S. H. Holding delegates to the Chicago convention. They were not pledged, but are opposed to the free coinage of silver. A. R. Ryan and Charles Higgins were elected alternates, and P. J. McKenney was nominated for presidential elector.

BAPTISTS HARD AT WORK.

Asbury Park, N. J., May 23.—The second day's session of the meeting of the American Baptist Missionary union was well attended. The exercises began with a meeting of the Foreign Mission societies, and the report of the financial committee and addresses by missionaries ended the morning session. The reports of special committees followed and the afternoon session was closed with adresses by several missionaries.

TEMPERANCE TALKER DEAD.

Danville, Ill., May 23.—Isaac Dunn, the temperance lecturer, died last night of fatty degeneration of the heart.

QUAY AT HOME.

But He is Silent on the Canton Visit.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 23.—Senator Quay was expected in Pittsburg today, but up till noon he had not been at any of his usual haunts. In some manner the report got abroad that he would make a statement this morning in reference to his visit to Canton yesterday, and there were many anxious inquiries for the senator this morning. It is thought that he was detained at home and will reach the city some time this afternoon.

Shortly after noon his son Richard telephoned from Beaver that his father would not be up to the city until Monday. He said further that the senator had not prepared any statement, and it was not at all probable that he would do so, as he had refused to divulge anything that had taken place at Canton even to him.

MR. BROWN IS SILENT.

Lancaster, Pa., May 23.—J. Hay Brown, who accompanied Senator Quay on the latter's visit to Governor McKinley, was asked today for a statement as to the nature of the conversation between the two men. Pleading that such a statement could come with propriety only from either Maj. McKinley or Senator Quay, Mr. Brown declined to say anything on the subject.

ALLEN IS CAPTURED.

Desperado Surprised in the Montana Hills.

Minneapolis, May 23.—A special to the Journal from Deer Lodge, Mont., says: Phillip Allen, the man who last Sunday killed his divorced wife for revenge and then fled to the hills, is captured. A reward of $500 had been offered for his capture, dead or alive, and armed parties had been searching for him a week. It was determined to show him no mercy on account of his known desperate character and his expressed determination to kill any who might follow him. But being taken by surprise, no blood was shed.

For fear of a lynching he was at once lodged in the state penitentiary at Deer Lodge. Allen killed a man in 1888 and disappeared, only to return and deliberately shoot his wife, aged 35, who after his disappearance had secured a divorce and married another man.

SAVED SOME LETTERS.

Peculiar Incident of Cripple Creek's Big Fire.

Denver, May 23.—A special to the Times from Cripple Creek says: Wagon load after wagon load of mail matter was taken from the Cripple Creek postoffice yesterday afternoon to the city dump, where an attempt was made by the postmaster's assistants to burn it. When it became known to the public that a wholesale destruction of mails was going on, many citizens went to the dump and saved many letters.

One of the worst features of the affair is the fact that mail addressed to other places was destroyed. When Postmaster Rose was called upon for an explanation he said the burning was done on the authority of the postoffice inspector.

FLETCHER FOR CONGRESS.

Minneapolis Republicans Renominate Him This Morning.

Minneapolis, May 23.—The Fifth Minnesota district Republican convention this morning renominated Loren Fletcher for congress. He received 373 votes out of 453. The resolutions declare for protection, reciprocity and sound money.

Later—The vote stood: Fletcher, 373; Davis, 80. The name of the latter was not even formally placed before the convention. The nomination of Congressman Fletcher was made in a brief, but eloquent speech by Robert G. Evans. Mr. Davis was not named in the convention, but the Eleventh ward delegates objected to making the nomination unanimous, and after some trouble a roll call was ordered. The vote resulted as above noted. The report of the committee on resolutions was as follows:

"Resolved, that this convention of the Republicans of the Fifth congressional district of Minnesota hereby reaffirms the great principles of the Republican party—protection, reciprocity and sound money, and we hereby pledge ourselves to stand upon the platform to be adopted by the national Republican convention soon to convene in St. Louis."

A STERN CASE RIPPLE.

Berlin, May 23.—The officials of the foreign office here say that they consider the publication of the correspondence relating to Louis Stern, of New York, in the United States as being contrary to diplomatic usage. The Reichsanziger today publishes the letters which passed between the minister for foreign affairs, Baron Marschall von Bieberstein and Baron von Thielmann, the German ambassador to the United States when the sentence of imprisonment passed upon Mr. Stern, for insulting Baron von Thuengen, deputy commissioner of the Spa at Kissengen, was under discussion. The letters include Baron Marschall von Bieberstein's instructions on the subject.

A dispatch from Stamford says that Mr. Fessenden refused to confirm or deny the report.

Abbey, Schoeffel & Grau, the Operatic and Dramatic Managers, Assign.

Members of the Firm Are Practically Without a Remaining Dollar.

Long on Opera and Very Short on Drama the Cause.

New York, May 23.—After an extended and brilliant career as operatic and dramatic managers, after introducing to the American public actors and singers of Europe, after presenting grand opera on a more splendid scale, Messrs. Abbey, Schoeffel & Grau, controlling the Metropolitan Opera house and Abbey's theater, in New York, and the Tremont theater, in Boston, have found themselves in serious financial difficulties, and have made an assignment for the benefit of the creditors.

Their operatic ventures since 1891 have given them magnificent profits, but with the two or three exceptions their dramatic undertakings have been most disastrous, and the latter have not only swallowed up all the great gains of the opera seasons, but have run the firm into such debt, that they find themselves as a firm and as individuals, practically stripped of every dollar they owned. The crisis was precipitated by Mr. Abbey's present serious illness.

When the assignees have made their report it will probably be found that the sum total owed by the firm does not exceed $300,000, and possibly may prove to be a somewhat lesser sum. Against this the firm have numerous assets, which if carefully nursed and not forced upon the market may produce $200,000 or at least $150,000.

Louis J. Phelps, assignee of Abbey Schoeffel & Grau, could not say anything definite about the affairs of the firm, which has been so prominent in recent years as operatic and dramatic managers. Maurice Grau, the member of the firm who has been in charge of affairs at the Metropolitan Opera house, sailed today on the Normandie for Havre. It is said to renew contracts with the principal operatic stars who appeared here during the season of opera recently closed.

CONTRACTS WITH SETTLERS.

Mr. Towne Will Insist Upon Provision For Them.

Washington, May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Representative Towne, in speaking of the Hartman Northern Pacific bill, said today: "I propose in the matter of the reorganization of this road to insist that provision shall be made for the assumption by the corporation that shall represent the company the duties of the late corporation towards settlers who have purchased lands on contract, that the duty shall rest upon the successors of this company to carry out the contracts of the Northern Pacific. There are also numbers of settlers who have taken possession and have made improvements to pay for their land, and they hold contracts for purchase. There would be no obligation on the purchaser at foreclosure proceedings to carry out these contracts, therefore the necessity of providing in this measure that if advantage is taken of the opportunity of organizing under a federal charter, one of the conditions thereto shall be the carrying out of these contracts."

PENSION SUIT AGAINST LOCHREN.

Long, justice of the Michigan supreme court, against ex-Pension Agent Lochren to compel restoration of Judge Long's pension to its original rating. The government will claim that the suit was brought against Lochren personally, and not against his office. Judge Long's attorney goes to Washington to resist the motion.

KILLED A SON-IN-LAW.

A NEW MOTIVE POWER.

New York, May 23.—William C. Whitney is authority for the statement that the Metropolitan Traction company has discovered a new motive power and will put the same into use on the Broadway and other lines of the company here within twelve months. It is believed that compressed air and not the cable will be the new motive power introduced.

CONVENTION TICKETS.

Practically the Same Time Limit is Given.

St. Louis, May 23.—The convention transportation committee of the Business Men's league, have authorized Secretary Cox to issue an official denial of statements which have been published to the effect that the time limit on tickets to the Republican convention had been fixed at five days. He was further ordered to issue the following condensed statement as to the actual limit announced:

"Western Passenger and Trans-Missouri association: Arrangements identical for both Republican and Democratic conventions, limit eleven days dating from June 12 to 23.

"South and Western passenger committee lines: Tickets will be sold on June 8 and 9, and on June 12 and subsequent days, good until June 23. From Colorado points tickets will be sold June 12, 13 and 14, final limit, June 23 or eleven days.

"Joint Traffic association: Identical limits for the Republican and Democratic conventions. Maximum limit, nine days.

"General passenger committee: Tickets will be sold June 12, 13, 14 and 15, good until June 20, for the Republican convention. These limits are identical with those for the Democratic convention at Chicago.

A careful summary of the instructions issued by the different passenger associations and committees, shows practically the same number of days' limit for both conventions. In no case is there any discrimination against St. Louis. In one or two cases the limit is two days longer for St. Louis than for the Democratic convention. By order of the committee. James Cox, Secretary."

GROVER REFUSES.

Will Not Give Up the Cuban Correspondence.

Washington, May 22.—Responding to the resolution adopted by the senate on May 16, in regard to the treatment of American citizens in Cuba, and requesting copies of the correspondence of the state department in this subject, the president today sent a message to the senate declining to furnish the correspondence, and saying that he considered it incompatible with the public service to do so at the present time. He forwarded literal copies of the original text of the protocol of the conference and declarations concerning the judicial proceedure of 1877, signed by Caleb Cushing on behalf of the United States and Senator Calantes as the representative of the Spanish government.

A VETO FROM CLEVELAND.

Washington, May 23.—The president today sent to the house his veto of the bill to amend the act fixing the fees of registers and receivers of land offices.

D., May 23.—The grand council of the United Commercial Travelers' association convened at 10:15 this morning, when the committee on charters and dispensation reported that Owatonna and Crookston had been working under special dispensation, but were now entitled to charters. It is believed that the departure of the general indicates that a most important and decisive movement of the Spanish forces against the insurgents is shortly to be undertaken.

The Methodist Conference Selects a Whole Lot of Them Today.

And Then Turns Its Attention to Actions of Bishops.

Winding Up With a Dispute Over South African Matters.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 23.—Bishop Warren presided over today's session of the Methodist general conference. Rev. F. D. Scott was elected as editor of the Southwestern Advocate by 265 votes, fifty-three more than were necessary. It was ordered that Dr. E. W. L. Hammond, the displaced editor, be paid his salary until other work can be procured for him. Dr. Homer Eaton was made treasurer, and Dr. Louis Curts, assistant treasurer of the Missionary society. Dr. F. L. Nagle was elected editor of the Haus and Herd, and Dr. J. F. Berry, of Detroit, was elected editor of the Epworth Herald.

Dr. J. M. Buckley presented the report of the committee on episcopacy. He reported the case of Dr. A. C. Bowdish against Bishop Fowler. Fitzgerald and Warren, as to his transfer from New York east to New England conference, and reviewed the case in full as given in these dispatches last night. The administration of the bishops was approved, and both was declared effective, while the committee reported in highly eulogistic terms. The committee reported in favor of missionary bishops in India, South America and Africa, but as Mr. Buckley was opposed to one in South America, Dr. Kyneth took charge of the report. Dr. Kyneth opened the debate in favor of the report. Others who spoke were Dr. Payne, of New York, Dr. Neely, of Philadelphia, and Dr. Buckley.

For two hours the question was warmly debated, and at last Dr. J. W. Hamilton moved that all of the report referring to India be referred to the judiciary committee, and that on Monday morning they report on the following questions: Can a general superintendent be excluded from presiding over any conference in any part of the world? Can two bishops be assigned to the same territory?

C. W. Manus, of New York, presented a substitute which declared it not expedient to elect missionary bishops, except for a successor for Bishop Taylor.

Dr. Leonard rose to speak and the conference then sat down on him hard. He at once denounced the action in failing to provide a bishop for Africa as a most stupendous mistake. At once Dr. Buckley was on his feet and said Dr. Leonard had no right to denounce an action taken by the conference, except under vote for reconsideration.

Bishop Warren sustained Dr. Buckley and called Dr. Leonard to order, and wild applause greeted the action. This did not satisfy Dr. Lanahan, of Baltimore, and he took his turn at Dr. Leonard, by saying he had no right to raise the question of infallibility or infallibility of the action of the conference, and Bishop Walding ruled that he was right and the conference again applauded.

As a result of the day's discussion, it was decided to elect a missionary bishop on Monday at 9 o'clock. The entire morning was consumed in argument. May 28, at 10 o'clock was fixed for final adjournment. Adjournment was taken for the day.

THE PRESBYTERIANS.

Northern Assembly Greeted By the Southern Brethren.

Saratoga, N. Y., May 23.—When the second order of the morning, the report of the committee on church temporalities, recommending the financial management of the churches by boards of deacons, was taken up, Elder McDougall, of Cincinnati, addressed the assembly in opposition to the proposal of the committee, though advocating the principle that the property of the church should be safeguarded for the purposes for which it was given. His argument was long, legal and technical, but was heard with considerable attention.

After a long discussion, occupying the remainder of the forenoon session, the report of the committee on temporalities of the church was referred back, with instructions to define the duties of trustees and deacons, and to prepare a model deed to be used in the acquisition of property for church uses.

In an interval in the debate a telegram of greeting from the Southern assembly, in session at Memphis, was read. The morning session was extended till 1 o'clock p. m. when the assembly adjourned until next Monday morning.

PROHIBITIONISTS MEET.

Advance Guard of the Water Party Assembling.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 23.—The advance guard of the 1286 delegates who will compose the National Prohibition convention to meet in this city Wednesday have arrived in Pittsburg. Part of the Maryland delegation, which will soon boom the candidacy of Joshua Levering for the head of the national ticket, came in and is quartered at the St. Charles hotel. They have with them a seemingly inexhaustible supply of Levering buttons, which they will use among the friends of the "Broad Gauge" candidate between this and the opening of the convention, and will place them, if possible, on the laps of some who are now enlisted in favor of the "Narrow Gauge" candidate, whoever he may happen to be.

Many delegates will arrive today, and when the national reform convention opens on Monday hundreds of Prohibitionists will be present as spectators. It is believed by the managers of Wednesday's convention that the attendance will exceed 15,000.

LONDON

Gay Week Was Noted in the Big Old English Capital.

Immense Amount of Money Spent Yearly For English Sports.

Mrs. Palmer Makes a Statement---The Week in the Theaters.

London, May 23.—(Copyrighted 1896 by the Associated Press.)—The past week has been the gayest of the year. It was crowded with parties of all kinds, and began with the drawing room of Monday, which was the most brilliant of the season. Never has this been such a sumptuous display of costly fabrics, laces, jewelry and flowers, and among the display of magnificent dresses there were a number of costumes embroidered with gold, silver, and even with brilliants. Owing to the fine weather the crowd on the marts around Buckingham palace was most dense, and the people were eager to see the occupants of the carriages.

The duke and duchess of Marlborough had an old-fashioned single chariot. But there was a rush to get a sight of the bride, and with great difficulty the people were kept from touching the vehicle. The young duchess bore the ordeal of being stared at for over an hour with great composure. The duke, who was one of the few men attending, wore a yeomanry uniform. In the palace the duchess of Marlborough attracted the greatest attention. She wore her wedding dress, which was ablaze with diamonds, the celebrated pearls which her mother gave her, a string of which broke in the ante room, but all save two were recovered. The society papers comment favorably upon the appearance of the duchess.

Dr. Newman Hall, father of Dr. John Hall, of New York, celebrated his 80th birthday yesterday, and received many congratulations upon the occasion. He preaches several times weekly and is an unusual and remarkably vigorous man. Charles Dickens, the son of the celebrated novelist, has been dangerously ill, but is now out of danger.

United States Ambassador Thomas F. Bayard has purchased a 100 guinea horse from the duchess of Connaught and rides it daily in the row. Mr. Bayard will spend the Whitsuntide at old Dartmouth. The newspapers here print long and favorable reviews, with copious extracts of John T. Morse's life of Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Statistics have just been published showing that £10,750,000 or $53,750,000 is the amount spent on horse racing in Great Britain yearly; £9,000,000 or $45,000,000 are spent on shooting; £5,750,000 or $28,750,000 are expended on yachting, and the cost of golf playing is reckoned at £1,000,000 or $5,000,000 and the grand total on various sports in Great Britain is £387,000,000 or $1,935,000,000 yearly.

Mr and Mrs. Potter Palmer spent some weeks in Paris at the Grand hotel, before starting for Moscow to witness the czar's coronation ceremonies. To a representative of the Associated Press, who asked her some questions regarding the reported difference between herself and W. F. Palmer, president of the Columbian exhibition, and concerning the memorial presented to the senate by Mr. Palmer, Mrs. Potter Palmer stated there had been no interruption of the friendly relations that had always existed between President Palmer and herself, and that she felt sure the document was not intended to be hostile, but was merely a renewed effort on the part of the president of the national commission to secure a status which would lead to further appropriations by congress for the editing and rewriting of the final report now ready for presentation.

It has been the yearly custom of each of the two presidents to hand personally their annual reports to the president of the United States for transmission to congress, but Mrs. Palmer out of courtesy to the president of the commission has held back her final report until he had reached some decision, or had secured another appropriation. Any statement, therefore, as to Mrs. Palmer's report is entirely without warrant, for it has neither been addressed nor presented to anyone, and she has frequently written the president of the commission that she wished to act in harmony with him regarding the presentation of final reports. Mrs. Palmer thinks there must be some mistake in the statement that President W. F. Palmer is asking from congress authority to edit her report, as this would be a very unusual proceeding and unusual power to grant.

The opera season at Coven Garden has thus far proved very successful, and the attendance has been much larger than last year. Charles Hawtrey has recently purchased a new comedy written by Miss Elliott Page and Morris Vinne and called "A Family Failure."

Beerbohm Tree has won much glory in an artistic point of view by his admirable production of "Henry IV."

John F. Armstrong, formerly assistant superintendent of the Cleveland mine, and latterly in the employ of the Minnesota Iron company. The Cleveland Cliff company is an enormous concern, employing thousands of men in its mines, forests, furnaces, chemical plants and fleets. The company was incorporated under the laws of West Virginia on account of its large holdings of lands, the amount being considerably above the limit allowed by the constitution of Michigan.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

PIONEERS

Adventures of Early Exploring Parties on the Vermilion Range.

How Tommy Walsh Got to Duluth Ahead of Joe Morall.

The First Small Sawmill Hauled to Tower By John Owens.

Tower, Minn., May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Discovery and settlement in this northern district have followed each other in the past few years with such bewildering rapidity that accounts of the early days of Tower bear all the impress of tales from ancient history. The Indian has scarcely recovered from his amazement at seeing his hunting grounds transformed into bustling towns and noisy little steamers plowing through the waters once traversed solely by his canoe. Yet, either because he is too proud to complain, or because the easily-secured firewater has dulled his sensibilities, the Indian does not seem to bear the paleface any ill-will for encroaching on his domain. Even Shaga-nosh, a big, fierce-looking native with one eye missing, who is said to have killed more than one person in his younger days, shires out for such menial work as cutting wood and digging potatoes at $1 a day and find—this last no inconsiderable item.

The vicinity of Lake Vermilion was for a number of years the scene of many sanguinary encounters between bands of Chippewa and Sioux Indians, usually ending in the defeat of the latter, and there is no record of the white man's presence until the sixties, when a trading post and a government agency were established at Sucker Point. Reports of gold on the shore of the lake attracted hundreds of people in 1866, and thousands of dollars were spent in hauling machinery and supplies through the wilderness from St. Paul. Gold-bearing veins of moderate richness were discovered, but the crude machinery could not stamp the ore at a profit. Disdaining to examine the masses of iron jutting out from the hillsides, the gold hunters abandoned their workings and for a long time the country lay neglected, save by George R. Stuntz, the veteran surveyor, who saw the immense possibilities of the ore deposit and succeeded in inducing George C. Stone, of St. Paul, to buy the land. In 1874 Eastern parties discovered magnetic iron on the Mesaba range and secured a charter for a road—the Duluth & Iron Range—together with a large grant of land, and Stone and his associates bought them out.

Nothing of importance was done until 1882, when a few men were set to work to build camps and prospect; a little, one of them being T. J. Walsh, now a citizen of Duluth. "Tommy," as he is familiarly called, landed in Duluth in the spring of 1882 with several hundred dollars in his wallet and a desire for adventure in his breast, which had not been quenched during the many vicissitudes of several years' travel with Barnum's circus. Stone & Co. were then engaging a crew for the north, and Tommy hired out, together with six or seven other men, at $45 per month and board, to work under Capt. Jack Armstrong. The trip to Tower could be made by canoeing up St. Louis and Embarass rivers, thence portaging a few miles to the head waters of Pike river, which empties into Vermilion lake, but our party "hoofed it" on the overland route and through the wilderness. The road was somewhat indifferently cut out through the woods and swamps, but the party covered the distance of 100 miles in a little less than four days. Deer and bears popped up unexpectedly at every turn of the road, but the latter made haste to get away, possibly fearing Tommy was an emissary of the great Princess T. At night the men built a roaring fire and lay down alongside it under the open sky, and as the shadows deepened packs of wolves, thirty or forty in number, gathered and circled around the little band of pioneers, approaching and receding as the fire grew alternately fresh fuel added. All night they kept up a fleshcreeping howling, and the members of the party will not soon forget their sensations on this occasion.

Arrived at their destination the first work of the men was to build log shanties and then to clear land for a garden near the lake. Charlie Sucker, Joe Sucker, An-ge-gee-sic and several other natives were hired at $40 per month and board to help the white men, and they made good workmen. They ate with the others, but for sanitary reasons were obliged to sleep in a shanty by themselves. The Indians were more honest and reliable than they are now, after a longer contact with civilization, and on the occasional wash days the men could hang their apparel on the bushes to dry with no fear of its being stolen. The natives always insisted on being paid in silver, and absolutely refused paper money. Their preference for the white metal arose from the fact that the government sometimes presented medals to the prominent chiefs and braves, and these were usually of silver.

Among the red men of the party was one who had lived at Sault Ste. Marie for some time and learned considerable of the white man's ways, as Mr. Walsh found out once to his aggravation. He had occasion to make a trip in the woods of several days' duration, and took along the aforesaid Indian for company and to do the hard work. Tommy is naturally sociable and did his best to strike up a conversation with the native, but, with the stoicism of his race, the latter preserved a dignified silence, which our friend mistook for ignorance of English, and forthwith mustered up his stock of Chippewa words and disjointed phrases, with a little profanity thrown in for emphasis. Even this elicited few words, in reply, but Tommy kept bravely at it for several days. Judge of his surprise and anger when one evening after supper the red man suddenly broke out into a rollicking Irish song, with an excellent imitation of an Irishman's brogue! "You ——— ——!" said Tommy, and for the remainder of the journey preserved a disgusted silence.

A short distance away was the camp of Capt. Harry Harvey (who later discovered the Chandler mine) and it seems that the explorers of each camp found a rich looking lead on some vacant government land about the same time. At sunrise one morning it became known in the rival camp that Capt. Harvey had sent a man off at daylight to Duluth to secure the tract at the land office. Capt. Armstrong asked for volunteers to overtake and get ahead of Harvey's man, promising $200 to the man who should prove successful. Mr. Walsh jumped at the offer, and stopping only to pick up a blanket, a frying pan, some bacon, coffee, flour and his instructions, he entered upon the 100-mile race.

He had traveled about seventeen miles when he caught up with his opponent, Joe Morall, a stout, active Frenchman, born and raised in the woods, and accustomed to a walk of forty miles a day. They traveled along together for a time, but as the Frenchman seemed to be meditating upon something, the conversation grew slack. Suddenly the latter burst out with: "You little devil, I know what you're after! I kill you before you get to Duluth!" However, as afterwards turned out, Morall erred in not killing Tommy on the spot. Then the pace increased, each running as far as possible, then walking a few miles, stopping occasionally to cook a little coffee and bacon or to snatch an hour's rest, sometimes the Irishman ahead, other times the Frenchman. Approaching Cloquet river, which is twenty-two miles from Duluth, Morall spurted and took the lead. When he arrived at the crossing, a primitive bridge of two trees felled across the stream, he cooked some bacon and lay down to sleep on the bridge, thinking that Tommy would awaken him in getting across. But when the latter came up, he silently surveyed the sleeping Horatius and concluded by making a detour and swimming the stream. Being pretty tired, Morall did not wake up for several hours, and leisurely pursued his trip, only to find he was three hours too late at the land office. Stone & Co having laid scrip on the tract. They increased Mr. Walsh's reward to $250, and in addition granted him a three weeks' vacation on full pay.

In the fall of 1883 John Owens hauled over the road from Duluth a small sawmill having a capacity of 30,000 feet a day, to supply the increasing needs of the settlement for lumber. The majority of the natives had never before seen machinery of any kind, and they viewed the erection of the mill with great interest and wonder. The day when it was ready to cut lumber was a gala occasion for the pioneers of the little settlement, and when the Indians heard the whistle for the first time every buck, squaw and pappoose left the reservation to come over and take a cautious look at the white man's devil. While they were crowding around, someone for a joke, blew the whistle, whereupon all ran off in great fright and it was long before they could be induced to approach the mill again.

There were neither stores nor saloons in the place, and as the men had no opportunity to spend their money, they kept at work till each had accumulated a "big stake." On one occasion an Indian and a half-breed packed in from Duluth a small keg of whisky, which was bought and soon drunk by the men working at the mining explorations, two miles distant. Fortified by the exhilarating liquid, the six or seven men marched over to the lumber camp with the avowed intention of cleaning it out, although outnumbered two to one. Greatly surprised, the undaunted lumbermen seized hold of any handy weapon to repel the invaders. One had a crowbar, another a neck yoke, both doing great execution, while one lumberjack hit a miner with a pail of ice and knocked him senseless. Things began to look serious, when John Owens happily appeared on the scene and succeeded in patching up a truce between the combatants.

Goods for the camp were brought from Duluth by a regularly employed crew of packers, who carried on their shoulders an average of 100 pounds each and were paid from $3 to $5 per day. Moose, deer, rabbits and partridge were frequently supplied to the camp, together with wild rice harvested by the Indians. The rice grows in rivers and shallow bays and the native runs his light birch bark canoe right into it, while his squaw grasps a handful of stalks and beats off the rice with a stick. To clean it, or rather to thresh it, a hole about three feet deep and half that in diameter is dug in the sand filled with rice, and an active Indian removing his moccasins, gets into the pit and keeps up a vigorous stamping until the grain is clean—according to their ideas. Those who are accustomed to it prefer the wild rice to the cultivated, as it is larger and sweeter, but the manner of threshing does not commend it to one who has witnessed the operation.

MINERS SUFFERING.

Disgusted Alaska Gold Seekers Are Returning.

Victoria, B. C., May 23.—Capt. Meyer, of the steamer Danube, which has just returned from a trip to Sitka, reports that suffering among the miners, prospectors and others is prevalent at Cook's Inlet. The steamer Bertha had just arrived at Sitka from the inlet, bringing down many who had gone there with the idea of making there fortunes. They could stand it no longer. The weather has been bitterly cold and there is not sufficient accommodation for the men.

However, many are holding out, and despite bad reports, others are going in. On her return trip the Bertha took up 150 men who are going better provided than their predecessors. Those who came down on the Bertha say there is a lot of suffering ahead for those at the inlet.

TUESDAY

That is the Day Proclaimed For the Coronation of the Czar.

Formal Announcement of the Date Made in Moscow This Morning.

Another Day of Splendor and Celebration For the Sightseers.

Moscow, May 23.—The date of the coronation of the czar, May 26, was formally proclaimed by the heralds to the people at 9 o'clock this morning, and the ceremony will be repeated tomorrow and on Monday. A strong detachment of cavalry surrounded the approaches to the kremlin and the general commanding stood in the middle, and facing the troops around him, and all wearing rich costumes, were the secretaries of the senate, aides de camp, the several masters of the coronation ceremonies, pursuivants and heralds.

At a given signal, the heralds blew a loud blast on their trumpets, the people bowed their heads and the secretary of state read the following proclamation: "Our most august, most high and most mighty sovereign, having ascended the hereditary throne of the empire of all the Russias, and of the kingdom of Poland, and of the Grand Duchy of Finland, which is inseparable from it, has been pleased to ordain, in imitation of all his predecessors and glorious ancestors, that the sacred solemnity of the coronation and consecration of his imperial majesty, which his majesty wills that his august consort shall share do (by the grace of the Almighty) take place on the 26th of May.

"By the present proclamation, therefore, this solemn act is announced to all the faithful subjects of his majesty, to the end that on the auspicious day they may send up to the King of Kings, their most fervent prayers and implore the Almighty One to extend the favor of His blessing to the reign of his majesty the maintenance of peace and tranquility, to the very great glory of his Holy name and to the unchanging weal of the empire."

The above proclamation was printed on folio vellum, beautifully illuminated, and adorned with the arms, monogram and insignia of the emperor. Copies were scattered through the crowd, and there was a wild scramble ensued to obtain possession of them.

On May 25, the day before the coronation, the ceremony of transferring the regalia to the throne room of the kremlin, will take place and on the same day their majesties will remove from the Alexandrinsky palace to the Grand Kremlin palace. A special mass will be celebrated during the evening in all the churches. The coronation will take place in the cathedral of the Assumption, the most sacred place in the Russian empire.

Prince Lobanoff-Rostovsky, the Russian minister of foreign affairs, gave a ball party yesterday evening, at which all the imperial and foreign princes and special envoys and members of the diplomatic corps, etc., were present. The scene was a brilliant one and the festivities lasted until very late.

THE DAKOTAS.

NORTH DAKOTA.

The supreme court at Bismarck has handed down two decisions, the first being in the action brought by James Elton, assignee of E. T. Spafford vs. M. J. O'Connor, as sheriff of Grand Forks county, an appeal from the decision of Judge Templeton, who held that the insolvency law of the state was unconstitutional. The decision is reversed, the court holding that part of the law is constitutional. This is victory for the assignee. The other opinion was in the case of Homer E. Sargent, appellant, vs. Charles C. Kindred, respondent; an appeal from Cass county. The decision of Judge McConnell is reversed and an order entered denying the motion to vacate judgment. Both opinions are by Judge Corliss.

The state tuition fund for the current quarter apportioned by the department of public instruction at Bismarck is $2,725.04, a rate per capita of $1.08 for each of the 67,338 pupils of school age in the state. Burleigh county, with 1362 school population, receives $1472.04; Cass county, with 6614 population, receives $7143.12; Grand Forks county, with an enumeration of 6241, receives $6711.32; Walsh county, $6626.04; Pembina, $6123.96; Richland, $3880.20. This fund is raised by a special tax, and is used in paying the salaries of teachers in different counties. State Superintendent Bates has issued a circular letter to all of the county superintendents in the state, requesting their co-operation with the G. A. R. in the observance of Memorial day.

Albert Brawn, said to be the son of Capt. A. A. Brown, of Alexandria, was arrested in Fargo in company with Frank Lavaston. Young Brown claims he was induced to leave home by Laviston, and they have stolen a number of bicycles and had planned carry on their work here. Brown's father will arrive this afternoon.

The State Medical society is in session at Wahpeton. There is a large attendance and several valuable papers are to be read. A banquet will be tendered the society by the board of trade at the Merchants tonight.

Burglars entered the Northern Pacific depot at Pingree and stole $250.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

The grandest pageant ever seen in this state and one never surpassed in the Northwest will be given by the Mystic Shrine at Sioux Falls on Monday. The secretary has already received letters from twenty towns in Minnesota and Iowa accepting invitations, and others are coming in each day. It is now certain that fully 500 Shriners will be here, and most of them will bring their wives. El Kahir temple, of Cedar Rapids, will send forty members, and there will be fully fifty more from Sioux City, the latter accompanied by the celebrated Fourth Regiment band. Altogether Sioux City will send up 150 people. Two special trains will be run from that city. The nobles of El Rid temple are exerting themselves to far surpass any of their previous efforts. They have forty candidates to initiate, and may increase the class to fifty. Ringling Bros.' circus will be here on that date, and the five Ringlings' being themselves Shriners, have agreed to turn over their entire show for the parade. All the animals, riding horses, bands, chariots, paraphernalia and performers will be utilized by the Shrine. Everything connected with the show which can be made to add to the pageant will be in line. Besides this the paraphernalia owned by the local temple is most gorgeous, and several other bands will be in line. The Shriners in full regalia will attend the performance in the afternoon. In the evening will come the grand parade, and later the initiation and banquet. The Shriners will all wear their fezzes continually during the stay in the city, and all will be most liberally entertained.

The program for the coming state firemen's tournament, which will be held in Canton on June 17 and 18, has just been issued from the headquarters. The indications point to a large attendance of firemen and to a most successful meet.

Dryer weather has helped the crops materially and things look better than they did a week ago in the southern parts of the state.

A detachment of troops left Kalivas on Thursday in order to attempt the relief of the besieged soldiers, but the relieving force was attacked by the insurgents and compelled to return to Kalivas and suffered heavy loss.

The troops have only sufficient food to last them a couple more days.

Twenty-Fifth Wedding Anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Lauerman Celebrated.

Serenade By the Band and a Dance at Great Eastern Hall.

Fine Presents Presented to Them---Jubilee Singers' Concert.

The twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Lauerman occurred yesterday, and the friends of the happily mated couple celebrated the occasion by a grand surprise party last evening. The first intimation of the jubilee was given when the American Brass band serenaded Mr. and Mrs. Lauerman at their home on Central avenue about 9 o'clock in the evening. After some excellent music was rendered, those to whom the honor was given were invited to Gilley's hall, where the found their friends congregated ready to receive them. They were then presented by A. J. Fillatrault in behalf of those present with a cake basket, tea set, butter dish and spoons.

Hurlbert's orchestra had been secured for the occasion and it was the intention to dance in the hall, but the crowd was so large that an adjournment was taken to Great Eastern hall, where several hours were spent in dancing. Refreshments were served in the Gilley hall from 10 p. m. to 4 a. m., and among the feast of good things was a 43-pound wedding cake made and presented by Mrs. Humphrey Jones. To Mesdames Kreidler, Albright and Wolser, the latter of Aberdeen, S. D., are entitled special praise for the management and success of the affair. About 250 guests were present from Duluth, West Duluth and Superior.

A FORT FOR LONDON.

The veritable battle of Dorking is to be seriously anticipated after all, says the Pall Mall Gazette. It is many months now since we heard that the line of the Surrey Downs was to be provided with forts for the defense of London, and most of us were of opinion that the scheme had been shelved, at all events for the present. But such is not the case. The strategical advantages of Box Hill have been considered to be more important to the nation than its picturesque possibilities for picnickers. During the last few weeks some five acres on the top of the well-known bluff that looks down upon Dorking have been cleared of their trees and brushwood as a preliminary to the construction of a powerful fort. Happily, in England, we do not fuss about our military defenses to the extent of keeping the public at a preposterous distance away from them. Bank holiday folk will still be able to enjoy the view from Box Hill, and will still have sufficient foliage for picnic purposes. And it may be that the stern fort on so peaceful a site may be a useful object lesson for them as well.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

THE pain that sometimes strikes a man at the most inopportune moment is due to indigestion. It may come in the midst of a dinner and make the feast a mockery. It is a reminder that he may not eat what he chooses, nor when he chooses. He is a slave to the weakness of his stomach. A man's health and strength depend upon what he gets out of his food. This depends on his digestion. Constipation stops digestion. Remove the obstruction by taking Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They are a positive cure for constipation and its attendant ills—headaches, sour stomach, flatulence, dizziness, biliousness and "heartburn." The "Pellets" are very gentle in their action. They simply assist nature. They give no violent wrench to the system. They cause no pain, nor griping.

Send 21 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only, and receive free a copy of Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

THE PRODUCE MARKET.

Bouncing big market today: lots of everything except poultry. Prices were favorable and trade was brisk. It was so cold the buyers had to hustle to keep warm. ADVANCED

The Wheat Market Today Was Strong and Active But Nervous.

Heavy Rains and Floods in the Dakotas Caused an Advance.

The Chicago Market Was on a Level With Foreign Prices.

The wheat market was active, nervous but strong here today. The opening was firm, due principally to the reports of heavy rains and floods in the Dakotas and consequent damage to growing grain. According to accounts from the Red River valley, that lately fruitful territory should now be styled Red River lake. There was a feeling of heaviness, however, which was principally the result of a general indisposition among the traders to believe in danger to the winter wheat crop that is worth taking notice of, whether from Hessian fly, chinch bugs, army worms or any other creeping or flying thing. The Argentine shipments for the week were raised by cable at 880,000 bus, as compared with 1,648,000 bus for the similar week of the year before. The week's shipments of wheat and flour from both coasts amounted to only 4,000,000 bus, against 1,903,000 bus on the week before. The clearances for the last twenty-four hours from the Atlantic ports were 224,000 bus, which included 27,000 bbls of flour. Minneapolis and Duluth receipts were 385 cars, against 287 a week ago and 277 on the corresponding day of the previous week.

July opened 1c higher at 61¾c and advanced sharply to 61¾c. It touched 61⅝c, and then eased off to 61¼c, but later the bears found they had sold too freely and began to cover, on discovering that the Chicago market was on a level with foreign prices. The result was a quick advance from 61¼c to 61⅝c, at which it held steady to the close. September started at 61⅝c, advanced to 62c, reacted to 61¾c, sold up to 62⅛c and finally dropped back to 62c. The mills bought 25,000 bus to arrive, 14c under July, and shippers took 40,000 bus at 1c under July. The close was 5c higher all round than yesterday. Following were the closing prices:

Wheat—No. 1 hard, cash, 62¾c; May, 62⅝c; July, 63¾c. No. 1 northern, cash, 61¾c; May, 61¾c; June, 61¾c; July, 61¾c; September, 62⅛c. No. 2 northern, cash, 59⅝@59⅞c. No. 3, 56⅝@57⅝c. GOSSIP.

Received over private wire of B. E. Baker, grain and stock broker, room 107 Chamber of Commerce and 307 Board of Trade, Chicago, May 23.—There are many traders who feel that wheat will sell lower on the general business depression, but the conditions and statistics are such that they are disinclined to take the short side at the present low prices, consequently the fluctuations are of a scalping character, each advance meeting with free selling and each decline with enough buying to turn the market within narrow limits. Wheat advanced 5c a year ago today and operators had that in mind. Trade was narrow and the close firm and higher on reported sale of two cargoes of wheat for direct export from here. This started buying by several leading operators which caught the scalping crowd short. Crop news was of an unimportant character today, and being a holiday in England we were without our usual cable news. It is expected that the visible will not show much change.

Corn and oats ruled dull.

Provisions less active than yesterday and with some good buying by shorts who are profiting by yesterday's decline.

Puts, July wheat, 60½@60¾c.

Calls, July wheat, 60½@61½-¾c.

NEW YORK STOCKS.

Moderate Trading But Firm at Opening.

New York, May 23.—The stock market as a whole opened firm on a moderate volume of business. Manhattan was the feature, and purchases rose 1¾ to 106¾. Sugar and Tobacco were actively traded in and gained slight fractions. Speculation displayed decided strength after 11 o'clock, with considerable activity in industrial groups. General Electric was in brisk request and orse 2¾ per cent to 36½. Cordage greatly improved and Consolidated Gas ¼ per cent. The railroad list stiffened fractionally, with the grangers and Louisville & Nashville most prominent.

Activity subsided in the final hour, but prices were well mantained and further improvements occurred in some instances. Manhattan rose to 107¼ and Southern preferred advanced 1¾ per cent to 31, but did not retain the gain. Laclede Gas was exceptionally weak, selling off 1¾@ er cent to 25¼. Tobacco also exhibited heaviness in the closing dealings and scored an equal loss. The speculation left off irregular, but at slight gains generally. The aggregate sales were 83,100 shares.

THE MAN BEHIND THE MASK.

The Herald reproduced yesterday an article from the Minneapolis Journal which very clearly explained the paramount issue of the present gubernatorial campaign. The Journal has followed it up with a clever cartoon representing ex-Governor Merriam as "the man behind the mask"—the mask in this case bearing the well-known features of Governor David M. Clough. The Herald has repeatedly pointed out to its readers the relations which Mr. Merriam sustains to the pending campaign and the political game that he is playing—that the Merriam-Bixby machine may perpetuate its control of the Republican state conventions and the Republican state central committee, as well as the state patronage at the governor's disposal, and with the aid of this power place William R. Merriam in the United States senate. The machine's candidate for governor is David M. Clough, and his nomination would go a long distance towards placing the machine in a position to carry out these plans.

The Journal very correctly says that the people who are opposed to machine rule in this state want to get very clearly before their minds' eye that in this campaign it is no so much David Clough as W. R. Merriam who pulls the strings and manipulates the wires, plans the campaign and marshals the forces, and it adds: "Let there be no clouding of issues, or mistaking the enemy, or underestimating of the serious business at hand. The issue has been made up. It is a fight for life with a little coterie who have dictated Republican politics in this state, and they may be expected to make the contest desperate and sanguinary. Let it be so. The Republicans of Minnesota who are opposed to the perpetuation of the Merriam dynasty, and are ready to unite for the redemption of the party from boss rule in this state, must get together now if ever upon the one common ground of honest politics and fair dealing, and administer to the old ring such a defeat that Merriamism—and that is a term which is so well understood in this state that it needs not to be explained—will be forever banished from the Republican politics of Minnesota. Of course, in order to do this the first step is to defeat David Clough for governor. He stands not so much for himself as for the principle and the methods which have made him what he is in order that those who have made him may advance themselves to still greater power."

Two years ago the Republicans of St. Louis county defeated the local machine which had dictated the Republican politics of this county. For practically the first time in the history of St. Louis county the masses of the Republican party controlled the primaries and ran the conventions, and the bosses were relegated to the rear, the machine overthrown and its minions trampled in the dust. The Minnesota Iron company's political manager was given notice that its dictation of Republican politics in this county must cease, and that the people proposed to rule in the party's conventions.

Today the old machine and the old bosses are making a fight to regain the political power they then lost. They have always been par and parcel of the Merriam-Bixby machine, and today they are working hand in glove with Merriam, Bixby & Co. to secure the nomination of David Clough. With the aid of the state officeholders here, some of whom fought the machine two years ago, they are now hoping to be successful. Will the Republicans of St. Louis county permit their plans to succeed? Will they remain passive and allow the Minnesota Iron company's political boss to again install himself as the dictator of Republican politics in this county? Will they stand idly by and let him deliver the vote of this county in the Republican state convention to the Merriam-Bixby-Clough machine? The Herald does not believe that the Republican voters of the county will permit the re-establishment of this obnoxious bossship and thus lose the fruits of the great victory they achieved two years ago. A victory for the machine now would be a serious blow to the political future of Mr. Towne, and his hosts of earnest, true and devoted friends cannot afford to let the machine triumph.

Mr. Merriam has done all within his power to foment discord in the Sixth district and defeat Mr. Towne for renomination. If he could get a Clough delegation from St. Louis county he would point to it as evidence that Mr. Towne's strength had waned, and would renew his efforts toward stirring up strife throughout the district. Mr. Merriam is the man behind the Clough mask—the man behind the old machine now seeking to rehabilitate itself in St. Louis county—and it behooves the Republican voters of this county to do their duty and send a strong Lee delegation to St. Paul and a strong Towne delegation to St. Cloud.

ON WHICH SIDE?

Where does Congressman Towne stand in the fight for the governorship? Upon which side does he intend to take his place? Is he for Lee or is he for Clough and the Merriam machine?

The Herald insists that the Republicans of St. Louis county have a right to demand that Mr. Towne shall state his position and that they have the further right to demand that he shall maintain no neutral, lukewarm attitude in the great fight that is now in progress to defeat the obnoxious machine that has been ditching the Republican politics of this state and is now seeking to maintain its power and add insult to injury by sending Banker Merriam to the United States senate.

Mr. Towne cannot afford to remain silent at this juncture. The date for the state convention has been fixed, the dates for the county primaries and convention will soon be setted, and the time has arrived when all Republicans must align themselves on one side or the other. The Herald does not believe that Mr. Towne can longer refuse to indicate his preference, without doing injury to himself politically. It is well known that great pressure has been brought to bear upon him to preserve a neutral attitude and the argument has been used that he should not mix himself up with this fight. This has been the argument chiefly used by some professed friends of his in Duluth, who have been dangling at his coat tails solely with the object of securing some federal or state office by reason of the prominence given to them by their relations to him. These men are supporting Clough, some openly and some secretly, and they are in daily consultation with the boss of the political machine which fought Mr. Towne two years ago in this county and would fight him today if they saw any prospect of success. As they are now training with this "gang," these professed friends of Mr. Towne have forfeited all right to be longer considered worthy of his confidence, nor should he for one moment listen to the interested advice which they are so freely offering to him.

The rank and file of the Republican party in this county look to Mr. Towne to again lead them to a victory over the political bosses who ruled here for years. They are surprised that Mr. Towne has remained silent so long, particularly as Mr. Lee is securing the almost solid support of the rest of the Sixth district and is in a position to ensure the renomination of Mr. Towne by acclamation. Now that the campaign has reached a point when every one must indicate his choice, they naturally expect that Mr. Towne will take an active part in the fight. In their behalf, The Herald insists that Mr. Towne shall speak out in no doubtful manner. Is he for Lee or is he for Clough and the Merriam machine?

Referring to a recent letter written by Chairman Harrity, of the Democratic national committee, saying that he does not think President Cleveland would take a renomination, but that he is sure the sound money men will control the Chicago convention, the Boston Transcript says: "This calls to mind the old 1840 story, when a Democratic stumper from New York city was making the wilds of Maine ring with Van Buren eloquence. He had finished his assault upon the Whig party, and his eulogium of the independent treasury, but he said that he couldn't close without saying a few words upon the prospects of Mr. Van Buren's re-election. In that matter the party orator declared, "I am instructed to tell you that Massachusetts will go for Van Buren by 20,000 majority and New York, Van Buren's own state, will support him by 40,000 majority, but where in hell the votes are coming from, I am not instructed to say." Probably Mr. Harrity could say the same thing with regard to the majority of sound money delegates in the next Democratic national convention, "I am not instructed to say where these delegates are coming from."

THE COST OF EMPIRE.

Colonial empire comes high, but nearly all the European countries think that it is necessary, even if expensive. Colonies must be protected, and this necessitates the maintenance of a large and costly navy by every country that possesses dependencies. The people of England, Scotland and Ireland are heavily taxed on this account. It matters not how small the colony is, it must be protected from the attacks of enemies, and when the colonies are scattered all over the world, as are the British dependencies, an immense navy, in addition to a large standing army, is necessary. The colonies do not contribute to the maintenance of the navy and army, and the result is that the people of the mother country must bear the entire cost. Not only is this true of the British empire, but of all countries which have acquired colonial possessions.

The first cost of empire, therefore, says a writer in Harper's Weekly, is involved in the expense of a navy; and that this is the true annual expenses of a navy may be compared with the territorial expanse to be protected. Germany has entered upon colonial enterprise more recently than France, and its possessions are of less extent; yet its navy costs each year nearly $18,000,000. France, with two and a half times the extent of colonial territory, appropriates $40,000,000 for the same purpose. The United Kingdom spends less proportionately in naval expenses, but is obliged to expend $70,000,000 a year, and is in perpetual fear lest its naval efficiency fall below a strength necessary to cope with the ambitions and jealousies of other powers. If Italy and Russia be included, the total expenditure in an ordinary year on this arm of the service is $200,000,000, and in an extraordinary year, under the influence of a war scare, half as much again may be appropriated to build and equip new ships, a measure which involves additional expenditures in many directions.

A similar estimate of the cost of the army would give an even greater sum. For every dollar annually spent on the navy three are expended on the army, and the five powers named pay out for the service $600,000,000 each year. Of this one-half may be considered as necessary for home defence and to cover the educational advantages incident to the system; the other half may be set down as the requirements for imperial defence. If we allow one-third of the naval expenditure and one-half of the military expenditure for what the nation as distinguished from the empire requires, there remains an expenditure of $400,000,000 each year of peace above what would be called for were the powers of Europe to confine their activities to the home sphere and not undertake political responsibilities in distant parts.

The facts and figures given above may possibly cause those who are clamoring for the annexation of Hawaii and Cuba, and the establishment of a colonial empire by this country, to pause and reflect what a great expense such a policy would entail, and what an immense addition would be made to the taxes of the people here.

Some of the country papers that are being bamboozled by Bob Dunn's "grand stand plays" into believing that he is such a great friend of the common people as against the corporations will find out some day that Bob is not in the game "for his health." A tricky, slippery politician, always ready to betray his friends, he will stoop to any demagogic device to advance Bob Dunn's interests.

A Washington dispatch says that the impression among Democrats there is rapidly growing that the silver men will capture the Chicago convention, and that ex-Governor Boies, of Iowa, will be their nominee, with some Southern man like Senator Daniel for vice president. It appears from information received at Washington that Indiana and Ohio will both go for free coinage, regardless of the efforts of the administration to prevent it.

Lee is the Sixth district's candidate for governor, and St. Louis county Republicans should stand with the rest of the district in urging his nomination. A clean, able candidate, fought bitterly by the Merriam machine, he should receive this county's hearty support.

Alden J. Blethen, who has had a meteoric career in the newspaper business at Minneapolis, has removed to Denver, where he has purchased an interest in the Times, the leading afternoon paper of that city.

There will be a less number of colored men as delegates from the South to the St. Louis convention than at any previous Republican national convention since the war.

There will be a battle royal between the Clough and Clapp forces in Ramsey county, but if Mose Clapp does not come out ahead The Herald will miss its guess.

Senator Daniel, of Virginia, has announced that he will not support President Cleveland for a third term, even if he should be nominated.

The Sauk Center Herald wears the Merriam collar. It endorses him for a seat in Mr. McKinley's cabinet, should one be formed.

Platt and Quay are said to have quarreled. When the bosses fall out, the common people may have a chance to win.

There is nothing to indicate that Mr. McKinley killed "the fatted calf," when Matt Quay visited Canton yesterday.

No man—not even a congressman—can afford to remain neutral in the pending gubernatorial fight.

Lee for governor and Towne for congress is a good enough ticket for Sixth district Republicans.

You get all the news when you read The Herald.

WILLIAM E. LEE.

Candidate of the Sixth District For Governor.

NOT VERY EFFECTIVE.

Biwabik Range: A sensational sheet published at Superior has undertaken the task of regulating affairs in the mines of Minnesota. And all that is asked in return is a dollar from each of the laborers. This long distance regulating is generally not very effective especially when the regulator is without influence or standing.

ALL FIGHTING LEE.

Sauk Center Herald: It strikes one as a little strange that the Clough papers and the Clough workers reserve the heaviest of their ammunition for Lee. In a column of clippings from the state press selected by and printed in a Clough organ, all but one of the dozen or more excerpts were aimed at Mr. Lee. And no wonder. The present administration feels, and some of its friends do not hesitate to say, that with Mr. Lee out of the way Mr. Clough's nomination would be assured, and that without much expenditure of labor.

MEANT WHAT HE SAID.

Delano Eagle: The editor of the Eagle has sufficient personal acquaintance with Mr. Towne to know that he meant what he said in his interview concerning the St. Louis platform. Mr. Towne is a young man of more than ordinary brilliancy as a statesman and whatever of private opinion he may entertain on a given question he is broad enough and charitable enough to waive it in favor of the will of the grand party he represents. The attempts of "Jerry J." to belittle Mr. Towne are falling short of the mark.

CHANGING TO LEE.

Todd County News: The change of sentiment from the machine to Lee is steady and from now on it will increase. The people want a man for governor who will give them a business-like economic administration.

STRONGLY ENDORSED.

Sauk Center Herald: The strong endorsement which Mr. Lee's candidacy meets with throughout the state is gratifying to his friends. There is nothing local about it; from every section of the state he gains fresh assurances of vigorous and effective support day by day. The result of the convention will justify the confidence in Mr. Lee's candidacy.

MAKING FRIENDS.

Delano Eagle: Charles A. Towne is making friends every day by his work.

FOR A GOOD REASON.

Osakis Review: Everybody knows that the election of Clough governor would mean the perpetuation of the Merriam machine and for that reason, with several others just as good, the rank and file of the Republicans of Minnesota are going to lay Clough out in the nominating convention.

WILL PLAY WITH HIBBING.

S. J. P. Lackie, better known as "Doc" Lackie, left today for Hibbing where he has been promised steady employment by the managers of the Hibbing baseball club, for which organization he will hold down the second bag. He will open with that club against the Virginia team tomorrow. "Doc's" coaching has been one of the features of ball games in Duluth, and the fans on grand stand and bleachers will miss him.

ACROSS THE TEA TABLE.

There is a golden glory over field and lawn, the sunshine of the earth, these little yellow headed dandelions, which are "like the poor folks' children, the world they overrun." We may call them pests and spend time and money in an endeavor to rid our lawns of their presence, but there is no two ways about it, they are beautiful. Because they are a nuisance and obnoxious weeds we lose sight of their beauty and do not recognize the fact that they are but fulfilling the law of their being. To the eye of the botanist they are a wonder and delight. Nature has made such a wise provision for their propagation, and after the golden bloom has had its little day, there is a misty ghost upon the flower stalk, a dream of yesterday's blossom, and that "wandering wind of destiny" lifts the fragile bits of down weighted by a seed and carries them off to pastures new. To that woman who rode many weary miles on a wide prairie, the sight of a dandelion blooming near the trail was like a word from civilization and home. She stooped to pick it with more joy than many of us would feel in receiving a rare hot house bloom. She carried seeds with her to plant in the distant frontier post to which she was going, and she could faithfully endorse pretty words about the dandelion without a thought of poetic license.

We have heard and read of so much discussion as to the national flower, that one might almost suggest the dandelion as an emblem. It is a lowly weed, but there is indomitable push and energy and "hustle" about it, all attributes of the true American. It grows in the crevice of the stone pavements of the city upon which the hot suns beat with the same degree of life and vigor that it shows in the woodland pastures. It is not daunted by cruel neglect or harsh treatment, it only puts forth new energy and fresher struggles for existence. Boston has started the columbine association, and the dainty little leaflets gotten out by the columbine admirers are a very attractive plea for its adoption as the national and emblematic flower. There is a great deal to be said on its behalf. With the exception of a very small region about the Lower Mississippi, it grows wild in every state of the Union from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from Canada to the Gulf. It blossoms profusely. There is a great range in color and variety, and its name suggests Columbia. It has a very beautiful leaf and an extremely graceful flower. The odor is fleeting and not particularly pleasant, but that is true of many of the native flowers. The plea for its adoption is quite as good if not better than that of many others.

It is a delight to know and believe that that which appeals but to the love of the beautiful in us, has also utilitarian properties. I once heard a sordid old farmer inveighing against his wife's flowers, growling over the waste of time which she snatched from heavy household cares to spend upon them. He ended up by giving as a reason for his distrust of their fair beauty that, "they ain't no use, there ain't no bread or meat in them." Had she but known that she might triumphantly cry "health" to him, it is doubtful whether he would have believed; but science has come to the rescue and asserts that blooming flowers supply ozone to the atmosphere. It is said that the odor from blooming plants is powerful enough to kill certain kinds of microbes, and that essences and perfumes obtained from flowers also will destroy these. The essence of cinnamon will, it is said, destroy the typhoid fever germ, and the odor of it is a lavender antiseptic. The odor of lavender will drive away noxious insects, mosquitoes and flies and the like. Here is a use for those beautiful silver-topped bottles for salts which charm the dollars out of your pocket. Fill one of them with lavender salts, and set it slightly uncorked in your library or sitting room, and be free from the buz which stingeth in darkness. The odor of lavender brings to mind with a rush of remembrance, a certain corner of a certain street in a certain city of long ago. On warm May days, an old man stood at that corner with a basket of dried lavender flowers. The odor was perceptible for squares around, and so subtly sweet that I used to go down town just to get a whiff of it. Those flowers were purchased really in large quantities to lay among the treasures of the linen closet, and probably the practice arose in ancient times, not alone for the pleasure the odor gave but, perhaps, that odor was a useful antiseptic. So many of the old-fashioned ways had a raison d'etre. Our grandmothers were more skilled in using nature's provisions than are we, and many of their thrifty ways bear the searchlight of science very well.

Flowers, as the old farmer said, are neither bread nor meat, but fashion is bringing them very near to the bread part of the duo. The pungent, biting, peppery leaves of the nasturtium are very swell to use as sandwiches. Very thin buttered slices of brown bread are used, with the leaves laid between, with a rich, creamy mayonnaise. Sandwiches are such an important item on the tea table, luncheon table, in the picnic basket, and for chafing dish suppers, that the ingenious housekeeper is continually seeking something new. We have tried the fruit sandwich and pronounced it good; jam and sweetmeats have also been found acceptable; mayonnaise and lettuce, and pounded nuts and mayonnaise; dates pounded very fine, after being freed of their stones, are very good; in fact there is scarcely a limit to the ingredients of which a sandwich can be concocted. It is always better made of graham or whole wheat bread, although made of white bread it looks daintier and prettier. Many sandwiches are rolled and tied with baby ribbon. To roll the bread successfully the outer crust should be cut off with a very sharp knife, leaving the soft inner portion, which will not break or tear if the bread is slightly stale. When devilled ham or tongue is used it is very much nicer if the meat is taken from the can and seasoned with chopped pickles or olives, and a small portion of vinegar poured on it to wet it. If the vinegar which has been on the cucumber pickles is nicely seasoned, it is especially good to mix this in the meat, molding it in with a wooden spoon, making a thick paste to spread on the bread.

To make house plants grow, saturate the earth around them every day with the coffee left over from breakfast. Now that is rather a good plan, and has a suggestion of economy in it which appeals to the thrifty soul of the woman who allows nothing to go to waste, and yet I must confess one would scarcely crave the odor of stale coffee in the atmosphere of the sitting room. There is no more penetrating odor than that of coffee, and after following the learned professor's advice a few days, I am quite sure there would be a constant exhalation from the coffee saturated earth. If your pet economy is coffee grounds, and your nose not offended by odors, then try this plan. I suppose there is no more true assertion in regard to the traits of humanity than that which Mrs. Gaskell brings out in that delightfully quaint and charming old story, "Crawford," that every one has a pet economy. Some people save up strings, candle ends, and small bits of butter, we are told. Perhaps yours is coffee-grounds. Well, here is a use for them. A London florist advises milk and water instead of water for washing off the leaves of the palm. It gives them a beautiful gloss, and prevents the appearance of the disfiguring brown spots. And if you wish red or violet flowers to assume a brilliant hue, cover the earth in the pots with half an inch of pulverized charcoal. These are valuable hints, which may also be used for the outdoor growth of pot plants as well as for those which we keep in the house. Just now is a good time to get the ferns which you wish for next winter in the house. There is no more satisfactory bit of green plant life than the fern, and none which better repays care. Do not take the hot-house ferns for cultivation in the house. It is a thankless job. They refuse always to thrive, and droop and pine for the damp moist atmosphere which they have left. Go to the woods, and one need not go far here. Secure the good roots, the fronds are just uncurling now, and you can tell the strong, healthy looking bunch of roots, carry them carefully so that the fresh fronds are not bruised and transplant them to your garden, giving them as much as possible the same conditions in which they grew in the woods. If in a damp, shady place, select such a place in your garden; if in the broad sunlight, give it just such a position when transplanting. Though few ferns, take entirely either dampness or sunshine. Bring as much of the native earth with you as you can, and in the autumn, when the leaves drop off, put the fern roots and earth into pots or boxes and let them severely alone for a while, allowing the rest the fern craves. After a season begin to water, and give some good liquid fertilizer. Set it in the winter window, protected from cold, and and you will feel entirely repaid for all the trouble it has cost you in having transferred it from its woodland home.

Some celebrated physician asserts that cheese should be eaten at least once a day. "It is the most valuable animal food obtainable," he says, "and is two or three times as nutritious as the same money value of ordinary meat." This sounds very plausible, when we take into consideration the Europeans who make cheese the principal article of their diet. The Dutchman, the German, the Swiss and the French people use it daily in great quantities, and Mrs. Rorer inveighing against the enormous consumption of white bread in America, asserts that as a nation we do not know the nutritive qualities of cheese. For the lover of a Welsh rabbit as a nightcap this is indeed good news. But Mrs. Rorer advises the use of the tasty Welsh rabbit at luncheon. I give you some recipes which you may perhaps find useful for your chafing-dish suppers with which you top off your evening run on the bicycle. Serve this as roast cheese at the end of a dinner, or if you prefer in the evening. Grate four ounces of rich cheese, mix it with the yolks of two eggs, four ounces of grated dry bread crumbs, and three ounces of butter. Beat this well together with a dessert spoon of dry mustard, and a little salt and pepper, cayenne is preferable. Toast some bread, cut in small rounds or squares, spread it thickly with the paste, place in a hot oven, covering first with a pan until thoroughly heated, remove the pan, and allow the cheese paste to become brown, serve at once, or it will fall.

For Cheese Soufflee—One cup of bread crumbs very dry and very fine; two scant cups of milk, rich and fresh or if will curdle; one-half pound dry old cheese grated; three eggs whipped very light; one small tablespoonful melted butter; cayenne pepper and salt; a pinch of soda dissolved in hot water and stirred in the milk; soak the bread crumbs in the milk; beat into these the eggs whipped separately; seasoning, and lastly the cheese; pour into a buttered baking dish; screw with dried bread crumbs on the top; bake in a quick oven, until delicately brown; serve immediately in the baking dish as it soon falls. This is equally good if baked in individual bakers, and served in them. Place them on a dainty doily, on a pretty plate and they are extremely appetizing. Cheese balls are delicious and should be served hot with a salad. To one cup of grated cheese add half a cup of grated bread crumbs, one egg well beaten, and five drops of Worcestershire sauce. Mix thoroughly and mold into small round balls with the hands. Place them in a wire basket and fry in very hot lard, or brown in a very hot, quick oven. Hot cheese sandwiches are especially good, and men are very fond of them. Slice the bread very thin, and cut round with a large size biscuit cutter. Put a thick layer of grated cheese between the two slices, having previously seasoned the cheese with salt, cayenne pepper and a pinch of mustard. Press the bread and cheese firmly together, and fry in equal parts of hot lard and butter. Brown on each side and serve very hot. These rules are culled from the very best authorities on the subject and have no hesitancy in offering them to you.

There is such an aroma of soap and water in the house nowadays that the scrubbing brush and pail seem but to have left our presence. House-cleaning is still the occupation of the average woman, and it is a pleasure and amusement to glance at the windows of the houses when taking a walk abroad to discover the ones who have gotten as far along as the fresh clean curtains. That is an unfailing announcement that the room is in spring costume and that the scrub woman has departed. No matter how thoroughly the woman who makes house-cleaning her avocation does the work, the mistress of the home is obliged to assist the servants now and then. Sorting papers, cleaning books, putting in fresh furnishings and generally supervising the work. I wonder how many women realize what a saving clause a good hot bath is after this work. If one will only take a quite hot bath, and then lie down for about a half hour, then array oneself in fresh, clean linen and a different gown, one's spirits rise to the occasion of greeting Adam with joyous smiles, and the utter banishment of the tired feeling which was an overpowering care a short while before. To lie down on the couch with the same clothes on, get up and freshen oneself up a bit, and wearily go down to dinner is only half a way to shake off the day's labors. Try changing the environment. Bathe the poor tired feet and soothe the nerves in the hot bath, and rest the weary eyes in the darkened room. This takes about an hour, but surely one can spend that much time in the preservation of health and good looks.

If you are going to add to those good looks you must have a gown of Russian crash in which to take your outings and be altogether swell and up to date. If you cannot get the Russian crash, which is finer and wider than what we use for fine tea towels, then get the ordinary close-woven crash. Have it made with coat and skirt to wear with shirt waist. These are made tailor fashion; nothing but plain stitching in the way of ornamentation, and they are exceedingly useful gowns. The crash is used for outing dresses for little girls and boys as well as for "grown ups." Be careful not to get the sleazy crash, but the fine, close linen, which will hold in place after laundering. Linen is to be used extensively this summer, and should you be of an inventive and original turn of mind, go down to the stores and pick out some of the finest linen used for glass towelling, barred red or blue, make your dainty summer gown of it for morning wear, and trim with grosgrain ribbon as to belt and collar. Some simple white embroidery is an admissible accessory, but the plain effect with such goods is in better keeping. Have it becoming, though. That, of course, goes without saying. —Agate.

In Duluth's Social Circles

The young people and the old, too, for that matter, are anxiously awaiting the opening of the picnic season. The weather, however, is doggedly persistent and refuses to moderate to such an extent that outdoor lunches would be pleasant. The season seems to be late, but really is not so very. Decoration day is usually the beginning of the picnic season. A few people venture out before then, but do it more to be in the lead than because they really enjoy it. Duluth might be called a "picnic city" in summer, for there are few places in which so many are given. But what place has such romantic advantages? The boomers have never been known to advertise this as one of Duluth's attractions, but they think only of business life and the idea of social pleasure is thrown in the background. There are many young people who, if making up a prospectus of Duluth, would put the picknicking possibilities at the head and what sorts of them could not tell about those possibilities would not be worth knowing.

Well it will not be long before the picnic will be with us. It is an institution and has come to stay and the people will undoubtedly do as they have in the past—make the most of it, and possibly a good deal more.

On Friday evening next, Miss Jones and the ladies of Maynard school will give an informal "at home." The informal parties at the hall are becoming very popular.

On Wednesday evening next a musicale will be given at the home of Mrs. Sheldon L. Frazer, of 222 East Third street. Mrs. Scripp is arranging the program. Miss Frazer will be among those who will sing.

The commencement exercises for the Morgan school will take place on Wednesday evening June 10. Miss Jones has been so fortunate as to secure for the address of the evening Dr. John Paul Egbert, of St. Paul. Although a comparatively young man, Dr. Egbert is one of the ablest of the ministers of Northwest, and strongly suggests, by his clear, forceful type of thinking, his Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst, of New York city, who is so much before the public at this time.

Dr. and Mrs. F. N. Phelan, of 16 East Third street, will give a musicale and reception this evening in honor of Edward C. Kuss, the basso, who is at present visiting in the city.

Mrs. J. F. McLaren, retiring president of the Magazine club, entertained the members of the club on Tuesday afternoon.

The annual pupils' festival concert, which Ernest Liechmund always arranges so well, will be given this year on June 9 at the Lyceum. The program will consist of quartets, trios, duets, solos, vocal numbers and cello solos. A feature will be the playing of a number of selections written by Mr. Liechmund. It will be an invitation concert and will be one of the finest of Duluth's amateur concerts.

Miss Belle Calverly was given a surprise by the teachers of the Jefferson school, of which she is principal, on Tuesday afternoon, in honor of her birthday. A committee waited on Miss Calverly and escorted her to the Kindergarten room, which had been prepared for a feast. A fine lunch was served and all had a happy time.

Miss Elsa Beberman, of 211 South Seventeenth avenue east, entertained a party of her girl friends last Wednesday afternoon on the occasion of her third birthday. CARLTON COUNTY MATTERS.

Seeding Has Been Delayed By Wet Weather.

Carlton, Minn., May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The wet weather has delayed seeding considerably, but with a few warm days the soil will be in condition for planting, and with the quick growth our land produces, planting by June 1 is early enough to insure a good crop in Carlton county. The present indications are for an immense blueberry crop. Our hay crop is also very promising.

A. J. Anderson, an old and highly respected resident of Carlton, died suddenly on Wednesday morning of catarrh of the stomach. His burial took place on Friday morning. He leaves a wife and grown up family.

Senator Allen and family removed from Cloquet to St. Paul on May 19, where Mr. Allen will continue in the lumber business. He resigned as senator last week, his resignation to take effect when his successor is elected and qualified.

A great many of the statements of the News Tribune correspondent from this place, in regard to county politics, are very misleading and somewhat amusing, but when a combination of "Graham (whip) crackers," Paine's (interest) Compound" and "Sulphatus Videntium" is used as a compulsory daily manna, this delirium is the natural result, and the citizens of Carlton county are easily able to locate the scribe.

Dr. Gibson, of Duluth, arrived in town this week and his sign now decorates the building formerly occupied by L. Peters as a drug store.

John A. McDevitt, logger, of Duluth, formerly of Cloquet, was in town this week.

A new barber shop and restaurant were opened in Carlton Monday.

The sawmills at Cloquet have all been shut down on account of the high water. This will make rather hard times among the laboring class there, as it means over a month's loss of time, and no pay day until July.

The timber inspector of the Great Northern railroad has been in this locality for about two weeks, taking up cedar posts purchased by that company.

It is announced in social circles that H. P. Gardiner, a former citizen, now of West Duluth, is to loose his bequge from the shores of old Ivory and launch out on the matrimonial sea about June 5.

The county treasurer is now kept busy receiving taxes as June 1 draws nigh. Every one seems to put off paying until the last five or ten days.

A man who came here from West Superior with some women of the sporting fraternity and occupied a house in the railroad yards near the St. Paul & Duluth water tanks, was ordered out of town on Friday.

George H. Rief, of the St. Paul & Duluth land department, was in town on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. McGrath, of West Superior, were the guests of County Treasurer Gallagher on Wednesday.

The many friends of C. Bradley, judge of probate, are glad to see him again able to be out, after a very severe illness.

A GORGEOUS SPECTACLE.

Ringling Bros.' Festival of Olympus, a Revelation.

There is something in human nature which demands light and color. It is through the eye that the brain receives its strongest impressions. The beauty that satisfies the vision invades the mind. None knew this better than Caesar, Alexander the Great and the other great rulers and captains of ancient times. It was at the time when Greece was at the pinnacle of her power and Rome was approaching the climax of her imperial sway that the great spectacles and feasts of the ancients were brought to their greatest perfection. While always partaking in a large measure of the military character of the people, the glare and panoply of war was intermingled with the sumptuous arts of peace, the sentiment of a classically poetic age, the love of luxury, and the semi-barbaric delight of the populace for glittering display. Perhaps the greatest of all these spectacles was the Grecian festival of Olympus. This superb display of Hellenic culture and semi-oriental luxuriousness attracted thousands of spectators, and invited the daring, skill and emulation of the greatest athletes and most renowned devotees of the Olympian games. The treasure expended in these displays often reached fabulous sums, and the resources of the entire known world were utilized to give a Grasco-Oriental glamour to the spectacle.

It is this gorgeous spectacle that Ringling Bros., the famous proprietors of the World's Greatest Shows, have reproduced as a spectacular introductory to their wonderful arenic exhibition. This superb spectacle enlists the services of a thousand men, women and children, and is given upon a scale of grandeur and completeness that even classic Athens could not excel. The immense hippodrome course, the largest ever constructed under canvas, is completely filled with a glowing, iridescent, moving panorama, in which hundreds of gorgeously caparisoned, prancing horses, scores of resplendently ornamented tableaux, great triumphal cars, rumbling chariots, waving bannners, tall pharanxes of glitteringly armored warriors, lictors, centurians, senators, fair women, dancing maids and flower-strewing children, combine to form a picture of classic splendor that dazzles the eyes and beautiful beyond the dreams of the most prolific imagination.

Notwithstanding the stupendous cast of this brilliantly costumed spectacle, it is only an incident of the show—an introduction to the wonderful feast of arenic novelties presented in three rings, upon two stages, in the immense dome and upon the great quarter mile hippodrome track of this greatest of all great shows. Three hundred performers, including the marvelous Nelson family of incomparable aerobats; an unapproachable menagerie, the greatest of trained animal sensations, and the most superb daily street parade ever seen on earth, are some of the features of this superb exhibition, which will exhibit in this city Monday, June 8.

RAW ECZEMA
NO REST
NO SLEEP
DAY OR NIGHT

My hands were completely covered with Eczema, and between my fingers the skin was perfectly raw. I had to sit with both hands held up, and away from the fire. My husband had to dress and undress me like a baby. I tried the best physicians, but their medicines gave me no relief, and drove me almost crazy. I was advised to try CUTICURA REMEDIES, and did so, although my husband had to go twenty miles to get them. As soon as he got back, I used the CUTICURA, and in five minutes after the first application I was perfectly easy, and slept soundly all that night. Before I commenced using the CUTICURA REMEDIES I could get no ease night or day. I could not bear to get warm, it would put me in a rage of itching. I always keep the CUTICURA REMEDIES in my house now, and recommend them to everybody, because of their wonderful effect. Yours gratefully,
AGNES M. HARRIS, Push, Mecklenburg Co. Va

THE NATIONAL GUARD.

There will be little rest for the boys in blue from now until camp is over, for the time will be pretty well filled up with drills, rifle and revolver practice and other preparations for camp. It is no all fun to be a soldier, even an amateur one, in times of peace, as some of the uninitiated might imagine. To be sure, there are plenty of amenities, but there is lots of hard work in connection with the life of a guardsman. Some of the guardsmen themselves imagine that the life of an officer is all "beer and skittles;" that because he does not have to carry a gun and tramp in the ranks, all he has to do is to carry a sword, wield a little brief authority and look magnificent in his regimentals.

There never was a bigger mistake. When, after a proper training in the ranks and then as a non-commissioned officer, a man gets elevated to an office from first; sergeant and quartermaster's sergeant up, his troubles begin, and half of them have their root in that mistaken belief so prevalent in the ranks that an officer's life is a brass-buttoned dream.

In the first place, he has to account for not only his men, to see that they know their paces and that their arms and accoutrements are kept free from rust and abuse, but he is responsible for arms accoutrements, uniforms and all the other pomp and panoply of war. If a canteen or bayonet is missing, thrown in an out-of-the-way corner by some careless genius from the ranks, his is the task of hunting it up, and if it is lost his is the scalp that suffers, not that of the man whose carelessness is responsible for the loss.

Then there are reports of unlimited number to be made out and sent in to headquarters, an endless amount of red tape to be observed—in fact, he has his hands full, and it is therefore patent that if a member of a company desires to see his organization succeed, he should attend to his own particular knitting and take that much work and responsibility off his superior's shoulders.

The first battalion drill took place Thursday evening at Ninth avenue east under Maj. Bidwell. The four companies turned out in force and the drill was a success. There will be another drill of the same kind every week until camp, and in addition to that, company drills will be pretty close together from now on.

The guards will turn out Sunday morning to accompany the G. A. R. and the Sons of Veterans to memorial services a the First Presbyterian church. Decoration day the battalion will escort the G. A. R. to the services in the High School, after which there will be a battalion drill by daylight.

The Third regiment will go into camp on the date originally set, June 23 to 30. The continued rains have delayed the work on the rifle ranges at Lake City so much that they will not be completed in time for an earlier camp.

The men are starting in to practice on the rifle ranges so as to perfect their shooting for the contests at camp. No one can make a score at camp unless one has been made on the local ranges. The ranges are at Woodland, but they will be removed to a point above the boulevard soon.

The officers of the local battalion are taking up their revolver practice. There are three medals this year for revolver shooting by the officers at camp this year, and most of the local officers will go in.

Nine Years of Success.

Gronseth & Olson, the Fourth street grocers, celebrated their ninth anniversary of their business career in Duluth this week. Starting a small establishment in May, 1887, they have by push and pluck, combined with prompt, liberal and courteous treatment to all their patrons, placed themselves in the front rank of Duluth's busy and prosperous business houses.

Their well-stocked store presents an inviting appearance and in addition to a full line of staples, all the seasonable delicacies, fruits and vegetables—the best the market affords—may be obtained. They have established an enviable reputation for their brand of "Viking" flour, and other articles which they have found meritorious and put up under the Viking brand. A specialty is made of teas and coffees, handling the choicest varieties on the market and having the agency for the celebrated Chase & Sanborn coffee.

Everything that can be found in a well regulated store may be obtained, and the success and popularity of this firm is due to the uniform effort they have made to please their patrons.

CINCINNATI'S FESTIVAL CLOSING.

Cincinnati, Ohio, May 23.—Two concerts today end the May music festival. Everything points to a most happy culmination. The program for both concerts are captivating for all tastes, and seats are at a premium already. The fine work of the chorus last night gives much-needed encouragement to that essential part of tonight's forces. The financial success is more than gratifying, though dividends are never declared. Socially this festival has never been surpassed. The elegance of the new hall had much to do with this feature. Ex-President Harrison and his bride are here the guests of Hon. and Mrs. Bellamy Storer and will remain until the festival closes.

FOR WOMEN IN THE SPRING.

The Ablest of Women Journalists Indorses Paine's Celery Compound.

Mrs. H. B. Sperry, who is now the eminent president of the Women's National Press association, was assistant editor of the Washington World. Her vigorous editorials in Ohio and Washington newspapers first brought her into national prominence.

The active profession of journalism has kept Mrs. Sperry up to date in information and progressive in thought. When there was evident need of a remedy in her family she was well aware that Paine's celery compound was best to use. The following enthusiastic letter shows the happy results from the use of this greatest of remedies:

Wells & Richardson Company, Burlington, Vt.

Dear Sirs—A few weeks' use of Paine's celery compound by my 83-year-old mother has been of great benefit to her, and proved to my satisfaction that there's nothing like it for the headache and sleeplessness incident to impaired indigestion. A niece in my family was also cured of insomnia by using one bottle of Paine's celery compound.

Yours very truly,
Hannah B. Sperry.

In every part of this country women are utilizing these blessed spring days by taking Paine's celery compound and insisting on its use by the members of their families. It speaks volumes for this wonderful remedy that of all the women who have recovered health by its means very many were induced to take it through the persuasion of other women—sisters, mothers, friends or relatives.

Many a man slowly failing in health, but stubbornly shutting his eyes to the alarming fact, has been led to take Paine's celery compound from seeing its remarkable health-giving effect in the case of his own wife, sister or some other member of his household.

When a sick and feeble sufferer is seen to gain steadily in health and vigor from taking Paine's celery compound, not much room for doubt is left to the most stubborn-minded person. This joyous transformation from sickness to health is going on in thousands of homes across the wide extent of this country.

The reputation of Paine's celery compound has grown by word of mouth, from persons made well, to others who needed its healing, strengthening power. The agreement of opinion among the best-informed, most observant class of people, in the well-to-do homes of our largest cities, as well as in the more frugal town communities, places Paine's celery compound far in advance of any remedy. Paine's celery compound is, in fact, the only spring remedy ever heard of in the home of practicing physicians.

This great remedy is not an ordinary spring sarsaparilla, bitters, tonic or nervine. Paine's celery compound is as far apart from any of these guess-work remedies as black is from white in the eyes of physicians who regularly prescribe it, use it themselves and carry it home to their families. Paine's celery compound is the famous formula of the thoughtful and studious physician, Professor Edward E. Phelps, M.D., LL.D., of the Dartmouth medical school.

It is the duty of every man or woman who has been benefited by Paine's celery compound to impress on friends and neighbors its wonderful efficacy as a spring remedy that is in every way worthy of the name.

The gist of Paine's celery compound as everyone who keeps informed of current events is well aware, is a remarkable story of sick people made well, and of many persons, who had given up health as wholly lost, made strong as ever they were in their lives. Paine's celery compound is the spring remedy par excellence. No invigorator has been so much praised, discussed, recommended and used by physicians and discerning, conservative men and women on every walk of life.

The story of Paine's celery compound in a nutshell is that it makes people well.

NICE HAUL

All of Lisbon's Contracts, Receipts and Papers Found Last Night.

Were Cleverly Concealed in a Looking Glass at the Merchants.

Contracts Aggregating $872 Were Among the Papers Discovered.

All of the papers of Walter Romans, alias S. D. Lisbon, the directory swindler, whose trial was concluded today, were discovered last evening neatly tucked away behind a looking glass in room 16, at the Merchants' hotel, which was occupied by Romans at the time of his arrest. Contracts to the amount of $872, orders, receipts and advertising matter are included in the haul, which furnishes enough evidence to convict Romans of not only forgery but perjury several times over.

The contracts bear the names of all the leading firms of Duluth and Superior, with scarcely an exception. The receipts are those which Lisbon has denied under oath having seen, and the advertising circulars prove conclusively that he is the agent of a concern masquerading under the names of the "Midland Directory company, of Philadelphia and Chicago;" the "Commercial Trade List and Business Directory company, of Philadelphia and St. Louis," in addition to the "Index" company, of Chicago and Denver. The receipts purport to have been given by the "Interstate Directory company."

Among the contracts was discovered one bearing the name of the Val Blatz Brewing company, and among the written permissions for the use of names in the directory was found that given by the brewing company, the signature on which was rather poorly copied on the contract, also an agreement for the use of the name of the Duluth Paper company and the contract bearing the bogus consignature of the manager of that concern. A collection list of individuals and firms was also discovered, although Romans had sworn he had no such thing in his possession.

COLLECTED CONSIDERABLE.

By memoranda on this list it is shown that $270 had been collected by Romans, in amounts ranging from $10 to $35, most of which was paid by prominent houses, among them being: Merrill & Ring, Culver Bros., Marshall-Wells Hardware company, Wells-Stone Mercantile company, Cranberry Lumber company, Sagar Drug company, Bennett, Williams & Co., Van Dusen-Harrington company, C. A. & E. D. Field, Palmer, Hall & Hunt and A. A. Harris & Son.

The receipts given by the Val Blatz Brewing company is for $10, while the alleged contract calls for the payment of $35.

The discovery came about through the efforts of Attorney Stedman, of Chicago, counsel for Romans, to get possession of the papers. He called at the Merchants hotel last evening and asked Landlord Meinhardt if he might see the room occupied by Romans. He was taken up by Mr. Meinhardt and he had no sooner entered than Mr. Stedman made a bee line for the dresser and pulled it out. Mr. Meinhardt asked what was up and was told that the attorney was looking for something. Mr. Meinhardt had surmised as much himself and he made up his mind that if there was anything there he would take a hand at finding it himself.

When the attorney, therefore, evidently losing the trail, suddenly gave up the search and departed, Mr. Meinhardt instituted a hunt on his own hook. A piece of paper between the board and the glass attracted his attention. He pried out the board and found the package neatly stowed away behind it.

Detectives Donovan and Troyer were sent for and they took possession of the find.

He Cannot Recover.

There was a report here this morning that Dr. Goffe had died, but a telegram to New York proved that it was a mistake.

SAME OLD CIRCUS RING.

In various ways the circus of the present day differs from that of the past, but the ring remains unchanged. It is always 42 feet 9 inches in diameter. Go where you will, search the world from China to Peru, with diverging trips to the frosty Caucasus and the desert of Sahara, and never a circus will you find without a ring 42 feet 9 inches in diameter, says the Chicago Journal.

There is a reason for this remarkable uniformity. Circus riders and circus horses are nomadic. Wherever their wanderings bring them they must find the ring always the same, else they will be disturbed in their performance, if not really rendered incapable. Trained to the 42 feet 9 inch ring, the horse and his rider have grown used—worn, one might say—to the exact angle of declivity toward the center of the ring which the radius of twenty-one feet and a given speed produce.

The mound on the circumference of the ring always has on the inside a level, so to speak, of earth, at the same angle as that into which radius and speed throw the driver. As for speed, that, after the horse has gone around two or three times and is warmed to his work, is the same through the act. In fact, a strap generally holds the head so that he can not get beyond a certain pace.

The ringmaster snaps his whip, the clown shouts, the band plays louder and louder, but the horse knows just how much this empty show means and jogs on at the same old pace until, with the last jump through a tissue balloon, the act is ended.

INSURANCE AGAINST TWINS.

What worse domestic calamity can befall a poor man's home than the advent of twins, unless it be triplets? asks Pearson's Weekly. That, at least, is the idea upon which the projectors of the Provident Bounty association, organized recently, propose to bank the prospects of the concern. As a financial document it is unique.

It bears some respectable names and subscriptions to the capital stock of £10,000 are invited, with the most tempting inducements.

"It is notorious," say the projectors, "that many people marry in the hope of improving their fortune; but frequently disappointment comes with the advent of an unexpectedly large family. This association provides to some extent for that contingency by at once giving a substantial sum in the case of the birth of twins."

TURKS AND ARMENIANS.

Edwin S. Wallace Discussed Them Last Evening.

Edwin S. Wallace, United States consul at Jerusalem, gave a very clear and comprehensive talk on "The Turk and the Armenian" at the First Presbyterian church. The attendance was fair and the audience attentive and appreciative.

"One Eving on this side cannot understand the Turk and the Armenian," he said. "One must be in their respective homes and see them as they are. The histories of both are marked with blood; that of the Turk by blood of his shedding; that of the Armenian by his own blood shed by others. The Armenians claim direct descent from a grandson of Noah, but ethnologists tell us that they come from a small tribe of Persians. Soon after the Armenian nation developed from the tribes, its country became the scene of bloody wars, for it had antagonistic forces on all sides in the midst of which it held its own by courageous warfare.

"Rome's supremacy at the beginning of the Christian era included Armenia, yet when Herod sent an army to collect Rome's tax from Armenia the shattered remnants of the army came back without the tax. And Armenia repulsed many similar attempts before the Turk subjugated her. Armenia was the earliest nation to adopt Christianity and it is said that the ruler of Armenia at that time offered the Christ half his throne. The entire nation embraced Christianity in 287, and it appears to have been the biggest mistake of her history, for because of it she has suffered ever since.

"In 630 a new power arose in the East—the False Prophet, Mahomet. Arising in Arabia, this war-like religion seems to be the fulfillment of God's prophecy as to Ishmael, that he should become a great nation and that his hand should be against everyone and everyone against him. The successive powers of the religion offered it to Armenia, but it was refused again and again, and she was independent until the Ottoman tribe, which still rules the Mahometan nations, came into power. Even then she did not escape the religion of the False Prophet, but she defied the arms of Islam until she was subjugated, and for it her land was devastated again and again.

"There is no land that can be called Armenia. The country occupied by the nation is northwest of Kurdestan, and it is a plain containing about 60,000 square miles. It is bounded on the north by the Russian frontier, on the east by Persia, on the west by Mesopotamia and on the south by Asia Minor. This is the theater of the terrible reports which have gone out, if they are true, and you may believe that they but partially tell the truth. The Armenian has a great business head and it has well been said that it takes ten Turks to do business with a Jew, but it takes ten Jews to do business with an Armenian. Their home life is exceptional, women are respected and they are a moral people.

"The Turk is the man in power and he spread his religion in the olden times till Saladin stopped before the walls of Vienna. He has been circumscribed since, but he still holds a large space. There is no home life among the Turks. Woman is degraded. She may be divorced by her husband's word, and she may not enter paradise unless her husband bids her. This is the nation which rules Armenia.

"One of the causes of the massacres is the method of taxation. The tithe system prevails and the government sells out the taxes to individuals who can collect all they please. They usually take nine-tenths and give the tithe to the subject. In 1867 the sultan took a European trip, and a special tax was levied to defray expenses. It has been levied every year since. The Armenians had no notice of the tax and when the Kurds were sent by the sultan to collect it they were resisted. A fight ensued and a few Kurds were killed. This was enough. Orders went forth to devastate Armenia, and the fragments of the truth which have come out in Christian lands tell how well these orders have been obeyed.

"The Eastern question must be settled by blood. If the Christian nations were as true to their religion as are the followers of the False Prophet, there would be no Eastern question and no Turk."

FACT.

Truth: "You say your horse is the fastest in the state?"

"Yes, sir. Did I ever tell you my experience with him on the track down at Mudsock?"

"No. What was it? Go around the track so fast that you could feel his breath striking against the back of your head?"

"Well, I didn't notice that, but the fact is, and everybody observed it, that his shadow had to cut across the middle of the circle to catch up with us in the last heat."

A MISTAKEN IDEA.

At every period in the history of the improvement in the engineery of war there have been armies of philosophers and peace advocates to urge that the time has at last arrived when war has become impossible, says the Cleveland World.

The discovery of gunpowder, it was believed, would make such havoc among soldiers that they would soon be practically annihilated, and so war would become altogether an event of the past. But the greatest wars of the world's history have been fought since that discovery.

When breech-loading rifles came into use peace philosophers were a unit in the conclusion that it was time to beat swords into ploughshares and spears into pruning-hooks, but the breech-loader is an old-fashioned weapon now, compared with the latest Mauser rifle, the improved rapid-firing gun employed by the Spanish troops in Cuba.

According to the latest reports from the fighting that went on round Gardenas, the Spanish fired at least 2000 shots for every insurgent reported killed, and it is said that the ratio of Mauser gun shots to mortality will hold good throughout the history of the Cuban war.

The Gatling and the Maxim guns that were promised to be annihilators have been in use for a period running through several years, and still the wars go on and soldiers live. The fact is, wars appear to grow less sanguinary in proportion as more energy is put in the war weapons. They are carried on at longer range.

A LAWYER'S WIT.

Some time since a well-known London barrister, on taking possession of a house in a fashionable West End row, unwittingly bound himself to paint the whole exterior of the dwelling, says the Chicago Chronicle. On finding what an expense he had made himself liable for he remonstrated with the landlord, who simply smiled and declared that the bond must be fulfilled. Thereupon the wily barrister caused the whole front of the house to be painted in strips of vivid green, yellow and pink, greatly to the chargin of his fashionable neighbors, who were tenants of the same landlord. In vain did the landlord storm; the barrister tenant threatened unless the bond were canceled to have the back of the house painted like a rainbow, with hugs black spots covering it at intervals. Result—Agreement cancelled.

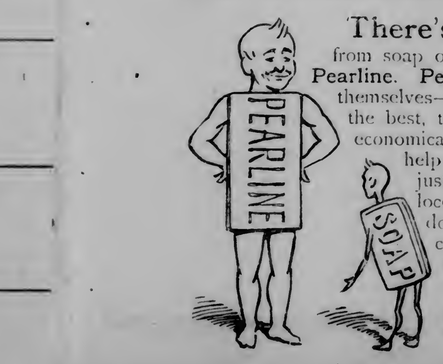
A CAVE OF BATS.

L. T. Harper, an ex-Texas Ranger, gives an interesting account of how he discovered the rear entrance to a bat cave on the Colorado river, says the Dallas News.

"It was in the summer of 1876," he said, "I was sent by Maj. Jones to hunt up an outlaw who had escaped from the penitentiary guards. While feeding my horse before sunrise in a skirt of woods a mile from the river I saw bats returning from their night skirmishing, entering a hole in the bough of a tree. The bats came in countless numbers and entered in regular order, as if each bat knew just when to arrive to take his turn, to a second. For more than an hour they swarmed into the tree in numbers sufficient to have packed it full if it were hollow from the tip top to the ground. I knew the habit of bats, that they sleep hanging by their hind feet, head down, in rows, and it made me wonder how so many could get lodging in a tree not particularly large. I mentioned it when I left the town of Burnet, and it set one of the deputy sheriffs to thinking. He suggested to me to return. We cut down the tree and there was not a bat in it. Next we pushed a pole into the stump and found an opening going into fathomless depths. The young officer, whose name I have forgotten, lighted a piece of paper and dropped it into the hole, and at once we understood the situation. The tree grew in the ceiling of a cave, and its hollow trunk had been a tube through which the bats made their exit and entrance. It was two years afterward before the cave was explored.



There's no help wanted from soap or anything else, when you use Pearline. Pearline and water—all alone by themselves—that's everything you need for the best, the easiest, the safest, the most economical washing and cleaning. What help can soap add to it? You might just as well get a horse to help a locomotive. Anything that soap can do, Pearline can do better—and can do a great deal more besides.

Send it Back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back. 481

Bozeman's Late Postmaster Under Arrest on a Very Serious Charge.

Said to Be $9000 Short in His Government Postal Accounts.

He Was a Presbyterian Deacon and Stood High in Montana.

St. Paul, May 23.—A Bozeman, Mont., special to the Dispatch says: F. J. Nesbitt, late postmaster here, term expiring March 15, was arrested last night by Postoffice Inspector Linn, of Helena, his accounts being short over $9000. He had been postmaster for the full term of four years. The shortage began three years ago, and was covered by false reports sent to the department at Washington. He was one of the most respected citizens here, honored, trusted and was a deacon in the Presbyterian church. He was a good, moral man, but he lived beyond his means.

He says he knew of the shortage in his accounts, but says it was only for a small amount, and he cannot explain where so great a sum went.

TRUTHFUL CORSICANS.

Death Will Not Make Them Break a Pledge.

A writer tells the following pathetic story of a sequel to the story of Bonelli, who secured the price put on the head of a well-known brigand by murdering an old pilgrim and palming off his body as that of the brigand, says the Westminster Gazette. Casanova (the brigand), commonly called Cappa, was already dead when Bonelli was beheaded. The story of his death is picturesque and it breathes the ancient faithfulness and honor of the Corsican character. Cappa was horrified by the conduct of Bonelli, and, none the less, much affected by the news of the murderer's arrest. Cappa felt hemmed in on all sides and fled to the mountains of Prunelli-di-Slum-Orbo. This district has long been famous for the courage and hardiness of its sons. In Louis XVIII's reign a few of its hillmen kept 5000 soldiers at bay. Here Cappa withdrew and hid himself in a lonely valley, watched over by shepherd friends, and there the hunted outlaw fell sick. The mountaineers tended him as well as they were able. An old priest also ministered to his comfort and, while succoring the needy body, tried as well to play the "soul friend" to the bandit. He influenced Cappa sufficiently to make him promise never again to use gun or knife in killing a fellow man.

Cappa was still ill when the annual festa of a distant village came round. The shepherds had no fears for their guest, they did not know that spies were set to watch him. The men of the valley were seen leaving the place and information was sent to the nearest gendarmerie. The sick man had with him only a few children, some of whom kept a lookout.

The police, who were not in strong force, ventured with grave misgivings into the dangerous, scarcely known region. On perceiving them the youngsters gave the alarm and the weak and ailing bandit seized his gun, making down a narrow path for a wall, beyond which was the outlaws' asylum, "the heather" of the Scottish royalists, otherwise dear life, safety! When he had all but gained the wall he saw a single gendarme close to him.

Cappa was a dead shot. In an instant he had covered his enemy. But he remembered his solemn promise to the old priest. He dropped his weapon and let the gendarme go free. The police are under orders to shoot down bandits as a keeper shoots down vermin. This fellow, of course, fired. Cappa was hard hit, but he dragged himself across the fence and into the thick cover—far he could not go. On his knees, clasping his gun with one arm and with the other clasping a tree hole, his pursuers found him some hours afterward, stark and cold, quite dead.

ONLY ONE $10,000 NOTE.

There is only one $10,000 United States note in existence, and that has never been issued, but is kept in the treasury as a specimen. There are three $5000 greenbacks. Two of them are in the treasury; the third was paid out several years ago, and is probably in the vault of some bank, because it has never been heard from since. One-thousand-dollar notes are numerous. There are 74,146 in circulation, and over 15,000 $500 notes, 237,000 $100 notes, 260,000 $50 notes, 409,245 $20 notes, 834,924 $10 notes and 1,152,786 $5 notes in circulation.

A FOE TO DISEASE.

Roentgen's Discovery Not New to Medical Fraternity.

Philadelphia Times: If the Vienna doctors are correctly reported, they deny the possibility of Roentgen rays destroying the bacilli of typhoid and diphtheria, or of injuriously affecting the bacteria of any other disease, and ridicule the work of Professors Pratt and Wightman of Chicago, who declare that they have already demonstrated this by conclusive experiments. Roentgen rays are but rays of light of special potency, and the professor's theory is after all only the application of an old idea in a new form—a sun bath before an artificial sun. Light has ever been a foe to disease, while darkness has invariably attracted it. We do not look in sunny lanes for the germs of phthisis or diphtheria, but find them in the dark rooms of tenement houses, where the sun's rays never penetrate. Stanley's African porters sickened in the shade of an interminable forest, but quickly regained both health and strength when they emerged once more into the light.

The sun cure is not new. It has long existed side by side with the water cure and the grape cure. In spring time in California and the south of France there may be some hundreds of invalids suffering from tuberculosis who daily take their sun baths and eat the fruit, which, while nourishing them is least likely to feed the bacillus which threatens their lives, and the devotees of water but cleanse the way for the light to penetrate more freely. If, then, health suffers from the presence of bacilli, and light assists the return of health, it would not be strange if the germs of disease should succumb before the rays of concentrated light. It is, to say the least of it, foolish, at the end of this nineteenth century to insist that anything cannot be, especially on so short an acquaintance. Like Newton's apple, the X rays may yet lead to the discovery of much that is hidden in nature. The effect of light as a disintegrator of substances, its action on living organisms and a thousand other problems connected with its beams are still awaiting solution.

TO REMOVE A FISHHOOK.

The angling season being well on, the usual number of mishaps will occur with the fishhook. When this accident happens the hook, if not too deeply imbedded in the flesh, may generally be removed without surgical aid. If the hook is fastened in the hand cut the line from the hook, turn the point upward and push it through as a needle would be in sewing. If the hook has a broad end or eye snip this off before attempting to remove it. Do not try to draw the hook out backward, as the barb will lacerate and inflame the flesh.

A GRACIOUS QUEEN.

Bicycling in Italy is governed by some very stringent rules. Among others, riders are forbidden to use some of the paths in Monza Park, says the New York World.

Queen Margherita of Italy is an enthusiastic wheelwoman. She was gliding smoothly along one of the forbidden paths when a young and zealous soldier stopped her. He did not know the queen, and placed her under arrest.

He bewailed his zealousness when he learned whom he had arrested, and was in abject misery until he received, not a reprimand, but 10 francs and a photograph of the queen, sent by herself. The queen express d the hope that the soldier would study the photograph and know her the next time.

Suffered Eighteen Years.

Pains Departed and Sleep Came.

Mrs. Julia A. Brown, of Covington, Tenn., whose husband has charge of the electric light plant at that place, has been a great sufferer. Her ailments and speedy cure are best described by herself, as follows:

"For 18 years I suffered from nervousness and indigestion. I tried every remedy recommended by family and friends, but I could get no relief at all. Two years ago, while being treated by three local physicians, Drs. Barret, Maley and Sherod, they informed me that I had become dropsical, and that there was little hope for me. I then decided to try

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine,

I was then unable to get to sleep until well on toward daylight, and during all this time I had a deep, heavy pain in my left side. I was most miserable, indeed, but after taking one-half bottle of the Nervine I could sleep all night just as well as I ever did. The Nervine is the only remedy that gave me any relief whatever. I am now well and strong, and I thank God every day of my life for Dr. Miles' Nervine."

NEVER TOO LATE.

Premature Old Age Made Impossible.

A Life-Time Habit Easily Broken. It's Easy if You Only Take the Right Road.

(From the Press, Everett, Pa.)

A number of our great and most inveterate tobacco smokers and chewers have quit the use of the filthy weed. The reform was started by Aaron Gorber, who was a confirmed slave for many years to the use of tobacco. He tried the use of No-To-Bac, and to his great surprise and delight, it cured him.

Hon C. W. Ashcom, who had been smoking for sixty years, tried No-To-Bac and it cured him.

Col. Samuel Stoutener, who would eat up tobacco like a cow eats hay, tried this wonderful remedy, and even Samuel, after all his years of slavery, lost the desire.

J. C. Cobler, Lessing Evans, Frank Dell, George B. May, C. O. Skillington, Hanson Rohrbeck, Frank Hershberger, John Shinn and others have since tried No-To-Bac and in every case they report, not only a cure of the tobacco habit, but a wonderful improvement in their general physical and mental condition, all of which goes to show that the use of tobacco had been injurious to them in more ways than one.

All of the above gentlemen are so well pleased with the results that we do not hesitate to join them in recommending it to suffering humanity, as we have thoroughly investigated and are satisfied that No-To-Bac does the work well and is a boon to mankind.

The cost is trifling, and three boxes are guaranteed to cure any case, or money refunded. No-To-Bac can be secured at any drug store. Get the famous booklet "Don't Tobacco Spit and Smoke Your Life Away." Written guarantee and free sample mailed for the asking. Address The Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago or New York.

TRADE CONDITIONS.

Dun Says That it is a Waiting Period.

New York, May 23.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: The waiting condition which seems to some people nothing better than stagnation still continues, but there is a difference. Thousands of orders and contracts are merely deferred because they can be more safely given a little later. There is nothing exciting in the speculative market for exportable products and the stories about wheat damage have been numerous, but the general belief regarding the future supply is fairly reflected in the decline of 1.67 cents per bushel. The Western receipts continue large, for three weeks 5,818,925 bushels, against 4,362,587 last year while Atlantic exports, flour included, have been only 3,188,863 bushels for the same weeks against 4,750,674 last year.

The home market fails entirely to respond to short crop stories for it is known that Western reports indicate a crop exceeding last year's. Cotton speculation lifted the price a fraction for a day or two, but it declined again and such movements are always easy at this season when stocks are generally small in Europe and American mill supplies, with commercial stocks, still exceed maximum consumption for the crop year and the promise for the coming crop is decidedly good.

If the output of pig iron were always a reliable barometer of business conditions, as some suppose, the resumption of furnaces in blast May 1, according to the Iron Age, 188,319 tons against 187,451 April 1, would be considered comforting. But the increase of stocks unsold since Jan. 1, has been 243,915 tons and this deducted from the output of furnaces leaves 2,576,348 tons for four months, which is certainly in excess of the actual consumption, because the stocks of the great steel companies are not included in the statement. Since the steel billet pool was formed these stocks have doubtless increased largely. There is scarcely any improvement in the demand for finished products, though the bar association has become strong enough to enable makers of steel bars to get a slightly higher price. The demand for nails is so light that a reduction of prices is expected; the demand for structural works is less urgent, but yet orders are encouraging in number, although new contracts are at premiums, and the ablest observers of the iron market notice that there is a glaring incongruity between pig at $12.50, billets at $20.25 and steel rails at $28.

The textile manufacturers are still waiting, as they have been for months past, and the extensive curtailment of production does not strengthen prices in the least. Some large cotton mills have discontinued production this week, but the only change in representative quotations is an ⅛ cent decline in brown sheetings. The market for woolens is exceedingly dull, notwithstanding the stopping of many mills, and while worsteds and clay mixtures are both a shade lower there is nothing like confidence or activity as yet in any branch of the manufacture. Sales of wool have been 2,648,300 pounds for the week at the three chief markets and for three weeks ending May 21, 9,187,400 pounds of which 4,882,300 were domestic, against 15,948,350 in the same weeks of 1892, of which 8,600,100 were domestic.

Failures for the week have been 227 in the United States against 207 last year and twenty-eight in Canada against twenty-three last year.

WHAT BRADSTREET SAYS.

New York, May 23.—Bradstreet's says: The reactionary tendency in prices, shrinkage in railroad earnings, the falling off in bank clearings, and the fact that the present constitutes the beginning of the between season's period, include the more conspicuous feature of the general business situation. On the other hand business failures have fallen off sharply. General trade throughout the Central West has not met anticipations. Clothing orders have dropped off two weeks earlier than usual at Chicago, and the run of orders for dry goods there is light. A relatively more favorable report comes from St. Louis that dry goods, clothing, hardware and groceries are being sold in increasing quantities for fall delivery. Detroit and Milwaukee business interests are suffering from strikes. The most favorable report comes from Kansas City where the movement of merchandise continues relatively quite active; mercantile collections are fair and trade prospects were never better. Improvement is also noted on the Pacific coast, due to the weather which has rendered the crop outlook more favorable and stimulated purchases in staple lines.

Exports of wheat (flour included as wheat) from both coasts of the United States this week amount to 1,306,000 bushels, as compared with 1,990,000 bushels last week, 2,764,000 bushels in the week a year ago, 2,230,000 bushels two years ago, and 3,106,000 bushels three years ago.

The total number of business failures throughout the United States this week shows a marked falling off from the weekly average during the past four months, 216 as compared with 205 last week; 206 in the like week of 1895; 237 in the third week of May, 1894, and as compared with 237 in the corresponding week of 1893. The total number of business failures reported from the Canadian Dominion this week is twenty-eight as compared with thirty-four last week, twenty-five in the week a year ago and twenty-nine two years ago.

GOT THEIR GARDEN SEEDS.

The postmaster of Washington has been compelled to appeal to congress for extra help to dispose of the bags of garden and flower seeds which are piled high in the corridors of the postoffice building and in adjacent streets, says the New York Sun. Each member of the senate and house of representatives is entitled to 15,000 packages of vegetable and 180 packages of flower seed, which are put up in bundles of five packages each and delivered by the department of agriculture in bags as ordered, but is compelled to distribute them without assistance from the department, which causes a great deal of discontent. Under the old plan all a congressman had to do was to write a letter informing the secretary of agriculture that he would like to have packages of seeds from his allotment sent to the persons whose names appeared on the list which he enclosed, and the rest of the work was done by the seed bureau over in Secretary Morton's building.

But the seed bureau has been abolished, and although congress, in opposition to the secretary's recommendation, and in defiance of his protests, required him to purchase the seeds, unfortunately for their own comfort the congressmen made no provision for means to distribute them. The result is that most of the senators and representatives are now buried under an avalanche of garden seeds which they are finding it difficult to dispose of, for they are required to address every package separately and send it to the postoffice after making the appropriate selections.

Some representatives have their quota lashed into big mail bags and shipped in bulk to their political lieutenants in different parts of their districts, with a facsimile frank to be used in mailing the packages where they will do the most good. Others have had their entire allotment sent in bulk to political committees; others to postmasters, who are asked to send them out according to their own judgment, with the compliments of the congressman. This saves trouble and annoyance. General trade throughout the Central West has not met anticipations. Clothing orders have dropped off two

A COOK AND THE OPERA.

In Kenwood there is a woman who would be glad to know as much about grand opera and the famous singers as her cook, a Swede, says the Chicago Tribune. The discovery of this rather unusual knowledge happened in this way:

The Friday before the close of the opera season the cook asked permission to do some of the Saturday cleaning that afternoon, her reason being that she wanted to go out as early Saturday evening as possible. Her mistress, who believes in at least appearing to take an interest in the affairs of the servants, said:

"Certainly. Are you going to a party?"

"No, ma'am," the cook replied, "I am going to the opera to hear Calve. I have never heard her, and I think I should like to."

The mistress' interest suddenly became genuine, but in her surprise all she said was "Oh!"

The morning after the opera she was curious to know the girl's impressions of the great singer and asked her if she had enjoyed the opera.

"Yes, we liked it pretty well. My sister went with me and we had seats in the second balcony. I think we made a mistake; it would have been better to have stood up on the first floor."

"Did you like Calve?"

"Yes, I like her, but not so much as Nordica."

"Why, have you heard Nordica, too?"

"O, yes; and Melba and Patti, and Materna, and all the best ones."

And then she proceeded to talk to her astonished mistress about all the well-known operas and explain why some were more interesting than others, the relative merits of the singers. But she always came back to Nordica. "I like her the best of all."

THE CAMEL FORGOT.

A large camel which was landed at Hoboken a few days ago from the Bremen line steamer Dresden had an experience which probably never before fell to the lot of a "ship of the desert," says the New York Herald.

He made the voyage in a large box and, as there wasn't room enough in it for any self-respecting animal, the camel sat down in sheer disgust. He sat that way for days and days, while the ship rolled and made all sorts of heavy weather.

When the dejected animal was finally landed and tried to stand up he couldn't use his rear props at all. They had become paralyzed from their long stay in a cramped position. The camel wasn't any good, it seemed, and as a big price had been paid for him there was a general lamentation, in which the camel joined. Such a picture of woe was never seen in Hoboken.

A genius then suggested a radical cure. The camel, by his advice was placed in a sling and hoisted up until only his toes touched the ground. He paddled the air for a spell with his foreleg, and finally the rear props came to life and joined in the exercise. They lowered him to the floor, and after he had tested his rear legs somewhat gingerly he was as good as new. But he doesn't sit down any more.

FIREMAN INJURED.

John Bates, of the Tug Abbott, Hurt Today.

John Bates, a fireman on the Singer tug Abbott, while engaged in cutting a tow line by which the Abbott was attached to the steamer C. W. Elphicke this morning, was struck by the coil of the severed end of the hawser, the blow breaking his leg. He was removed to St. Luke's hospital where the fractured limb was set by Dr. Sherwin, and he was reported to be resting comfortably.

The necessity for cutting the line which resulted in Bates' injury is said to be due to the action of the captain of steamer, who gave the order to go ahead at full speed before the Abbott, which had towed the Elphicke through the canal had cast off. The hawser tightened under the strain so that it was impossible to unhitch it and it had to be cut to prevent the tug from being rolled over.

THE LISBON CASE.

The Arguments Were Made This Morning.

Judge Moer gave the Lisbon case to jury at 11:30 this morning. The arguments were begun yesterday afternoon and were concluded this morning. Seymour Stedman, the Chicago attorney who has been defending Lisbon, made a brilliant address to the jury in the course of which he alluded to Lisbon as Reagans, the name which the Chicago police claim he sometimes bears.

At noon the attorneys were arguing a motion on arrest of judgment in case the verdict was guilty. The argument was held at that time because Mr. Stedman wished to return to Chicago.

Judge Ensign was still hearing the case of Hare against the Eastern Minnesota this morning, and Judge Morris was hearing the special term calendar.

The struck jury cases will not be called until Monday, June 1. So struck jurors need not appear until that time.

ARRESTED

Sheriff Butchart Dropped in on a Prize Fight at Virginia.

The Principals and Four Seconds Arrested and Brought to Duluth.

Some of Them Made a Lively Scramble For Liberty.

Sheriff W. W. Butchart and four of his deputies rudely destroyed the peace of mind of the sports of Virginia last night, stopping a prize fight and carrying off principals and seconds in a very melodramatic manner.

George Beaton, of Superior, better known as Pigiron Kelly, and Mose Lafontise, of the same place, better known as Mose Jackson, were billed to fight a twenty-five-round go at Virginia last night. The law-abiding people of Virginia became wroth at this and put on foot endeavors to prevent its taking place. They found a willing listener in Governor Clough, upon whom they poured an avalanche of petitions and telegrams and he telegraphed Mayor Jackson, of Virginia, to see that the fight was stopped.

It appears that the mayor turned unto the governor the "wooden ear," so to speak, for the aforesaid law-abiding citizens wired the governor that the mayor had refused to interfere with the fight. At any rate, the mayor gave the governor no satisfactory reply. So the governor turned to Sheriff Butchart, believing with cause that here was a man upon whom he could depend.

At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon a long telegram came to Sheriff Butchart from the governor, giving the circumstances substantially as stated, calling upon him to stop that fight. He told Mr. Butchart that he should hold his office strictly responsible for the matter, so the sheriff had but one way open, and that was to act at once.

TOOK A SPECIAL.

There was no regular train, so a special was hurriedly made up on the Missabe road, and when it was ready Sheriff Butchart, Under Sheriff Shephard and Deputies P. L. Magie, W. J. Bates and T. H. Little filed into it and the train sped on for Virginia, seventy-four miles away.

Meanwhile the sports of Virginia, ignorant of brewing trouble, were going on with their preparations for the fight. Interest was lively and betting was even. The sale of tickets was large. At the time set the two gladiators, stripped for the fray, entered the ring and took their corners, backed by their seconds, Ad Newcomber and Jim Rooney were behind Beaton and Dan Horgan (not of Duluth) and Jack Lafontise were back of Jackson.

Time was called when everything was in readiness and the fight began. It was a lively fight, too, and the sports of Virginia had plenty of excitement. They had more later, but they did not know about that at this time. The first round passed, the second round fell wed, and then time was called for the third round, which was destined to be the climax of the evening's entertainment. After a few second of cautious sparring the men went at it with a good deal of vim, and they were smashing each other plenty when suddenly there was a scuffle at the door.

THE SHERIFF'S ARRIVAL.

Five men made their appearance and ran up the aisle for the ring without awaiting for an invitation. There was a startled cry: "The sheriff!" a volley of oaths and then pandemonium reigned. The hall was filled, and every man that belied fill it was bursting his suspender buttons in an effort to get out. Over went chairs, tables and down went some unlucky scrambler, only to be trodden into the floor by his scrambling fellow sports. Through doors, windows, any way to get out, went the crowd, and in less time than it takes to tell it, the hall was deserted, except for the men on the stage who were not so lucky.

Dazed by the sudden alteration in the scene, principals and seconds stood for a minute on the stage and glared. That minute was fatal. Sheriff Butchart seized a pugilist in each brawny arm, and they stayed there. Ad Newcomer came to his senses and made a frantic dive plump into the arms of Deputy Magie, who annexed him promptly. Rooney made a dive for the door and got mixed up with Ham Little, who detained him.

Meanwhile Amos Shephard was making for the other two seconds, followed by Deputy Bates. Shephard grasped Lafontise and Horgan each by the arm. They were in their shirt sleeves and they didn't stop to argue the matter. They thought Shephard easy, so they flew, leaving a piece of shirt material in each of Shephard's hands. Bates and Shephard followed and a wild chase ensued over the tumbled chairs left by the vanished audience, down the stairs and into a saloon. Horgan lost the rest of his shirt in the scuffle and the sheriff bought him a new one. Finally the men were arrested, and the special train carrying the party arrived here at 5:30 this morning.

The men were placed in the county jail, where they will remain until they are arraigned in municipal court Monday morning, the principals for prize fighting and the seconds for aiding and abetting a prize fight contrary to the peace and dignity of the state of Minnesota. Warrants were sworn out for them this afternoon.

O. W. Baldwin Wins.

Judge Moer yesterday afternoon filed his findings in the case of O. W. Baldwin against the board of county commissioners, deciding in favor of the plaintiff and allowing him $690 fees for prosecuting appealed claims of the county surveyor and road laborers. Judge Moer decided that as Baldwin was hired by some of the county commissioners and their action subsequently ratified by a resolution of the board, the county is obliged to pay the money.

THE FEDORA SANK.

Four Young People Obliged to Wade to Shore.

A sailing party consisting of Misses Ellie and Pearl McDonald, Attorney W. N. Edson and Ralph Rogers, had a narrow escape from drowning in the bay last evening. As it is, there is nothing more serious than a dousing in the cold water and the ensuing possibility of severe colds to record.

They had embarked on the Fedora, one of Patterson's boats, for a cruise down the bay and all had gone well until the dyke was reached on the return trip. As is well known, the passage through this obstruction on the Minnesota Point side is very narrow, the jagged edges of the heavy timbers composing the stone cribs on either side making it a veritable way between Scylla and Charybdis, to travel which requires an intimate knowledge of the locality.

The Fedora, which is a large "two-master," heavily ballasted with railroad iron, was bowling along before a stiff breeze, when she struck the dyke on her port bow with a shock that made her timbers creak. The recoil sent her sheering off toward the channel, and, the wind filling her sails again, she drew off without, it was supposed at the time, having suffered any injury.

Shortly after the boat got well under way again, however, one of the party noticed that there was water in the bottom. An examination disclosed that the craft was filling and she was headed for shore, the men bailing desperately with their hats. This run was a short one, but it was made none too soon, for just as the Fedora's nose struck the sand her stern went under in something like eight feet of water. All hands waded ashore and found shelter in a house near the scene of the wreck, where dry clothing was furnished the ladies. When they were ready to proceed toward home, the Park Point cars had stopped running and they were forced to walk to the canal, a distance of about two miles.

The audible reflections of the members of the party on the general cussedness of things, and the solemn oaths by which they bound themselves to secrecy, as they toiled through the sand, a weary bedraggled band, cast on the bleak coast of a cold and cheerless land, were heard only by the sighing pines. The only loss, besides that of their composure, was that of the overcoats of the gentlemen.

DOES NOT LIKE IT.

M. J. Davis Answers the News Tribune's Criticism.

M. J. Davis, speaking for the board of public works said today that the criticism of that body in the morning paper did the members an injustice.

"We are very anxious to push the work at Lakewood as fast as possible," said he. "We decided to lay off the trench force because there is no pipe on the ground at present. We awarded the contract for pipe in time and it is not our fault that it has not arrived before this. As soon as it does come in, we will put the men at work again. It was not thought best to proceed with the trench and tear up paved streets until a supply arrived.

"The board has, also, been criticized for not having seen to it that better water has been furnished. That matter is not properly under our jurisdiction. We have recommended, though, that the city should be in a position to conduct investigations of the intake pipes on its own account. The board has urged that a diving suit be purchased, but nothing has been done in that direction yet."

Both Bound Over.

The preliminary hearing of Frank and Mike Riley and Barney Kolman, charged with the larceny of some whisky from Zien's saloon on Saturday last, was heard in the municipal court today, the accused being bound over to the grand jury in the sum of $350 each.

Detectives Donovan and Troyer had the prisoners' pictures taken, after which they were taken to the county jail, in default of bail.

Must Move Down.

The scarlet woman who reside outside the pale must take up their quarters on the P'int or leave town, is the dictum of Chief Hansen. Notice to that effect was served on them today. Many of them have taken advantage of a temporary leniency in the interpretation of the rule confining members of the demi-monde within certain bounds and there is quite a settlement of them along Superior street and above it.

FIDELITY LODGE.

A Fine Meeting of United Workmen This Week.

Fidelity lodge, No. 165, A. O. U. W., held its regular meeting Thursday evening. There was a large attendance, owing principally to the fact that there were six candidates for initiation. Brother Hare, from Minneapolis, was a visitor. After initiating the candidates, arrangements were made for the basket social next Thursday evening in honor of the sixth anniversary of the lodge. Prominent speakers from outside will be in attendance, and Past Master Sly, one of the charter members of the order, will address the meeting. Brother Hare complimented the members of the order on the character of the members initiated, and predicted for Fidelity lodge a large increase in its membership from the hustling which had been going on during the past three months. He gave out the astonishing statement that during the existence of the order no less a sum than $1,250,000,000 had been paid out to widows and orphans of deceased members of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and the good work was still going on.

"They have never," said Brother Hare, "been defendants in a lawsuit during their existence."

INMAN DENIES IT.

Never Said That the Intake Is Broken.

In the News Tribune this morning Capt. B. B. Inman is quoted as saying that there is a break in the intake pipe of the Duluth Gas and Water company's plant in about the same locality as the one that was repaired during the winter. He was made to say that just before he left for Isle Royale to recover the Centurion's cargo he made a hasty examination at the request of the gas and water people, when the break was discovered. He could not undertake the work of repair at that time because his wrecking outfit was all loaded and fine insurance people were here waiting for him to go.

Capt. Inman today denied the article completely and he made the following statement which explains itself:

"My attention has been called to an article in your paper this morning which states that there is a break in the Fourteenth avenue intake pipe and that I have been quoted as authority. I wish to correct this statement, as I have not told anyone anything of the kind, and to my personal knowledge I know the Fourteenth avenue pipe is in perfect order. The writer of this article has been misled from the fact that there was a break in the Lakeside pipe, caused by the ice on the last gale of wind, and the Duluth Gas and Water company had requested our services to repair the same. We had spent two days with our diving outfit, but did not have time to complete the job on account of our copper contract at Isle Royale. The Duluth Gas and Water company was very anxious to have us complete the job, but, as the copper contract called for our whole outfit, and the insurance agent was here, we were obliged to leave at once. We then tried to get another outfit to help them out and we informed them that Capt. Singer had an outfit, and, if they could not get him, we would send to Chicago and help them out as quickly as possible. The Lakeside pipe was put in perfect order last winter and would have been so this spring, only for the unusual heavy ice floes of which carried it away; and since then there has been no weather fit to do this work."

THE QUEEN NEARING THE EIGHTIES

The British Queen Will Reach Another Birthday in Feeble Health.

Fear it May Be Her Last.

Interesting Incidents of Her Childhood---Her Proposal to the Prince Consort.

London, May 23.—Queen Victoria will celebrate her seventy-fifth birthday tomorrow. She has reigned fifty-eight years, much longer than any living sovereign, and the only older one is the king of Denmark.

The military will go through the usual honorary routine. The artillery at all the naval and military stations will fire salutes and the troops will parade. The Queen's Household brigade will perform their annual ceremony of trooping their colors, which thousands of persons will witness on the parade ground at Whitehall.

The queen was born on May 24, 1819, at Kensington palace, and was the only child of the duke of Kent, fourth son of George III. The duke of Kent is on record as calling his daughter "plump as a partridge." His affection for her had a curious connection with his death. He came home with wet feet and, instead of changing his shoes, went to the nursery to play with her, and in consequence caught cold and died. At five years the Princess Victoria is described as having "a countenance which bespeaks perfect health and great temper." She had fair hair and complexion and very large eyes. She used to ride a donkey gally caparisoned with blue ribbons in Kensington gardens, and would accost passersby with "How do you do?" and Queen Victoria.

"Good morning." She has always retained her regard for the donkey family. The duchess of Kent trained her daughter very thoroughly. She was careful that she should appear very seldom at the court of her uncle, George IV. One of the effects of her mother's training was the simplicity in dress which has always characterized her. She was 18 years old when she became queen by the death of William IV, on June 20, 1837. At that time she was a very sweet-looking young woman, with very fair hair, large blue eyes and rosy cheeks, easily blushing. Above all, her appearance was fresh and wholesome. Writing of the queen's voice as she heard it at the coronation, Fanny Kemble, the great actress, said: "The enunciation was as perfect as the intonation was melodious, and I think it impossible to hear a more excellent utterance than that of the queen's English by the English queen." With her coronation robes she wore the insignia of the Order of the Garter, the highest order of knighthood in England. There was some doubt as to where the garter should be worn. The left arm was finally decided on. Her marriage followed three years later. She was fortunate in finding in her cousin, Prince Albert of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, one who was acceptable to the country, and whom she herself loved.

The queen had to propose to her husband. Once she asked him if he liked England, and he said: "Very much." "Then why should you ever leave it?" she asked. By little inquiries of this kind she ascertained the state of his feelings, and finally made a declaration. She told him that he would make her intensely happy if he would sacrifice himself and share his life with her.

The queen and the prince consort had a honeymoon of three days. There were many uncomfortable features at first about the latter's position. The law gave him no exact social precedence. Lord Albemarle, master of the horse, maintained that he had the right to sit in the queen's carriage on state occasions, and not the prince consort. The duke of Wellington, however, gave his opinion that the queen could put Lord Albemarle where she liked—either on top of the coach or beneath it, or anywhere else. The queen took wonderful care of her beloved husband, whom she was to lose so early. In her diary she speaks with sorrow of his delicate stomach. So many attempts have been made on the queen's life that she has been under fire more than many a soldier. In all cases she showed courage and presence of mind. The queen's first child, the Princess Royal, was born in 1840. From that time on she diligently fulfilled the Scriptural injunction to increase and multiply. There are countless portraits of her with her children, and some of these are very pleasing. She has been painted and photographed with one, two, three, four, five, six, seven and eight children. A favorite photograph in recent years was the one in which she holds the Princess Beatrice's child, at the time her youngest grandchild. The queen's domestic qualities having been much spoken of, it will be interesting to hear an opinion she once expressed on the subject of women in politics: "We women are not made for governing, and if we are good women we must dislike these masculine occupations."

During the past year her age has weighed perceptibly upon her, and from time to time alarming rumors about her health have circulated, some going so far as to declare she was losing her mind, and that for days at a time her mind wandered. Her public appearances are becoming very rare. She walks with the greatest difficulty, having become very stout. Despite the loss of the charms of early life and her retirement from public gaze, she retains undiminished the affection of her subjects. There will be no unusual celebration of her birthday this year, but the anniversary is never allowed to pass without some simple ceremony in the royal circle.

SCIENCE AND INVENTION.

The Rhode Island State Fair association has got into line with the progressive spirit of the decade by offering a prize of $5000 for the best "horseless carriage" exhibited at the fair to be held at Narragansett Park in September next. Unquestionably no department of invention has ever been so encouraged by such prizes as that which is embodied in the auto-mobile carriage. The secret of manufacturing a thoroughly practical vehicle of the class referred to is yet to be discovered, though many encouraging experiments have been made; but if prizes continue to be offered with such princely liberality, it will not be surprising to hear of inventors adopting the tactics of premier pugilists and declining all invitations, except that one which is accompanied by the largest purse. The competitors for the honor of furnishing the world with a perfect auto-mobile carriage are surprisingly few when the number who are entirely capable of wrestling with the problem is considered, and when it is known how enormous will be the reward which will crown the efforts of the successful inventor. One reason for the meagerness of efforts in the direction indicated is that men secretly underestimate their own abilities and overestimate the abilities of other men in matters where boasting is not sufficient, but in which real work must be indicated by material results. The inventor, considering the subject for the first time, concludes that his professional brethren who have been earlier in the field have undoubtedly done all that can be done and that it will be useless for him to try. They defeat themselves—just as thousand of others do—by running away from an unfought field, or, possibly, from a retreating adversary. Why spend our energies in perfecting some trifling improvement in the already nearly perfect bicycle when numberless greater possibilities demand attention, for the auto-mobile carriage? Every skilled mechanic and every inventor should give this question some thought.

Physicians in Chicago can obtain their bicycles and phaetons the right-of-way over other vehicles by providing themselves with a red cross badge at a cost of 50 cents and wearing said badge conspicuously when riding or driving. This puts the private physician and the public ambulance on the same plane and, unless the medics are inclined to be arbitrary and abuse the privilege, it is doubtless a good provision.

ON THE MESABA RANGE.

Night Shift at the Biwabik Laid Off.

John Tod, of Cleveland, president of the Biwabik Bessemer company, was in town last Friday to inspect the mine, says the Mesaba Range. He complimented the local management by saying that the property is in better shape this spring than ever before. Mr. Tod was unable to say at the present time just how strong stripping operations would be prosecuted the remainder of this season. At a meeting of the directors of the company to be held in Cleveland soon that question will be decided. The company has decided to discontinue the night-shift for the season as the proposed output of 350,000 tons can easily be loaded in the daytime with two shovels. This move will reduce the cost of operations considerably as it will do away with the expense of running the electric light plant. Besides much better work can be done in the daytime than at night.

On Saturday last George Nichols and crew of the Drake & Stratton steam shovel No. 215 loaded 421 dump cars of dirt. The average is over two and a half yards to the car. This beats all previous records. On Tuesday of last week the same crew loaded 420 cars.

Harry Roberts has taken an option on five forties in sections 4 and 5, 57-17, near Ely lake, from the Security land company. There are good indications of a body of ore there. Capt. Roberts has been compelled to discontinue explorations for a time until the water dries up in the woods. The recent rains have made small lakes all through the woods.

SIMPLE

MacMonnies' First Figure for the West Point Monument Changed.

The Art Censors Did Not Like it Though Sulptors Did.

Is a Memorial to Regulars Killed in the Civil War.

West Point, May 23.—No American military monument has caused more discussion in the artistic world than the battle monument erected here. The great shaft was erected on Trophy point at West Point in memory of the officers and enlisted men of the United States regular army who were killed or died of wounds received in action during the civil war. The idea of erecting a battle monument at West Point was first conceived by Maj. C. H. Hasbrauck, now of the Fourth artillery, when he was a young lieutenant in 1864. Every officer in the service contributed a sixth of his pay for one month to the committee that had been appointed at West Point, and at the end of the month $50,000 had been raised. It was nearly thirty years later when the first stone was laid. In designing the monument the architects were careful to make it purely martial in character and impressive in form. Grace and beauty of outlines in absolute harmony with the surroundings were ever kept in view. Bulky or massive treatment were put aside, and a monolithic shaft of splendid proportions rises to almost a height of eighty feet above the many trophies gathered on the spot. The base of the monument is circular. Several flights of granite steps lead up to it. Huge polished spheres of the same material rest on cannon at appropriate intervals. These cannon are set on square blocks of granite, weighing several tons each.

The figure which is to surmount the whole is supposed to be the crowning glory of the monument. It is this figure soon to be unveiled that has caused the trouble. Frederick MacMonnies, the distinguished sculptor, was selected to make it. Its name was to be "Fame." When the committee who had the matter in charge viewed the figure after it had arrived from France, there was considerable dissatisfaction expressed, but after a consultation with the architects the figure was placed on its lofty pedestal of gray Milford granite, which towers over the scores of captured cannon on the site of old Fort Shelbourne. A date had been set for the unveiling ceremonies, but the officers found fault with "Fame" and the date was postponed. The gentlemen in charge of the matter declared that the figure had not been designed for so lofty a pedestal. However, a meeting of the committee was called, the architects and MacMonnies were invited to be present. "Fame" was formally pronounced a failure, and MacMonnies received an order for a figure of "Victory." This displacement of one of the finest statues ever constructed by Mr. MacMonnies has caused much public comment. When the figure of "Fame" was first placed on the battle monument at West Point it received most favorable comment from every direction. It was reproduced, by request, in 3-foot bronze statuettes, and these have been scattered throughout the country in schools and other public buildings. Leading artists have declared that Mr. MacMonnies' conception of "Fame" was most forcible, and suggestive in every way of dauntlessness. The statute of "Victory," which will soon be erected in its place, though dignified and poetical, does not seem to many sculptors to lend the same inspiration or suggest the same force as the figure it replaces. All attempts to get a statement from the architects as to why the first figure was displaced have been unsuccessful, and artists are puzzled to know the motives behind the change.

IRELAND LOSES HIS GREAT WEALTH!

The Archbishop's Fortune in Land Sacrificed to the Hard Times.

End to His Life's Ambition

Wanted to Build a Magnificent Cathedral in St. Paul to Perpetuate His Memory.

St. Paul, May 23.—Archbishop Ireland three years ago was worth $1,500,000; today he is practically a poor man. Through real estate speculation he made his vast fortune; through the same channel he has lost it.

Archbishop Ireland is not a bankrupt, but his affairs are in such shape that when fully settled he will have little that he can call his own. The fortune which the archbishop created, and which has since taken wings, was a private one. He speculated with his own money, and whatever he gained or lost was his individually.

In no way will the church be affected directly through the archbishop's turn in fortune, but indirectly it means a loss to the church of a magnificent cathedral, a well endowed school, or both. Archbishop Ireland is an unselfish man, and it has been his life's dream to be able to erect with his own funds and present to the church a cathedral equal to if not greater than any in the United States. Up to the time of the panic of 1893 everything appeared favorable to a realization of his dream. Since then his hopes have received a severe shock with the impairment of his fortunes, yet if there is anything to be saved of the archbishop's estate it will be saved.

Three months ago Archbishop Ireland awoke to the fact that he was very seriously embarrassed. He owned large tracts of property in St. Paul and minor holdings outside of the city, but the property was unimproved and brought in no income. He had borrowed large sums of money with which to carry on his deals, and for the interest and principal of different mortgages which were fast becoming due.

IMPOSSIBLE TO SELL.

His real estate in good times would be easily worth 50 per cent over and above his liabilities, but values had shrunk heavily, money was tight and it was almost impossible to sell property such as that in which the archbishop had his fortune invested. What to do in the emergency was hard for the archbishop to determine. Finally, however, he determined to call upon several of his friends to act as an advisory committee.

He first chose Maurice Auerbach, president of the Union bank, and W. B. Dean, of the firm of Nichols & Dean, but the committee was soon increased to five, the other members being ex-Governor Merriam, Col. W. P. Clough, vice president of the Great Northern railroad, and A. H. Lindeke, a wholesale dry goods merchant. The members of this committee, so they say, while all personal friends of the archbishop, are none of them members of his church, nor are they his creditors.

They say further that they have loaned him no money as a committee, nor have they undertaken to raise any funds to aid the archbishop. They have acted, they say, simply in an advisory capacity, and the archbishop, taking advantage of their suggestions, has been able to satisfy most of his pressing creditors.

The scheme pursued has been to turn over his property in lieu of cash, without foreclosure proceedings, to all those who have insisted upon immediate settlement. Archbishop Ireland's creditors are all large money lending corporations or individuals, say the members of the advisory committee. In no instance has any poor man been interested, and, furthermore, the committee says so far as they know, no member of the archbishop's church is on the list of creditors.

LOANS WERE GILT-EDGED ONCE.

The money borrowed from time to time by the archbishop was all on first mortgages after the property had been appraised by local real estate experts, and at the time the risks were considered gilt-edged. For instance on land which before the panic was generally conceded to be worth $2500 to $3000 per acre, the archbishop borrowed $200 to $300 per acre. That same land today would be appraised at from $1500 to $2000 per acre were there any purchasers, but real estate in St. Paul at the present time is in a state of coma, and buyers cannot be found at any price. So it is that Archbishop Ireland is compelled to surrender large amounts of property to satisfy clamoring creditors, which, if he could but hold until a return of good times, would make him even richer than before.

It has been a great sacrifice on the part of the archbishop to allow his splendid property to be taken that he might maintain his credit, but his committee advised that course as the only safe one, and he has reluctantly complied. Negotiations with a number of creditors are still pending, but members of the committee state that they are fully satisfied that legal proceedings will be avoided and that the archbishop will pull through his present difficulty with perfect honor, though in all probability with the loss of his entire fortune.

The fact that Archbishop Ireland was ever possessed of so much wealth will be news to many people in this country. But what is more surprising is that there are thousands of people in St. Paul, where the archbishop has resided for the past quarter of a century, who have never had the slightest conception of the vastness of his real estate holdings.

MADE LARGE SUMS.

Archbishop Ireland began speculating in real estate as early as 1880, in the early days of St. Paul's boom. He made large sums of money and was tempted to go deeper. At first he bought real estate, only to sell it again as soon as he could secure an advance, but later he purchased large tracts to hold for future rise. It was about the time he became a successful operator in St. Paul real estate that he conceived the idea of colonizing large numbers of his countrymen on the rich lands of Minnesota.

In 1881 he founded the first colony at Avoca, which has proved to be one of the most successful in the country. Later he started a colony at Graceville, which he named after the venerable Archbishop Grace, his predecessor. To these he added two more colonies, which he named De Graff and Clontarf, and which are now flourishing villages.

It was in part with the money the archbishop made in his St. Paul real estate speculations that land was secured on which to start these colonies. The railroads also donated large tracts of land, but it was through Archbishop Ireland that they became interested in the scheme.

No; all the land was given to the colonists. Upon their arrival they were each allotted a small plot, and were afterward allowed to buy more land upon which to extend their farming operations at low prices and on easy terms. Archbishop Ireland made no money out of these colonies, for he was not interested in them for that purpose, yet it is said he still has small holdings of land in each of the four colonies.

GOT THE COVETED FRANCHISE.

The archbishop's city property lies principally on the west side of St. Paul, the most desirable residence portion of the city, and most of it is adjacent to the Interurban electric line, which connects the Twin Cities. It is said that he owned until recently a total of at least 3000 lots, or about 250 acres, in this part of the city. All this land would have had an average value before the panic of nearly $2000 per acre.

The property has no buildings on it, yet is improved to the extent of sidewalks, gas, sewerage and good transportation facilities. By those who are well acquainted with Archbishop Ireland's career as a real estate operator, he is said to have been one of the shrewdest speculators in the Northwest. When he began buying land in the western end of St. Paul he immediately saw the necessity of adequate transportation facilities. In fact, he is the father of the magnificent electric railway system of which St. Paul now boasts.

Street car companies and wealthy individuals sought for many years to secure from the city of St. Paul a franchise for an electric street railway, but in vain. Finally Archbishop Ireland went before the city council and told that body that he felt that an electric street car system was becoming necessary, and he insisted they grant him a franchise for a road to be run by him for one year as an experiment. At the end of that time, if the experiment was not considered a success, he would be willing to relinquish his claims to the franchise.

Absolute faith in him secured the much-desired franchise, and in a very short time thereafter what is now known as the Grand avenue line, which extends from the center of the city to Groveland park, within half a mile of the Mississippi river, was constructed. While Archbishop Ireland was responsible for the conduct of the road, he operated it only in name. The money to build it was furnished by leading capitalists of St. Paul, and at the end of the year, when it was declared a complete success, the capitalists took full charge.

The archbishop owns a handsome mansion at the corner of Portland avenue and Chatsworth. Within about a stone's throw from the archbishop's home is located a broad plot of ground, filling an entire square. On this land the archbishop expected to erect a magnificent cathedral, which would serve as a monument to him.

MAY RECOUP HIS FORTUNES.

But Archbishop Ireland is still a young man, and notwithstanding his great financial reverses, many of his friends are sanguine that he may some day recoup his fortunes.

The archbishop today admitted that he had been caught on a large amount of real estate at the end of the boom, and that he had bought property at figures which no one else would pay. But he said he did so through his unbounded faith in the future of St. Paul real estate. He added that his affairs had been in bad shape, but that with the aid of his friends he had been able to make a number of settlements, and hoped that his financial condition would soon improve.

PAPER MATCHES.

Paper matches are the latest. The time-honored scheme of rolling up a piece of paper and using it for a lighter has been utilized by an inventor in the manufacture of matches and promises to revolutionize European match making, says the Chicago Chronicle. It is particularly timely, because the wood for this purpose is constantly growing more scarce and costly. The new matches are cheaper than those made of wood and weigh much less, quite an item in exportation. The paper used is strong and porous, and when immersed in a solution of wax, stearine and similar substances, burns with a bright, smokeless and odorless flame. Strips of half an inch in width are first drawn through a combustible bath and are then turned by machinery into long, thin tubes. They are then cut to match length and the heads dipped into phosphorous wax and dried.

GOSSIP OF ★ ★ THE STAGE.

When "The Passing Show" was on the road last season one of its features for a short time was a bare-foot "Trilby dance," performed by two pretty and chunky girls called the Leigh sisters. They added to the interest of the occasion by making their first appearance behind a big Japanese umbrella, beneath which the bare shins of only one of the sisters were visible. Presently, however, another pair dropped down surprisingly from behind the umbrella, for one of the dancers had been called about her sister's waist. Last summer, when the girls were doing this dance on a New York roof garden, they were observed by Charles Ross, a young man whose father is rich and keeps a livery stable. Ross was much pleased with the dance and with the Leighs, and in the wild exuberance of his spirits he purchased roses recklessly and scattered them on the stage, forgetful of the fact that thorns go with roses. The sisters bounded on the stage in response to an uproarious encore, executed three or four pas seuls, then stopped abruptly and hobbled off to their dressing rooms to pick thorns out of their feet. That evening Mr. Ross sought and obtained an introduction to the sisters and made abject apologies. He was forgiven. The next night he scattered more roses, but took care to see that they were properly manicured. Now he is to marry Stella Leigh, the younger of the sisters, the one whose pink toes came down from behind the umbrella. She will leave the stage and Edna will dance alone.

Laura Burt, who was the first Madge in "In Old Kentucky," is going to "star" in a play called "The Lily of Llandaff," the scene of which is laid in Wales. Miss Burt's family is Welsh.

Dorothy Usner is a young actress who, in New York the other night, slapped the face of a street loafer who annoyed her. The Dramatic News says of her: "Miss Usner is rather sensitive about the attention she has received as the outcome of her act. She has never courted notoriety, and the chorus of approval that has been awakened by her prompt resentment of an offense against her womanhood is very repellan to her. Miss Usner is not at all the amazon she appears to imagine people think her. She is a gentle-bred young girl, with expressive black eyes and the utmost refinement of manner. She has been on the stage for a couple of years, playing inconspicuous parts, but making a very agreeable impression by her earnestness and adaptability."

All London marveled over the fact that the prince of Wales did not wear gloves on the first night of "The Geisha" at Daly's theater. An observant person cleared up the mystery with the following letter to a newspaper: "I think I can tell you why. I had called at the box office just about the time the curtain was to rise, in the fond hope that some one might have returned a seat at the last minute. But nothing of the kind occurred, and I was coming sorrowfully away when his royal highness' carriage drove up to the royal entrance of the theater. As he got out the prince dropped his gloves, which he held in his hand, into the road. The footman at once picked them up, but his royal highness said something that sounded like 'Thanks—never mind,' and went into the theater. No doubt the gloves got dirty in the road. This was the very simple cause which, as you know, has led to so much writing of paragraphs and things."

By way of a travesty on the "all-star" cast of "The Rivals" a comic performance of that play is to be given in New York, in aid of the Herald's Fresh Air fund. The performers participating will be Willie Collier, Dan Daly, Otis Harlan, John C. Rice, Peter F. Daily, Andrew Mack, Mark Sullivan, James Russell, Marie Dressler and Maggie Cline.

A play newly produced in New York last week reveals the important fact that the Christian name of the "daughter of Widow McNally," who, as the song sweetly tells, "rist her life for a boy," is Nellie. The Sunshine of Paradise Alley" is the play and it was put together by Denman Thompson and George W. Ryer, authors of "The Old Homestead." It is a plotless piece, composed of natural pictures of lowly life in New York. Nellie McNally, the heroine, sheds sunshine throughout the evening and saves several of her associates from drunkard's graves.

The author of "The Mother of Three," a successful comedy in which Felix Morris is playing in London, is Miss Cicely Graves, a bright young Irish woman, whose father was a soldier. She has lived in London for several years during which time she has written serials, sketches, essays, opera lyrics, comic songs, farces and every imaginable sort of thing, besides making pictures for the comic papers and even taking on turn at acting. Her earlier plays were not failures and "The Mother of Three" is a decided winner. So now Miss Graves has plenty of money and brilliant prospects. Her brother, Capt. Graves, of the Chinese imperial service, was one of the famous five Europeans who fought in the great naval battle before Wei-hai-wei.

Bicycling is the theme of a farce-comedy called "Mr. Wheeler of Wheeling," which is announced for production at the Schiller theater in Chicago next month. It ends with a bicycle race run by well known bicyclists, which is, from start to finish, in full view of the audience. This is made possible by a device which leaves the riders free agents to a hustling finish.

Mrs. Henry E. Abbey emphasized her recently announced intention of returning to the stage by appearing conspicuously at a professional matinee in New York Friday. There have been many conjectures as to Mrs. Abbey's plans for next season, but she has merely stated that she will appear in a new comedy now successfully running in London. This can hardly be any other than Cicely Graves' "The Mother of Three," in which Fannie Brough has the leading part. Charles Frohman is to produce "The Mother of Three" at Hoyt's theater early in the fall, following Bisson's farce, "The Liar."

The strange conduct of a box party of four women and two men puzzled and alarmed the audience that attended a performance of "The County Fair" in Chicago the other night. Between two of the acts one of the men deliberately stepped from the box to the stage. He tried immediately to force his way between the proscenium arch and the curtain, but as the latter was securely held down he had small success at first. One by one all the other members of the box party scrambled to the stage and by main force they pushed the curtain back and disappeared. Back on the stage the sudden interruption of the party of stylishly dressed strangers created equal consternation, until one of the invaders explained that they had been invited to visit Nell Burgess behind the scenes and wished to be shown to his dressing room. Just then Mr. Burgess appeared and shook hands with the visitors, all unconscious of how they had arrived behind the scenes. When they took leave of him and made for the same extraordinary exit which had been their entrance, however, Mr. Burgess interfered and showed them out by the door.

The Dramatic Mirror says Collin Kemper is going to Europe next month.

John L. Toole once sent a packet of chocolates to a small boy in a stage box who was disturbing his performance by uproarious laughter. "With Mr. Toole's compliments," said the attendant, "and would the young gentleman kindly eat these during the play?"

ACTORS' DRESSING ROOMS.

Mostly Small, Stuffy Places With No Conveniences.

One of the never-ending causes of dissension in theatrical companies is the question of the "star's dressing room." The majority of the dressing rooms in the average theater are uncomfortable enough, says the New York Sun. They are so different in the point of comfort from the auditorium of the theater that foreign actors who come to this country can never say enough in praise of the elegance and luxury of what is professionally known as the "front of the house," and express themselves with sufficient emphasis in abuse of the facilities provided for the actors. In view of the preparations they are called upon to make, it is amazing to an outsider to witness the poor accommodations provided for them. Rarely are these rooms larger than closets. Usually they have no windows, and when they are provided with them the openings usually face a brick wall only a few feet away. For years actors have been discussing means by which they could secure better dressing rooms, and within recent years there has been some improvement. But they are complaining still, and apparently with more cause than usual. Running water, for instance, is a luxury almost unknown, and the lighting apparatus, which should supposedly be most complete, is generally meager and crude.

The "star's" dressing room is, of course, larger than any of the others. If there is any convenience to be found in the theater it will be in this room. Usually it is larger than the others. It is better lighted, and in the larger cities may be supplied with a bath and running water. It is, in most cases, on a level of the stage, which means that there will be no climbing up and down narrow and usually dirty stairs to get to it. It is the star dressing room in every sense of the word. But it is not dear to the actor's heart because it has all these material advantages. It is not the thing, but the thing signified, as the grammar says, which interests the actor from the time he appears first and makes him fix his eyes with longing on the closed door of the "star's" dressing room. The occupancy of that apartment, whether it be large or small, clean or dirty, light or dark, means pre-eminence. Only the leader gets into that. Once inside, as the villain in the melodrama puts it, all is safe. The haven has been realized temporarily at least. So it happens that this important question as to who shall have the "star's" dressing room has to be settled before every company leaves New York, and a rule has to be made which will be adhered to in Little Falls as well as in New York.

Of course there are companies in which this question could never arise. Actors like Joseph Jefferson or William H. Crane are never interested in the question. They take the room without dispute. But companies that contain no acknowledged star, but a "leading lady" and a "leading man," usually struggle with the question before there is peace. Usually the solution in such a case is determined by the fact as to whether or not either one of them has ever been a "star" in the past. He or she is likely to get it. But if the ex-star doesn't, why, no end of struggling and bickering is likely to follow. Sometimes the man or woman who goes into a production makes a success which really entitles the actor to be the "star" of the company. Then the trouble commences. Somebody else may have the "star's" dressing room then, and the eyes of the fortunate actor are straightway turned toward the coveted dressing room. Sometimes the manager is weak enough to eject the occupant and put in the successful actor. If the successful one is really a strenuous kicker, he is likely to get the dressing room, as the manager would rather eject the supposed star than lose the actor who had done most for the success of the piece. But he must make up his mind to listen to the lamentations of the dispossessed player.

"Stars" who play permanently in one theater, or have any influence in its control, guard their dressing rooms very jealously. Richard Mansfield's dressing room, while he was the manager of the Garrick, was a sacred spot into which no less important actor dare penetrate. When Mr. Mansfield went away he turned the key in the lock and carried the key away with him. At Daly's Ada Rehan's dressing room was closed like a shrine, from which the deity was temporarily absent, and no profane player ever got into it until Mrs. Potter came to act at the theater in "The Queen's Necklace." She had to change her costume twelve times during the play, and she made such a protest against climbing up a flight of stairs to the dressing room assigned to her that she succeeded in getting into Miss Rehan's room, which is on the level of the stage. When Georgia Cayvan was at the Lyceum she had a large dressing room, half of which was furnished as a sitting room, with a tea table and other homelike adjuncts. But this decoration is rare. Usually the four bare walls are not ornamented with anything besides a few spots of grease paint or finger smudges. Abbey's theater has two large "star's" dressing rooms on the Thirty-eighth street side of the building, and these are spacious enough to hold a lounge and other unusual luxuries of this kind.

The popular idea of actors' dressing rooms as quaintly and artistically decorated apartments is like some other popular ideas, quite erroneous. A few wigs and suspenders, old slippers and towels are likely to constitute their only decoration. As a rule, they are insufferably hot. At the Garrick, for instance, most of them are under the stage. The Empire has comfortably ventilated rooms on the north side of the theater, and those at Palmer's are chiefly in a residence which adjoins the back of the theater.

The opera singers fare far better than the actors in this respect. Their rooms are large and comfortable. When the season opens the singer who is to occupy the room has his or her name put on the door, and this stays there throughout the year. Unlike the actors, they never have to share their rooms with other singers. The two De Reszkes have two large rooms, one flight up, on the Thirty-ninth street side of the building, and they have occupied them ever since they came here first. Melba has a room on the first floor on the up-town side of the building, and so has Calve. There was only one complaint about the rooms heard last winter, and that came from Maurel, who attributed his failure as Escamillo in "Carmen" entirely to the fact that his dressing room was too small. He wanted a large one from which he could get from a short distance the effect of his make-up. He was unwilling to shave off his moustache, and decided to cover it over with sticking plaster. His own room was too small for him to get the effect of this treatment, so he asked for the use of M. Luber's room for the evenings on which he was to sing in "Carmen." The tenor was willing, but Manager Grau was not, so Maurel never had a chance to tell what he looked like before he went on the stage to sing his part. He made a bad failure, and attributed it even after he had sung the part a half dozen times to his nervousness over the appearance of that moustache covered over with sticking plaster.

In the music halls the dressing rooms are small, and usually the number of performers is so large that the same room is used by two or more performers. This is easy enough in the case of some of them, but with others it is very difficult. The eccentric comedians who rig themselves up in electric batteries or feather beds complain when they are compelled to dress in the room with a troupe of trained rats or a performer who is merely going to sing a song or two when he finds himself in a four by six room with an acrobat who practises handsprings to limber himself up, or a juggler like Cinquevalli, who throws cannon balls about to get himself into condition before his turn comes. But any of these inconveniences would be unimportant compared with the pleasure of occupying the "stars" dressing room, which, unfortunately, does not exist in a music hall.

PLAYS THE BOWERY LIKES.

Must Have Realistic Effects or Gingerbread Elegance.

The leading juvenile in a wonderful make-up played the part of a ubiquitous detective in a realistic drama at a Bowery theater one night last week, says the Sun. The gallery was with him to a boy. He really gave them more than the part demanded. The dramatist had assigned to him the task of exposing a double-dock villain of great ingenuity, and that in itself was no easy job. The hero was simply a come-on, though his sentiments were noble, and if it hadn't been for the detective his career of usefulness would have ended before the curtain fell on the first act. But his detective wasn't content with shadowing the villain, and saying at intervals, "Hist! I know all." When work in the detective line was slack and the villain was off the stage, he wasn't above doing a song and dance.

And how the gallery did hate that villain. They hissed him when he came before the curtain with the other members of the company. Admiration for his cleverness and disgust for his wickedness swayed them alternately. When the villain's wicked plot had been exposed to every one but the hero, he took the center of the stage and accused the hero of a crime which he, the villain, had committed. It was a critical moment. A ragged little chap, who had taken off his coat, that he might enjoy the play the more, and who leaned over the gallery rail at the imminent peril of falling, relieved the situation by shouting earnestly to the villain:

"You lie! You done it yourself!"

Even this friendly warning was unheeded by the hero, and he went stumbling into one misfortune after another until the last act, where, by the aid of the ubiquitous detective, he claimed his rights and unmasked the villain.

The two classes of drama that never fall on the Bowery are the plays of realistic effects and the plays of gingerbread elegance. They are produced chiefly by traveling combination companies now, and they are calculated to awaken the emotions of Bradford, Pa., and thrill the bosoms of Three Rivers, Mich. There is just as much thunder in the realistic Bowery drama now as there was in the days when "Nick o' the Woods" was a red-hot favorite, but the grandiloquent speeches are toned down. The gallery wouldn't enthuse over Tillie Doe's scene with the villain in "Nick o' the Woods," where she said:

"Back, perjured wretch! Lay a finger on me, and I will send thy coward soul to the fiery depths that yawn for it!"

Bradford and Three Rivers may have it if they choose, but the Bowery wants something more to the point. There was a realistic scene in this good old play that could be counted on to work the house up to fever pitch. Theater-goers of today who saw it when they were boys can probably recall the thrill that it gave them. Tanks and sawmills had not, at that time, taken their legitimate place in the realistic drama.

A runway from right to left at the back of the stage represented a raging torrent. The hero, in a truck, with a profile canoe carefully held between him and the audience, descended this raging current with a property torch in his hand, and arrived on the scene just in time to thwart the villain. Sometimes the truck would stick in the middle of the descent, and then the gallery would shudder. A push from a stage hand would relieve the awkward situation, and the hero always did up the villain. This was considered a very realistic effect then. The characters who appeared in these old-time favorites inhabited no known sphere. Even the actors who portrayed them were not like other men. They wore fur on the collars of their evening coats, and they differentiated themselves in other ways.

A change has come over their methods, and now the Bowery doesn't want anything queer about its realism. If a boat is to be used on the stage, it must be a real boat or an excellent imitation of it, else the gallery will jeer. The audience is not quite so sure of itself when it comes to a play of gingerbread elegance. When an East Side star goes in for society drama, the results are awe inspiring. The play itself usually begins "Act 1. The House of the Merchant Prince." A ball is bound to be in progress. The dancing is off stage, but people come on and talk about it.

Then in queer evening coats that started in life as frocks, and women who wear the sleeves and are ablaze with paste diamonds come on the stage and address each other as "M. Lu Harong" or "Madam Lu Markoose," while the piccolo and second violin stand off stage and give a bad imitation of a large orchestra some distance away. Papier mache refreshments are served at irregular intervals, and the leading characters drink pale blonde tea from champagne glasses. When this company goes to Three Rivers, Mich., to reflect New York's best society, the costumes of the women are attributed on the program to "M. Worth of Paris." Their style suggests the best fashion of Division street to a Bowery audience. The wealthier the characters of this kind of play and the more titles they have the better are its chances of popular favor. Though some of the best plays of the season have short engagements on the Bowery now, they don't draw a typical Bowery audience.

"To hit the box office," said a Bowery manager, "we want a play that has effects or a play that is dead elegant."

FRENCH VIEW OF "TRILBY."

The Bare Feet Discussed---Beerbohm Tree Licked.

Jules Claretie, director of the Theater Francaise, on a recent visit to London became enthusiastic over the play of "Trilby," and thus wrote of it to the Parisians in Le Temps:

I think that of all the portraits shown at the London Royal Academy this year the one which will attract the attention of the greatest number will be that which Mr. Sant has just finished of Miss Dorothea Baird as Trilby. The author of this play, which all London has rushed to see, Paul M. Potter, has lately been in Paris, where this adaptation from the romance of George du Maurier will soon be given. And this, I think, is the first intimation of it to the public.

Mr. Sant has represented the young actress in the costume which is almost classic now, and which you see so frequently in the windows of book stores, Trilby the model, in striped skirt, over which she has thrown the old blue coat of a French soldier, military belt about her waist and red epaulettes on her shoulders, the whole a delicious setting for the fresh blonde face above it. Her eyes are raised and her mouth half opened, in the attitude of trance, which the actress takes several times in this play, based upon the enigmas of hypnotism.

Nothing could be more successful than this portrait, nothing is more charming than the original, the young girl of 20 who plays so perfectly the little model fallen into the tide of the Bohemian life of Paris.

Miss Baird is just married to the son of Henry Irving, and this little romance adds to her aureole—as does also her lovely golden hair. She has found, or, rather Mr. Tree has discovered for her, something which is a novelty on the stage. In the first act of "Trilby" the little studio model enters with bare feet, pretty bare feet, of irreproachable shapeliness, appearing with a bit of rosy ankle under the striped skirt.

They are really nothing, these little bare feet, and yet they have a very particular charm. I should not advise every actress to follow Miss Baird's example, but the bare feet of Trilby have, I think, contributed greatly to the extraordinary success of the piece. These are real living feet, and have a grace that the usual pretense of bareness of the stage never has. I thought, while looking at them, of the "Pont of Fanchette," whose story Restif de la Bretonne has written. The pretty little foot of the child-woman, which, issuing from a heap of the dead, led to the recognition of poor Fanchette.

The hand speaks, the foot also, and these bare feet of Miss Baird will, perhaps, form a "school." They tell me that the boldness of the idea has not passed in London without criticism, not to say scandal. The prince of Wales has found that the realism was a little—audacious.

"And then, you know," said Lady G. to me, "there is always a feeling of uneasiness when you see bare feet coming and going over a floor where they may be hurt. Although the stage in this only imitates life. I always have let my children run about barefoot quite freely, and it has always been a vexation to them when the time comes to put on their shoes.

Mr. Sant has not painted the pretty rosy feet of Miss Baird. He has given us only a half-length picture of Trilby, with her eyes raised towards that Svengali, who hypnotizes her. But the artist has faithfully rendered the depth, the crystal clearness of the glorious eyes.

If he had wished to paint a truly weird, disquieting, picturesque character, he should have painted Mr. Tree in the role of Svengali, the strange musician with long, straight hair, pushed back from a thin gypsy face with long Jewish beard. This apparition, the "makeup" of this character, does the greatest honor to Mr. Tree, who plays this drama of Mr. Potter with the same conviction, authority, sentiments and artistic power, that he would bring to a play of Shakespeare.

This melodramatic Svengali becomes in his hands a role equal in value to that of Shylock or Iago. So true is it that the actor creates the personages he plays. I should like to have seen him in Hamlet, which he gives, they say, in the manner of our Feebter, whom he has never seen. I have before me his picture in the role of the prince of Denmark, poetic, thoughtful, handsome. Another photograph shows him to me as Falstaff, fat, bearded, ruddy, awkward, unrecognizable. It is impossible for a transformation to be more complete. You ask if it is really the same man. The art of transformation is the great art of the actor.

In Hamlet, Mr. Tree, admirable and ingenious scene arranger that he is, has Ophelia buried on a beautiful spring day, under trees in blossom, flowers red and flowers white, flowers upon flowers. The idea is an exquisite one, and Mistress Tree so applauded formerly in "A Woman's Reason," with her elegance and grace and charm, must be an ideal Ophelia. I shall see neither her nor her husband on this trip, so I shall not applaud them until later.

Trilby has taken the place of Shakespeare, Shakespeare fait anti-chambre before this brilliant success. The stage setting, the Parisian types, the Christmas feast in the painter's studio, with a marvelous December moonlit sky, the dance of the students and grisettes by the illumination of tri-colored lanterns, would alone explain the enormous vogue of the piece, even if Tree and Miss Baird were not there, as well as the whole excellent Haymarket troupe; Miss Filippi especially, who plays a Parisian portress, speaks French and acts the part of bonne femme with rare truth. And then the orchestra, with its pretty arrangement of French popular airs. Who conducts this orchestra, think you? Raymond Roze, son of that beautiful Marie Roze, who made the success of Auber's "Premier jour de Bonheur." Marie Roze! It seems but yesterday that I saw her make her debut, as fresh and fair as Miss Dorothee Baird. And now her son is a man, and conducts the orchestra. We are getting old! Shakespeare alone—Shakespeare and nature, as de Musset said—do not grow old. And when Trilby keeps Hamlet from being played, Shakespeare can wait; he is eternal.

THE BICYCLE WORLD.

Next Saturday afternoon at 3:30 the annual Memorial day road race of the Duluth Bicycle club will take place, and the indications are that the event, which is always prominent in the year's sports, will be a greater one than ever this year. The preparations are most elaborate, and many hope to see the state road record for a 10-mile course lowered a second or so. A. C. Mertens, of St. Paul, who won the last event, now holds the state record of 27:32 made at that time, and it is hoped that at this race a Duluth man will lower it.

If this is not done it will not be because of lack of work. About twenty Duluth men have been working tooth and nail ever since the snow left the roads to fit themselves, and there are several riders who are going to be something of a surprise to their friends. Then there are a number of men expected from Superior and the Twin Cities, and it is not to be supposed for a minute that they are coming up to amble along the course behind the rest. The entries do not close until Tuesday night, and as those who intend entering are waiting for each other, there are not a large number of actual entries as yet, but they will come with a rush toward the close. The prize list, which will be a good one, by the way, will not be completed before the first of next week.

The handicaps will, of course, not be announced until the entries are all in. The race officers, a list of whom was published by The Herald Thursday, give general satisfaction. Their names are republished below: Starter, Dr. Cullom; referee, Henry E. Harris; judge of turn, F. E. Wyman; umpire, W. N. Dalcour; marshal, Fred B. Taylor; clerk of course, H. O. Swain; timers, Dr. Myron Barlow, F. A. Noble, Charles H. De Vault, Philip Pastorez, George L. Clemenc, Ed A. Thompson, R. E. Barnham; checkers, Clyde Green, Richard Mixson, Chris E. Tvedt, Lawrence E. Harris, O. F. Conrad; judges, John Green, W. H. Loud, F. N. McLaren, Titus Duncan, W. H. Carey, Nate C. Clark. Saturday evening there will be a supper at the St. Louis, and a bicycle parade with prizes for the best decorated wheels ridden by man and woman.

WHY IT COSTS SO MUCH.

The Reason Why a Bicycle Costs $100.

Almost every day we hear the question What makes a bicycle cost so much? The questioner has probably heard that the material in a bicycle costs $25 or $30, and fails to understand why a dealer should charge $100 for the same machine in a finished state. It is for his benefit and thousands of others who have been heard to ask the same question that the following explanation has been prepared.

In the first place, it must be understood that the bicycle business is a very costly one to operate, even under favorable conditions, and owing to the improvements in patterns each year this cost is largely increased. During the past fifteen years there has been a continual improvement in design and the minor details, all of which meant to the maker a complete change in costly machines, and a sale at a low figure of the models of the previous year.

The bicycle is often compared with the sewing machine and typewriter, both of which have been greatly reduced in price during the past two or three years; yet today the sewing machine of typewriter of the latest pattern is sold at a high price. In the same line may be cited the fact that you can buy a watch for $5, and, again, you can pay $500 for a watch of another kind. Buying a bicycle is like buying eggs. There are good eggs; eggs of last week and last year. And it takes an experienced person to tell the difference in either case.

In the cheaper grades of bicycles of today, the material is almost identical with that used in the higher-priced machine, but workmanship, tests, care and repeated inspection are the elements which increase the cost. Could the customer visit a factory and purchase a wheel direct from the maker at wholesale price, the latter would still make only his regular profit on it, for if he sold it at retail the difference in price would be distributed among his agents and others who handle it, and would not benefit him.

It must be remembered that the material used in a high-grade bicycle, although very expensive, does not represent anything near the total cost. An allowance must be made for a thousand and one things that appear on the balance sheet of the bicycle manufactory, including assembling, brazing, truing, inspecting, enameling, nickeling, finishing, packing, shipping, advertising, agents' commissions, wear and tear of the machinery, insurance losses, guarantee, skilled employes' wages, office force, royalties on patents or purchase of same, maintenance of plant, interest on investment, taxes, supplies and accessories.

Probably the most costly material used in the building of a high grade bicycle is the tubing. This is of the best quality of high-carbon steel, and in some factories they go to the extreme of using nickel steel, which contains 4½ per cent alloy of nickel. This steel costs considerably more to work the stock, owing to its extreme hardness. The nickel has a similar effect on steel as carbon, especially after being heated and subjected to a cold draught of air or immersion in oil or water. It then takes on a temper like high-carbon steel, and materially adds to the strength of the steel, which has to overcome strains from every quarter.

This tubing, before it appears in its completed state for use in a bicycle, has undergone from eighteen to twenty-four different processes in cupping and drawing. After each handling it is necessary, owing to the fact that in drawing the metal cold it becomes brittle, to anneal or soften before doing so again. A tube can only be operated upon once a day, owing to the length of time necessary for the annealing, which makes it a costly process, especially as it must be done by skilled workmen in order to insure success in the operation. In the various departments of a tube mill none but the highest grade of mechanics are employed, the work being such that it cannot be done by novices. After the frame of a bicycle has been put together inexperienced people have often asked what there is to such a casting that would make it expensive? As we have already seen, it is not in any way a casting—not one part of it being cast metal.

The tubing is of the highest quality of steel, and in order to shape it into a bicycle frame it is necessary to have the various connections constructed on the proper angles to fit the required size of frame which will suit riders of varying size. These fittings are made by the expensive process of forging, or, in less technical language, they are hammered into shape while red hot with heavy and expensive dies.

These dies, of which there must be a different one for each connection, cost from $50 to $400 per set, and sometimes more. In making these dies, even with the greatest care, they are likely to prove defective, owing to the fact that it is almost impossible to determine the exact temper required by such a solid mass of steel.

After the forging leaves the die it is only in the rough, and is then passed on to the shops, where it is milled and machined till it assumes a shape to fit the tubes properly and permit of brazing.

To convey an idea as to what the milling and machine work means, it is only necessary to state that out of every six ounces of steel used in forging only one ounce remains in the finished part, the remaining five ounces being chips or waste, which, having no value, are thrown on the scrap heap.

In regard to the machinery used in a bicycle factory, most of it is designed and constructed especially for making bicycles, and cost many times over the amount for which ordinary machinery can be bought. The machines are really models, and in many instances are never improvements made on each succeeding model of a wheel requires many changes in the machines, and in some cases entirely new ones being ordered, those formerly used being worthless.

Of course it naturally costs more in proportion to build five bicycles than 5000, the same as with any other manufactured article. The increased cost of building one of any article is seen in the sextet, a machine built by a Chicago firm to seat six riders. Such a machine cost $3000, as it was built by hand, the fittings being of a different character to those in single machines.

Among minor details may be mentioned the ball bearings, upon which the bicycle runs. These are made from hardened steel, tempered and ground to an accuracy of at least two one-thousandths of an inch. The construction of the cones through which the balls run are made with the accuracy of the movements of a high-priced watch, the most delicate machinery being used.

The chain is composed of over 277 separate parts, each one of them having to be handled separately, going through various processes of hardening, polishing and assembling. Each chain, after being finished, is tested at a high rate of speed to insure strength and accuracy.

The expense is increased by the finishing department—nickeling, enameling and polishing—and again by the inspection department, where parts are gone over four or five times. All this labor materially increases the cost of a bicycle, but does not show on the surface. The guarantee, which provides that any defects shown in material or construction not caused by misuse or neglect are made good to the purchaser free of cost during one year from date of purchase, is an expensive feature, for the number of defects which can be developed by riders of this country are myriad, and as machines are used over every character of road and under all conditions, it is not surprising that defects develop, all of which, however, are quickly made good.

The tires are an expensive part of a wheel, as when turned out in enormous quantities the wholesale price will average about $7 per pair. The para gum which enters into their composition costs 80 cents per pound, which is increased to about $1.40 after evaporation and drying before it goes into the tire. The fabric used costs from 80 cents to $1 a yard, to which must be added the cost of sulphur and other ingredients used in vulcanizing.

A large bicycle factory will require from twelve to fifteen acres of flooring, and will employ 3000 hands in the factory alone, where the payroll will average $45,000 a week. A firm employing 2000 hands completes about 250 wheels per day, or, in other words, eight men are capable of making a wheel each day.

It would appear therefore that, although the price charged for a high grade bicycle is exorbitant, it is really not so, and it is doubtful whether the much talked of high grade bicycle at $50 will be seen for some time yet. Of course there are numerous cheap wheels on the market that have many virtues, but unless you are experienced in such matters it will pay you better in the end to buy a wheel with a reputation and a reliable firm's guarantee to back it.

PERFECTION IN WOMAN'S COSTUME.

Like all other appendages of human necessity, the bicycle costume for women has had to go through a period of evolution. The girl who would be comfortable, "come what may," had to put up with the jeers of the ubiquitous gamin as she bloomed along on her bike. Though tears of mortification blinded her eyes, she knew she suffered in a good cause. And she did. For tailors and modistes bethought themselves of golden harvests to be reaped by the designer of the "fittest" something not quite bloomers nor yet all skirt. Today the ideal in woman's wheel garb seems to have been achieved. And the woman who can't look charming on a wheel lacks possibilities, not opportunities. A costume has been evolved which unites the advantages of the bloomer or divided garment, to the graceful flowing lines of the old-time skirt. It is no more pronounced in style than an ordinary walking dress.

The most popular costume with women riders is a skirt which though divided is so constructed that the most acute observer cannot perceive the fact. The division is concealed in the back by the plaited folds, which only separate to fall again over the wheel, quite like any ordinary skirt. In front is an extra breadth, which buttons down each side of the skirt (or skirts for there are really two). When riding, this apron is unbuttoned. Then perfect freedom is acquired, and a woman is just as comfortable on the diamond as on the drop frame. These skirts should not be lined, in fact no bicycle skirts should, as, in case of accidents, it only makes so much more stuff in one's way, so much more entanglement for the wheel.

The front width, or apron, is rather wide and finished on both sides with bone buttons or cloth buttons of the dress goods. The gores are shaped over the hips very much like a riding habit, with very little fullness in the back. When in a standing posture this style of skirt has the advantage of looking natty and stylish, as the apron front gives the flare effect which is at present the prevailing mode.

The jacket is wide and roomy across the shoulders, giving the rider liberty for breathing and sitting properly. With the costume here described are worn breeches similar to those worn by men for golf. They lack the weighty, bulky fullness of the ordinary bloomers, and are more graceful and modest than the riding tights. Leggings of leather, covert cloth, or canvas are equally proper, though it may be preferable to have them made of the same material as the suit. It is not compulsory, however, to wear leggings, as the golf and buttoned hose are gradually crowding out these warm though protecting coverings. However short a bicycle skirt is made it is more fetching and bewitching than the ungraceful fullness of bloomers. The really pretty length for a skirt is when it falls to within six inches of the ankle. On the wheel the skirt will hang just sufficiently short to clear the pedals and make riding a pleasure.

A rather strange arrangement is called the safety skirt. It is made rather full, and, like all bicycle skirts, is of regulation length; that is, to the ankles. A cord runs, due back and front, from belt to hem. By pulling this the skirt runs up and takes unto itself the shape of bloomers. It may appeal to some novelty-loving individuals, but it will scarcely become popular with "all the world a-wheel." It looks cumbersome however it may act, and in this case vox feminae vox mudi. A modification of Amelia Bloomer's idea is styled the "trouserette." It is nothing more nor less than a full bloomer, cuffed in at the knee.

VARIOUS NEW DEVICES.

Mechanical genius is being continually brought into play in the invention of appliances for the convenience of wheelmen. Among the new things on view nowadays is the L. A. W. bicycle lock. It is intended for use on the sprocket wheel. With the chain locked a thief will scarcely attempt to carry off a bicycle, because it cannot be ridden. The lock is made of aluminum and has a combination of three figures. One must adjust the three numbers which appear on the surface of the three revolving metal rings before he can unlock it. The slightest movement of either of these rings will destroy the combination, and the lock cannot be opened except it be broken. The weight of this new anti-thief contrivance is very little, and it is of a size to drop easily in a small pocket.

The ordinary cyclometer is the size of a watch, but this season has a new cyclometer which is less than the diameter of the watch. Its depth is almost the same as its width. It weighs one ounce, and will register 1000 miles, and when the 1000th mile has been turned the cyclometer is ready for another whirl past the ten century mark. It is fastened to the end of the axle of the hub of the forward wheel. The little wheel on the side of the cyclometer is turned by a button fastened to one of the spokes, and with each revolution of the forward wheel of the bicycle the little wheel on the cyclometer is turned one notch. The mechanism of the cyclometer is quite simple.

The latest bicycle shoe appears to be the most sensible yet placed on the market. It does away with the heavy lacing and flap just over the bend in the foot and has an elk hide sole, a new kind of leather which is practically indestructible. Dealers say this new sole will outwear a half dozen of the common leather variety. The new sole, however, costs just twice as much as the old one.

Ordinarily a small plug will mend a puncture in a Palmer tire and a small patch will make a Morgan & Wright stable enough to get home, but dilluer is usually fullfledged when the tire is torn. Then a plug fails to work and a patch will not hold. Some man has patented a little contrivance which is as simple as anything can be, yet it is practical and will be the saving of hundreds of wheelmen from long walks. It is a strip of rubber with a strap and buckle fastened to the ends. When the tire is torn the rubber band is placed over the torn place, with plenty of cement underneath. The buckle is fastened and the tire is pumped up. Ten to one the band will permit one to ride home without further trouble.

Don't let a dealer induce you to buy a wheel rack at $2 when you can get a simple wire frame, like the one shown for 25 cents. It answers the purpose just as well as the heavy $2 racks.

One dealer has sold several bicycle skirt fasteners of a new kind. The device is an arrangement of two safety pins, one at either end of an elastic cord, which is laid parallel with the hem and pinned to the inside of the skirt. A metal loop runs freely along the cord and hooks over a button on the boot or gaiter.

Another simple article is a purse for a watch or change for use by ladies while riding or playing golf. The purse is attached to a strap which passes around a belt.

WHEEL FOR BABY AND NURSE.

A New York millionaire who is an enthusiastic wheelman has had a curious machine built for his baby and the nurse. His friends say that he got the idea from a French humorous paper. They claim that he cut out the picture and sent it, with orders, to a firm of bicycle makers to reproduce it. This machine cost $700, and while it is certainly a great novelty, it is not likely to prove a popular baby carriage with the masses. The contrivance was made out of two ordinary wheels built for women. The saddle of one of the bikes was removed and replaced with a specially constructed basket of nickeled wire, fashioned very much like the body of an ordinary baby carriage. A parasol was rigged up over the basket, and then the other wheel was attached by means of crossbars at front and rear. It is practically a double four-wheeled bike, not easily tilted over. The new nurse is a French girl, who has taken to her new work like a duck to water. She wears a fetching costume, which, while it proclaims her vocation, does not detract from her fine appearance.

Every fair morning she is out with the baby, a boy about a year old, and he seems to enjoy the sport immensely.

RIDING OVER WET ASPHALT.

A good deal of nonsense is talked and some printed about the danger of slipping on wet asphalt pavements. An asphalt pavement that is simply wet is not specially dangerous if one rides carefully and in a straight line, or nearly as straight as possible. A sudden curve or swerve is to be avoided most carefully. It is when the pavement is muddy that it is really dangerous. Then the rider must exercise special caution to escape a tumble and possibly some broken bones. It is well to bear in mind that the rear wheel of a bicycle may slip two or three inches without producing serious results, but a slight slip with the front wheel may lead to a sudden dismount or a fall. In crossing car tracks, especially if they are wet or slippery, it is wise to go at as nearly a right angle as possible, at least with the front wheel.

GET EASILY CLEANED MACHINES.

One of the things that a man who has had one or two wheels looks after when providing himself with a new mount is whether the wheel that he contemplates purchasing is easy to clean or not. There is a good deal of difference between different makes in this respect. Certain devices on certain styles of bicycles seemed designed to catch dust and dirt and to make it difficult to get rid of them. A rider with a new wheel, it is usually noticeable, is much more careful in cleaning and polishing it than he is after it has been ridden a year. It pays, however, to take good care of a wheel all the time. A machine that has been carefully looked after and kept free from rust and other signs of use can be sold for a good price or turned in at a good advantage when a new purchase is made.

LATEST THING IN PUMPS.

The latest invention which will interest wheelmen is a new bicycle pump for inflating deflated tires, the terror of the cycling tourist. The inventor of this clever device is an expert electrical engineer, and this small pump is his first invention. The patent was issued but a few days since. The pump is so simple in its appearance as to lead one to believe that it could not possibly inflate a bicycle tire. It embodies the old principle of the pump with a different application. It does away with the old piston action and is operated by the foot in an expeditous manner without any loss of power.

Closed, the new pump looks exactly like a small drinking cup without a handle. It is made of nickel-plated brass and consists of two small cylinders, one within the other, the inner one working freely up and down by the action of the spring of fine steel fastened to the inner bottom of the outer cover. A tiny valve makes the necessary suction in the center of the cylinders. The rubber tubing, about ten inches long, is attached to the bottom of the outer cylinder at one end, at the other to the deflated tire. The foot is then placed on the pump, which is worked vigorously up and down. The two cylinders work freely on each other and force the air from the lower cylinder into the rubber tubing and thence into the tire with a force far exceeding the ordinary pump, formerly operated by hand power. This, in brief, is the entire invention. It is so simple that any child can understand and work it. The new pump should be an especial boon to women, who have repeatedly complained of the old and tiresome way of inflating tires. The pump weighs six ounces.

NEW BRAND OF GEAR.

There seems to be no end of inventions for new driving mechanism. The latest device consists of a triangular frame in the rear end of the bicycle over which the chain wheel runs from the pedal sprocket wheel. The construction is simplified somewhat, but what real advantage is gained by this triangular frame is not quite apparent.

HOW TO FIND THE GEAR.

Question a woman rider about the gear of her wheel and in a majority of cases you will find that she has no idea whether it is high or low. It is not quite fair to charge all the ignorance to women, for there are men who ride every day and who know no more about it. The word gear refers always to the diameter of the gear wheel—that is, a sixty-gear means that the machine is arranged to have the rear wheel revolve as though it were sixty inches in diameter. This is accomplished by means of the chain turning over a large sprocket in the front and a small one in the rear. The varying proportions of the numbers of teeth in the two sprockets produce the variations in gear. For twenty-eight-inch wheels, which are almost universally used, the gear sixty will be obtained if there are fifteen teeth on the front and seven on the rear sprocket. Thirteen and six and nineteen and nine will also approximate sixty.

To find the gear of a bicycle when you do not know it, multiply the diameter of the rear wheel by the number of teeth on the front sprocket and divide the result by the number of teeth on the rear sprocket.

CHAINLESS WHEELS NEXT YEAR.

The story is current that one of the oldest and largest manufactories of bicycles is going to make chainless wheels almost altogether for 1897. Various circumstances are quoted which lend color to the rumor, most important of all being the fact that this company has bought the patents for the device. Many experienced riders were favorably impressed with the chainless wheel which was on the market a few seasons ago. The company which made it went into bankruptcy, however, and this style of machine has virtually disappeared. The reason given for the failure was not that the product was unsalable, but lack of capital. With the improvements that have been made in bicycle mechanism in the last two or three years it would be practicable to turn out a chainless wheel which would be far in advance of the old one. The chain is, after the tire, the most troublesome part of a bicycle. Some place it at the top for possibilities of annoyance. Nuts come unscrewed, rivets break, the chain wears too loose and is always getting dusty. It needs constant care, for it easily becomes "kinky," and when not in perfect condition increases the friction greatly. It is true that the chain runs more easily than did the old bevel gear, but its disadvantages might overbalance this consideration if the chainless mechanism were improved. The difference in weight is not considerable, as the rod is inclosed in a light aluminum case.

FIRST WOMAN TO RIDE.

The first woman in America to ride a bicycle was a Mrs. Smith, the wife of W. G. Smith, the inventor of the drop frame bicycle. Mrs. Smith saw and admired the "safety" wheel, and also saw no reason why an adaptation could not be made which would enable women to enjoy it as well as men. She begged her husband to think of something. He did, and the result is the much vaunted and much ridden woman's drop frame bicycle. This was in 1888. The first wheel constructed was the one ridden by Mrs. Smith. It weighed exactly sixty pounds. In those days no one believed that a woman could possibly keep her equilibrium or manage on anything lighter. This pioneer woman rider weighed eighty pounds at that time. Now this order has been reversed. This year her wheel weighs twenty pounds, while she has gained the forty it has lost.

GOTHAM POLICE ON WHEELS.

Just now six men constitute the squad of the New York police force. The commissioners, however, have decided to increase the number, and in a very short time thirty-four more men will don the short blue coat and leggings that have become so familiar to wheelmen. The magnificent service rendered to the public by the few now comprising the force is responsible for the increase. The bicycle squad has come to stay. Each man is a trained athlete and a rider of recognized speed and ability. There are many reasons to recommend the bicycle service as an adjunct to the present police force. The pursuit of scorchers demands the use of the wheel, while the time required to reach the scene of accidents and to go for and return with help is greatly reduced. Runaways are stopped more quickly than by the mounted police, and a thief has very little chance of escape with one of the flyers at his heels.

ANYTHING TO GET A BIKE.

The intense desire of all the world to own a wheel is exemplified by the following advertisement, which appeared, among many others of the same description, in the recent issue of a New York Sunday paper:

"Wanted—A good second-hand bicycle in exchange for dancing lessons."

"A postage stamp collection for a first-class wheel."

"Have 800 second-hand chairs in good order, which I will give for two bicycles or one tandem."

"I will give a calf-bound Encyclodadia Britannica, worth $150, for a high-grade bicycle."

"Wanted—A bicycle in exchange for an organ for a museum."

"Marine oil painting, worth $100, for a bicycle."

"A fine collection of Angora cats in exchange for a bicycle."

THE FOLDING BICYCLE.

Folding bicycles were extensively used by the French army in the recent manœuvers. Strapped on the backs of the soldiers, they appeared not unlike knapsacks, and were as easily carried. Here in America it is known that efforts are going made to interest Gen. Miles in the Danbury folding bicycle, but with what success has not been learned. While the Danbury people are seeking to install their wheels in the army, they are more earnest in seeking to have them ridden by those whose paths are paths of peace. They say: "Almost all riders in large cities are continually in trouble with their wheels—they have trouble in getting it in the house and more getting it out of the way when in the house, so that the occupants will not break their necks over it. Then there is more trouble getting it out of the house again, so that after a short time of blow-beating by the landlady and scowls from the other occupants who have 'barked' their shins or torn their clothes on it, the wheel is put up for sale if a place convenient cannot be found outside to store it that is not too expensive and that will not be closed up when you want your wheel most, such as Sundays and evenings. The folding bicycle will, we think, do away with those annoying features, and will make it possible for a rider to easily take his wheel in his home or office. It operates very quickly, and is strong and neat looking."

MUST NOT FRIGHTEN HORSES.

A Richmond, Va., dispatch says: There is considerable protest among patrons of the wheel in "Ole Virginny" against the bicycle law which has just been placed upon the statute books of that state. The law is sweeping in its terms, and will, if rigidly enforced, make bicycling in the Old ominion a very fatiguing occupation. It provides that: "any person riding who shall meet or overtake a vehicle or wagon or person on horseback on any public highway or bridge shall use all proper care in passing such vehicle or person on horseback to prevent the frightening of the horses that are driven or ridden, and if said horse or horses appear to be frightened, he or they shall dismount or stop in order to prevent accident from fright of said horses. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be fined not less than $2 nor more than $5, and shall in addition be liable in a civil action for such damage as may result from neglect or want of proper care."

ARMSTRONG BAGGAGE BILL.

For the benefit of other localities which will now surely follow New York's example, the exact text of the Armstrong baggage bill is given, as follows:

Checks for baggage—A check made of some proper metallic substance, of convenient size and form, plainly stamped with numbers, and furnished with a convenient strap or other appendage for attaching to baggage, shall be affixed to every piece or parcel of baggage when taken for transportation for a passenger by the agent or employe of such corporation, if there is a handle, loop or fixture there for upon the piece or parcel of baggage, and a duplicate thereof given to the passenger or person delivering the same to him. If such check be refused on demand, the corporation shall pay the passenger the sum of $10, and no fare shall be collected or received from him; and if he shall have paid his fare it shall be refunded to him by the conductor of the train. Such baggage shall be delivered, without unnecessary delay, to the passenger, or any person acting in his behalf, at the place to which it was to be transported, where the cars usually stop, or at any other regular intermediate stopping place upon notice to the baggage master in charge of baggage on the train of not less than thirty minutes, upon presentation of such duplicate check to the officer of the railroad corporation, or of any corporation over any portion of whose road it was transported. Bicycles are hereby declared to be and be deemed baggage for the purpose of this article, and shall be transported as baggage for passengers by railroad corporations and subject to the same liabilities, and no such passenger shall be required to crate, cover or otherwise protect any such bicycle; provided, however, that a railroad corporation shall not be required to transport, under the provisions of this act, more than one bicycle for a single person.

Chief Consul Potter, who is responsible for the passing of the above law, cautions wheelmen in other states against trying to introduce bills exactly like the above. Mr. Potter says it will be wiser to have the railroad law of each state where such a bill is to be introduced carefully studied by competent legislators, and the bill to be introduced carefully framed to meet same. With careful action and the introduction of such measures as the Armstrong placed in competent and honest hands, Mr. Potter says it should not be difficult to pass similar measures in other states.

SUFFERING WOMEN.

Read What Dr. Hartman Proposes to Do For You.

Dr. Hartman, president of the Surgical hotel, Columbus, Ohio, has arranged to answer all letters that are sent to him from women troubled with any form of female weakness, free of charge, giving them the benefit of knowledge which has cost him forty years to accumulate. The medicines he prescribes are within the reach of every woman, and she can get them at any drug store. All she is required to do is to send her name and address, together with her symptoms, duration of sickness and age. This offer holds good only during the summer months. Thousands of women are taking his treatment today and are rapidly regaining their health. Dr. Hartman's favorite prescription for female complaints is Peru-na. Mrs. Maggie Turner, of Holly Springs, Miss., writes:

"Last September Pe-ru-na was recommended me by a friend and I began to take it. I had no faith in anything any more, as I was not able to sit up and was a mere skeleton. After I had taken one bottle of Pe-ru-na I began to improve. I kept on taking it, and I believe myself to be permanently cured. I have discharged all my help, am doing my housework alone and weigh 155 pounds. Although I am 55 years old I feel as well as I did at 16. I can't express my gratitude to you. I love the name of Pe-ru-na, for it has given me back to my little children a well and hearty mother."

A medical book on female diseases will be sent to all who want it by The Peru-na Drug Manufacturing company, Columbus, Ohio.

CHANGING FASHIONS MIRRORED HERE.

STYLES FOR YACHTING SUITS ARE JAUNTY AND COMFORTABLE.

BLUE AND WHITE ARE JUST THE CORRECT THING FOR SUCH A RIG.

There Is No Denying That the New Organdie Gowns Are Bewitching, But as For Cheapness They Are a Delusion and a Snare---Many Odd and Dainty Conceits in the Way of Neckwear.

Anything in the way of filigree and fussiness is entirely out of place in a yachting rig. Rakishness of cut and happy color combinations are almost the only additions that can be given to a sailorly suit and still keep it the "knock-about" it should be. Of course much, very much, attaches to the choice of material. To begin with, it is the poorest of poor economy to try to save money by buying mean materials. Let the serge or flannel or whatever is chosen be of good quality. It costs no more to make up a suit of good than of the flimsy stuff. It is twice easier to make a good fit of a well woven, well finished stuff than of the other sorts. One of the happiest thoughts in the flannel way for women's and children's slam-about suits and for any seashore dresses was the hiding of the fine cotton warp under a mellow filling of wool. In this way the softness and the warmth of the wool are the only noticeable features of the cloth, but, thanks to the chain of cotton, it is practically unshrinkable. For the salt, salt sea, or even for long trips on the water anywhere, good sturdy all-wool flannel is the only stuff to choose, but for betwixt and between use the cotton and wool, as it is just as good, quite as pretty and considerably cheaper.

Styles for the making of these yachting suits vary but little. They are all built on something of the same general plan. They aim for a jaunty, comfortable look, and there is no trying for the "fit without a wrinkle" idea. Blazers or reefers, with big, generous collars, are the preferred styles in the line of a jacket for these suits. With them are worn blouse-fronted sleeveless waists, shirt waists or sweaters. These sweaters are working their way into being a most necessary part of any outing suit. Blue has long been given over as specially the color for the correct yachting rig.

With it white makes a very effective trimming, and it certainly is neat and pretty. However, it is not inclined to stay neat any great length of time, and so many lean toward red as a good color combination for blue—in fact, it is an old stand-by, and it is also a becoming color for the brown-skinned sailor maid. The skirt should be full, and it may also have just a suspicion of a waved hang to it, though the tapes which are necessary to hold the waves of an ordinary skirt in place are a decided nuisance in an outing skirt, and should be banished as much as possible.

In the line of thin summer goods the aim is now to have them so cobwebby and fine that the silk lining must be a necessary part to the make-up. But, where, in this vast wilderness of elegance, has the once upon a time modest little organdie gown, with its inexpensive yet sweetly pretty trimmings, gone to? It is only a memory. Now the same little organdie or lawn is only an excuse, and a very thin one, to cover an expensive silk or satin gown. There is no denying that these gowns are simply bewitching, but it is also a fact that the summer frocks of today are a delusion and a snare, as far as an idea of cheapness is concerned.

To freshen up a somewhat worn waist there is nothing like a front or collar or fichu of any light material. And or fichu of any light material. And this is a season specially given over to all sorts of odd bits in the way of neckwear. Grass lawn is one of the first favorites, and all sorts of dainty conceits with it as a foundation are seen in every shop. Chiffon makes the prettiest fichus, and, armed with one of these, it is quite easy to disguise a time-worn evening waist into a very up-to-date and handsome affair. There are so many little touchups one can put to a waist nowadays that it can live on almost indefinitely, and, while it lives, always look well.

COSTUMES IN PARIS.

The Latest Rage at the French Capital.

The latest rage in Paris is the loose jacket, which has been seized on as a relief from the monotonous cape and promises to be one of the principal expressions of chic for the summer, says Ada Cone in the Chicago Record. It is a little longer than the waist and quite loose all around, and is plain or plaited according to the material or the taste. It will be seen oftenest as part of serge and flannel gowns, since these have always a jacket, but it is made also in taffeta and lace as part of elaborate afternoon dress with delicious effect. This jacket is illustrated in the following models:

A yachting gown is of black serge with facings of white wash leather. The jacket is straight and loose and the revers turn over from the bottom the same width all the way up, and the collar is of the same width and revers and collar are faced with the leather. The sleeve has lapped seams corded with the leather, which gives several lines of white running from the top to the bottom, and a cuff of the leather.

The skirt has a narrow front breadth with lapped seams corded with the leather. The leather facing is decorated with a pattern in white made by machine stitching. To wear with this very chic gown is a blouse of colored muslin in stripes, with a turn-down collar and black tie, and a black tarpaulin sailor hat, with white leather band.

SEASIDE COSTUME.

A seashore gown of navy blue twilled flannel made up with light blue has the skirt entirely side-plaited and the loose jacket also in side plaits. It will be understood from the description that all this plaiting must conceal the figure more or less and produce an effect of extreme simplicity, and it is precisely by this simplicity that the gown is noticeable, and it is on this effect that the owner counts for a success. There are no revers, but the jacket is lined with thin light blue flannel and the skirt is faced on the under side with the light blue. The collar stands high behind, with a black satin bow to hold it up, and turns over in front and shows a light blue facing. Large, full bishop sleeves are confined at the wrist with a bracelet of black satin ribbon. Black satin ribbon crosses the back and the front at the depth of a yoke, with a bow in the middle of the back and a bow and ends in front. A crinoline lining is plaited in with the skirt and there is no other lining. This dress has been made for a woman well known in Paris for her exquisite taste, no less than for her romances, and therefore the details made to accompany it will interest the reader. They are as follows:

A blouse of blue and white striped silk. The sleeve has the stripes running round and is shirred close to the arm from wrist to armhole, with a small drapery over the top. Another blouse of black surah all in small box plaits, with a wide box plait in front in which are set flat gold studs. A huge ruche of black brussels net, with the edges bound with black satin, is made to wear with the blouse when the jacket is not worn. A belt of yellow leather. A flat Spanish toque in rough mixed green and blue straw for traveling, trimmed with black satin rosettes of blue and green tulle, and a large hat of yellow straw with soft crown of cream net, embroidered with black, trimmed with roses. Low shoes of yellowish-red leather, the correct shade for the season.

When the loose jacket is made in silk or lace it is usually plaited. A model in shot red and green taffeta is accordion plaited and the top is draped with black lace and black satin ribbon. The sleeves are full to the wrist, to permit it to go on over a bodice sleeve, but are not plaited. Near the edge is a jet passementerie insertion and the same trimming is near the edge of the skirt. Jet ornaments are in the lace at the neck. The blouse with this dress of black brussels net, with appliques of white lace, with a wide draped belt of the silk, and the sleeve is of the same net in several puffs to the elbow, where it ends in a ruffle, with a small sling drapery at the top of the silk.

COLOR COMBINATIONS.

Beige cloth with white trimmings, lined with steel passementerie and steel buttons, is a combination that for several seasons has not failed to appear with the crocuses. It is a favorite with the dressmakers and suits an elegant clientele, but it is too delicate to be recommended for practical hard wear. One way of arranging it is to cut out a pattern in the cloth and set white silk underneath and edge the pattern all round with a narrow thread of the passementerie. If there is a figaro, the corners of the jacket and the close part of the sleeves are treated in this way; if there is a blouse, the whole front with epaulet ruffles are thus treated. The blouse front may be cut low and slashed open over a high guimpe of white silk, all dotted with steel beads.

A more pronounced combination already signaled above is that of black and white. It is one of Doucet's ideas and is very Parisian. A black cloth gown by this dressmaker is made with a figaro, with collars, revers and cuffs of white cloth, the revers running the same width to the bottom of the jacket, and all the white is crossed at intervals by long loops of black braid ending each in a black button, in military manner. The front breadth of the skirt is open all the way down over white, with loops and buttons across.

White serges and twilled flannels depend upon a colored blouse and yellow shoes for their effect. The fancy of the moment in blouse fronts is for stripes.

NEW SILKS AND COTTONS.

Stripes are the favorite design in both silk and cotton goods, and stripes form the ground of many flowered patterns. They are of all widths, beginning with hair lines. Also in great favor are checks, which run from pinhead size to inch blocks and to grounds barred with lines much farther apart. A similarity exists in the designs of cottons and silks, and with some reserves they are made up in much the same manner. The skirts of all striped and checked materials are cut in a particular way. All the breadths are gored on both sides, exactly like a front breadth, so as to permit all the stripes to match in the seams and keep all the lines upright. There are seven breadths in a silk skirt, and as they begin at the foot with the width of the silk, the reader can judge of the width of the skirt. The back is set into the belt with box plaits or gathers; I have just seen one at Felix' in inch-deep gashes, after the manner of two years ago.

A great deal of thin embroidered muslin is used on both silks and cottons. It is laid over a color so as to form a transparency and throw up the embroidery very white. A gown made at Rouff's of blue and white flowered taffeta has the front of the bodice cut low, and cut down through the middle to the belt over a high-necked front of embroidered muslin laid over blue. The edge of the silk is scalloped so as to leave points, and is bound with guimpe. The sleeve has the close part made of the embroidery over blue. An organdie gown of striped mauve and white, made up with embroidered muslin over mauve, has the blouse and the close part of the sleeve of the embroidery, with a drapery of the stripe covering the blouse under the arm and running to the top of the shoulder to join the sleeve drapery.

A great deal of tulle or imitation Brussels net is made up with silk gowns. The tulle is dotted black on white or white on black, and the net has a chain-stitch pattern giving the same contrast. In general it makes the blouse and the close part of the sleeves. Some slight drapery of the silk often partially covers the tulle, with the intention, as seen in the organdie model above, to relate the parts to each other and form a harmony.

SUMMER SUNSHADES.

Points From Paris Pertaining to Pretty Parasols.

The parasol has the same softening influence on the toilet as have the furs of the winter, the same general becomingness. The summer girl without a parasol is like a ship without a rudder, like a Spanish beauty without her fan. There is more coquetry accomplished by the aid of the parasol than is supposed possible. It is used to shade the face from any too glaring light that might prove ruinous, for, sad to say, the brilliant light of day is a sad tell-tale on most faces. Only the very youthful or wonders of time, like Bernhardt, can dare the light of day unprotected, says Mildred B. in the Cleveland World.

The colors of the linings of the new parasols are chosen with quite as much deliberation as the gown or the hat. When the summer wardrobe is a Parisian importation parasols accompany every walking or carriage toilette, and are always selected with the greatest of care, so that none but the warmest, kindest colors will reflect on the face.

DIFFERENCE IN FACES.

While a rosy blonde might wear a parasol of leaf or sea green and look like a rosebud beneath it, it would be the means of making a less pink-cheeked maiden look ghastly. The same with violet or any of the shades of blue.

There are certain faces which light up beautifully under the shade of a white parasol, but the woman with the muddy skin had best avoid anything so penetrating. All the shades of rose are wonderfully effective, and lend a becoming color to the palest of faces. So popular is it that it is seen as a lining in parasols of various styles and color where the rose lining would seem almost incongruous, but it never is so.

A dashing parasol of glistening black satin is covered over with thickly gathered black tulle and bordered with three frills set on together. It has a soft lining of deep rose taffeta, arranged so as to show the frame work of gilt. The handle is black horn, set full of tiny gold arabesques, with a chatelaine attachment at the knob to slip over the arm when not open, making it easy to carry. Very, very few plain parasols are seen. They are all more or less dressed in some fantastic way or another.

Coaching parasols of the giddiest gayest sort are already being carried by some of the swell parties driving to Tuxedo and Lenox. The most brilliant gated to carriage use. No end of extravagance is lavished on these dainty trifles, which after all, are an enormous item in the summer's wardrobe.

Many of the handles are jeweled or scrolled with gold, often bearing the monogram of the owner.

Bellounced and betluted parasols are without number and fascinating to a degree. It is the ambition of every woman's heart to possess one, but only in a carriage or some swell thoroughfare are they properly worn.

Chiffon, embroidered or plain, forms much of the covering. Mousseline de soie is less used on account of its natural tendency to stiffness.

The most natural of flowers are garlanded on these soft covers, making a sun-protector fit for a fairy princess. Fluffy black parasols, covered with narrow frills of dense black chiffon, are deeply curved than formerly, a graceful improvement, and one which sets off effectually the outside decorations.

Miss Grace Wilson, whose trousseau is wonderfully complete, has one or two costumes I would like to tell you about. They are both essentially summer gowns and strikingly novel. A thin batiste of lemon yellow all dashed over with big clusters of spiky looking pink roses tied with pale pink ribbons, is made up over a foundation of yellow taffeta. The somewhat narrow skirt has a succession of narrow frills set on at the foot, the top one finished by choux of rose pink satin ribbon, arranged at intervals. The body of the bodice is of rose pink mousseline de soie, set in fine plaits, edged with narrow black lace.

There are huge puffed sleeves of batiste, finished with choux and long ends of rose pink ribbon. A belt of the black at the edge. A coarsly braided straw of green in sailor effect is massed about with purple and white violets, with a stiff bunch of black quills at the side.

The parasol is a perfect dream. Its body is of black, black tulle draped over black satin, and all over it trails the most natural looking of English ivy. There is a lining of pink and a gorgeous handle of tortoise shell.

SUMMER GIRLS.

Many Exquisite Fabrics For Her Dainty Use.

In the privacy of her modiste's apartments the summer girl of '96 has already appeared. She is planning her gowns for the coming campaign, and, if they count for aught, her success is already secured, says the New York Journal.

Never before have there been such a variety of exquisite fabrics or so many dainty accessories for the summer girl's toilet. Fewer sprigged silk muslins which look just like hand-painted gauze are temptingly arranged for her inspection. She listens to the advantages of the new batistes, as told by her dressmaker, admires the delicate blending of colors in the latest taffetas and looks over by the hour the grenadines, organdies, mousseline de soies and other filmy fabrics, and, though she talks of the simplicity of her summer gowns, it is no wonder that the modiste finds consolation in the thought of the bill.

It requires many gowns to be fashionable these days, and the majority of them must be silk lined. The genuine summer girl has a gown—in fact she has four or five—for every occasion.

A CANVAS GOWN.

If she is strictly up to date she will want a gown of canvas this year. A stylish French model is in dark blue, made over a changeable blue and green taffeta silk.

The skirt is free from the lining in front, and made with the selvage showing all the way up the left side. The waist is in plaid silk, partially covered with Russian lace, and made with a little jacket effect of canvas in front. This jacket is lined with the plaid silk and edged with a very narrow lace insertion. The stock collar is finished in front with an enormous plaid silk bow. The sleeves are much smaller than usual and show very plainly their silk lining.

All the canvas gowns are made up quite elaborately. Canvas in a tan shade over a black silk foundation and trimmed with cream lace and black satin rosettes and ribbons makes a stylish gown.

Etamine is another popular fabric this summer. It is a thin, rather rough material, equally as transparent as the new canvas. It comes in a variety of colors, and sells from $1.50 to $2.50 a yard.

Mozambique, a fabric composed of goats' hair and silk, is also much the vogue. It may be bought in plain and fancy effects. The mohairs in delicately-and are embroidered with a silk dot and trimmed with cream lace and narrow ribbon velvet the same color as the dot. The silk lining of the batiste is also in the same color. When one cannot afford a silk skirt the batiste may be worn over a grass linen petticoat, which is just stiff enough to hold it out to advantage. Figured canton crepe is a material often combined with the batiste gowns.

Then there are very elaborate batiste frocks this season, lace striped and delicately embroidered in silk flowers and gold threads. Over changeable taffeta silk they make the most exquisite of gowns.

Batiste gowns embroidered in the same color as the material are made up effectively with tucks of taffeta in an old-time floral design. The front of the bodice and the sleeve may be a series of taffeta tucks alternating with tucks of the batiste, edged with a narrow frill of point d'esprit lace.

No summer girl will be content this year without at least one silk muslin gown. The muslins come in all delicate exquisite shades, and are scattered with blossoms worthy the brush of an artist.

PRETTY AND AIRY.

Very pretty cloud-like effects are obtained when the muslin is white and made over a changeable silk lining. Small designs are little used at present, and both the organdies and silk muslins are strewn with large flowers. The flowers are arranged both in bouquets and single blossoms.

SILK MUSLINS.

A silk muslin gown fit for the prettiest summer girl in the land is white, scattered with careless bouquets of faint pink poppies and dim blue bachelor buttons. The leaves are in the most delicate shade of green and the gown is made up over a foundation of apple green taffeta. The skirt has nine gores and is separate from the lining all the way round. It is trimmed with a triple four ruching of the muslin, edged with real Valenciennes lace.

The bodice would be extremely simple if it were not for its collar and deep corselet. The collar is of silk muslin, cut in a series of square shaped tabs, which form not only the collar but the epaulettes over the sleeves. These tabs are finished with a full frill of white mousseline de soie, edged with Valenciennes lace.

The corselet is of white silk, a new quality called gros de Londa. It is five and a half inches high and is adorned with three costly buttons made of dull green enamel, with fleur de lis in rhinestones as the design. The high collar of this fetching gown is a stock, also of the white silk, with a dashing bow in front. The sleeves are full puffs to the elbow, where they are finished with three full little frills of the lace-edged mousseline de soie. The entire color effect of the gown is exquisite.

The hat which is part of this costume is of coarse, light green straw, worn like all the latest hats, well over the forehead. It is trimmed with fans of white silk muslin accordion plaited, and delicate muslin accordion plaited, and delicate pink silk petalled poppies. The poppies are massed at the back of the hat, and some nod over the crown effectively.

The parasol, which also belongs with this dress, is merely a fluffy mass of white chiffon loops and frills lined with a delicate sea-shell pink silk. The handle is of white enamelled wood, with a ball of pink crystal for the top.

WARDROBES COMPLETED.

After the summer girl has selected all her gowns, she still has a goodly portion of her wardrobe to complete. The little things count for so much this year. Besides the collars which are part of her gowns, she will need any number of extra ones. The grass linen and batiste collars are seen in a great variety. Odd shapes are much the vogue. Many of the most effective are appliqued with lace designs. Others are exquisitely embroidered in delicately colored flowers, either with silk or tiny spangles. Collars of black net are much worn, cut in tabs or Vandyke points and run with two or three different colored baby ribbons forming a bright border.

Adjustable revers are another of the summer novelties. They vary in design and price from those made of embroidered grass linen to those of satin appliqued with lace and embroidered in mock jewels.

Summer girls who aim to captivate by a quaint demure manner frequently wear a fichu in place of a collar. The Marie Antoinette fichus in embroidered mousseline de soie come in all the delicate colors and are a dainty addition to any costume. Pretty fichus are also made of dotted Swiss and are much less expensive.

This demure little summer girl is also very partial to the ribbon reticule. It is made of taffeta ribbons with old lace frills and in shape is just as near like her grandmamma's as possible.

ABOUT PETTICOATS.

A Chatty Fashion Lecture From Boston.

It becomes necessary to nerve oneself against the allurements of those designing garments known as up-to-date petticoats. To read about them in the usual fashion column and to see them in the shop windows puts one in danger of imagining that known rules fail as to petticoats, that taste turns somersaults and that economy hides its head when petticoats are in question, says the Boston Beacon.

Listen, then, with me to the plain, unpalatable truth. The elaborate lace-trimmed, color-glinting, ruffle-swinging, frivolous affair that calls itself a petticoat has really no place in the average wardrobe. None at all. It may with propriety go under an evening gown or a formal dress affair for the house. Even so, however, a petticoat that is so conspicuous and expensive as all this is not suitable for wear with every dress of the kind. If you are going to do that sort of thing, do it thoroughly, and have a petticoat to match or to go with each elaborate dress.

If you cannot afford this regime, then

TWO PRETTY SUMMER GOWNS.

Those of white satin are too dressy for general street wear, and are relegated to carriage use. No end of extravagance is lavished on these dainty trifles, which after all, are an enormous item in the summer's wardrobe.

Many of the handles are jeweled or scrolled with gold, often bearing the monogram of the owner.

Bellounced and betluted parasols are without number and fascinating to a degree. It is the ambition of every woman's heart to possess one, but only in a carriage or some swell thoroughfare are they properly worn.

Chiffon, embroidered or plain, forms much of the covering. Mousseline de soie is less used on account of its natural tendency to stiffness.

The most natural of flowers are garlanded on these soft covers, making a sun-protector fit for a fairy princess. Fluffy black parasols, covered with narrow frills of dense black chiffon, are exceedingly lovely, and makes a splendid framing for a lovely blonde head to peep out from.

Plain black parasols made up of dull finished taffeta, with ebonized handles, and finished with a butterfly bow at the top, are carried with mourning costumes. Parasols of black and white striped satin make an expressive adjunct to the toilette, and are a very good choice to make if one can possess but one parasol, for the black and white will go with any toilette without marring it.

There are parasols shown in the genuine old sunshade fashion, with a bend in the handle, so it can be turned to shade the face at any desired angle. At the earliest date of spring these sunshades were produced and carried by the elderly ladies. They are especially good for carriage use, when a large parasol would seem in the way. The shape of the smart parasol is more ribbon has two large choux at the front, with large ends falling to the foot of the skirt. The big rimmed hat is of fine black gauze, lined with rose pink, and massed on the top with bunches of roses in all shades, from crimson to white. There are long rose colored gauze scarf ends falling from each side, which may be worn tied under her dainty chin. The parasol to accompany this gown is yellow chiffon, all full of soft puffs and caught here and there by dainty bunches of pink roses. The lining is a soft rose color.

The other costume is of black and green striped linen grenadine over violet satin. The skirt is laid in pointed panels, finished with butterfly bows of green ribbon. The bodice is in Louis XIV mode, very much cut away at the front to show the soft vest of tucked green mousseline de soie. There are elbow sleeves of green, with frills of colored plaids, and the flowered grenadines and those with a silk crepon stripe are other materials which the summer girl will wear.

None of her skirts will be made with the box plait effect in front, as they have been throughout the winter. In the filmy gowns foot ruffles are much in evidence. Many of the French gowns are made with the slashed skirt. A flowered taffeta skirt, for example, will have the front breadth of the silk with the sides slashed to show accordion-plaited silk muslin or net. This skirt, of course, is made over silk, and the effect is very pretty.

At the waist line a number of the skirts are worn over the bodice, the corselet or girdle being fastened to the skirt.

BATISTE GOWNS.

The batiste gowns which are so much the vogue at present are seen in a bewildering variety of designs. The plainer ones are in the natural flax color, you may perhaps with propriety indulge in one elaborate silken and lacy affair that is carefully planned to harmonize with your supply of elaborate gowns. But such a petticoat should no more see the street and the cold glare of shopping day than should the dress for which the skirt is supposed to be planned. For the street, if you possess a silk-lined and formal tailor-made gown, a silk petticoat of color to harmonize with either the silk lining or the material of the dress, and made with the same simplicity that marks the dress, no matter what its expense, is all right. For ordinary house use a petticoat of white or pongee silk, made simply, unberuffled and unlace-covered, is suitable whenever the dainty house gown is suitable.

WASHABLE PETTICOATS.

But such a petticoat should be fit for the wash tub, and should make its regular visits there. There is excuse for a silk skirt made of really heavy and good material, in a handsome plaid, without lace or bows or pinked frivolity or finish. Such a skirt ought to be fairly short, and not liable to dragging in the mud, and should not be affected at all unless you are able to discard it and get a new one in a little while. Of all vulgarities the frazzled and soiled silk skirt is the most offensive—after tarnished gold trimming and dirty lace.

The really proper street petticoat is one of crisp gingham or mohair. It may be ankle length and should be full, and prettily finished with a ruffle or a dozen of them, but not elaborated with lace or with bows. Such a skirt presents a pretty contrast to the dress skirts, and wears as long as does any other that can go into the wash tub, asa rel spectable walking petticoat should. At the same time it looks more suitable than a white and lace-trimmed muslin petticoat. There is no time, except in the morning at home, when the starched white petticoat is suitable. The lawn petticoat all lace is, of course, exquisitely dainty, but it has hardly any legitimate use except as a part of a gown that is intended to be worn only once or twice and then sent to the cleansers. A wash silk petticoat is by far the wiser investment for the same kind of wear than a perishable lace-trimmed lawn skirt.

Pinked out finish and lace frills are each highly impracticable elaboration of petticoats. The pinking frays badly, and the lace catches in the heels or at the buttons of the shoes. Either, once marred by fraying or tearing, is most untidy and vulgar. Any but a wash skirt worn under a wash dress is bad taste.

WASH RUFFLES.

I know a woman who has a set of wash silk ruffles that are finished with buttonholes along the heading. These buttonholes attach themselves to buttons on the under side of her skirts. The result is a perfectly fresh dust ruffle, and one that is adjustable. Of course the adjusting is a nuisance, but less so than putting in an entire new ruffle, and there is less danger of wearing a ruffle that is not in proper condition, while the presence of such a ruffle makes a whole silk skirt unnecessary.

It is entirely possible to make a silk skirt of mohair or even of gingham to the knees. The effect need not be ugly. Harmonize colors, and let the whole have an intended air.

Denim, either in blue or in red, makes a most serviceable and a pretty petticoat, especially the blue denim, finished with white braid. These wash and have a good deal of "hold out" to them, and are pretty and fresh as the dress is lifted. Turkey red also makes a pretty skirt. So does duck. Indeed, nothing could be crisper and prettier than a duck underskirt, one with white ground and a spot of color. The ruffles should be finished with wash braid to match the spot. Cambrics in pretty stripes make pretty petticoats, too. There has been a big run on imitation silk materials, but such deceptions are too usual now to deceive, and at any rate a thing is always in better taste to look like what it is and not like anything else.

FASHION CHAT.

Button, button, who's got the button? Everybody.

Are the women in Boston beginning to paint, as do their Gotham sisters? Oh, no! Their Gotham sisters know how to do it, and the Boston women don't. That makes all the difference.

White veils seems to be "the wear" in the world.

with all the spring hats.

"Not all the skirts that skrunch are lined with silk," is taking the place of the old-time remark about glittering and gold.

If you have the courage to cut up a beautiful Chinese crepe shawl, nothing makes a more lovely evening cape—especially a white one. Discard the fringe, too, and trim the cape with soft bunches of white chiffon. Pad it, and line with a faint flush of color, or with pure white. Nothing will be lovelier, and it will never be out of style, and serve you better than the shawl itself. Still, it does take courage to cut up a shawl, doesn't it?

It makes one thoughtful to observe the proportions of the ready make leggings offered for wheel use. Many of them look as if intended to wear either end up.

WHEELING SUITS.

Even if you do not ride the wheel, better get for country and seaside use a wheeling suit. They come leggings, hat, "under-knicks," and all ready made for a great deal less than you could make them for, and are really of very good style and fit for all their small price. I am glad to note, too, that as a rule the waist measurement is generous, and squeezing into such suits is not a bit the rule.

All the hats are trimmed with flowers, and really you might just as well as not be humane and not wear feathers.

Green and blue still retain an air of chic when combined. Boston is so faithful to fashions. If you put yourself into a tailor-made blue serge, lined with grass green, and if around your dainty or otherwise waist you put a green narrow leather belt, and if on your head you mount a sailor of rough blue straw, all laden with primroses and violets, you are all right.

Everyone is wearing the festive sailor. And the festive sailor gets less and less seaworthy. Think of one of the average in a sou'-wester! With all that tulle, and all those flowers, and that tip and the tinsel—they would not even do for the naval militia.

Grass linen sailor collars will be worn on many of the cloth gowns this spring. These collars are much more elaborate than they were last year. One, which was seen on an imported blue serge gown, was trimmed with a narrow band of white embroidery beading. Through the beading scarlet baby ribbon was run, and the effect was exceedingly pretty.

REDFERN'S LATEST.

Grape Canvas a Fashionable New Material.

A very choice material has found its way into the fashion world known as "grape canvas." It is semi-transparent and silky in appearance. The prettiest way to make it up is over the brightest shades of silk or satin. Silk is more appropriate for the summer, being so much lighter in weight than satin. Braiding is often introduced into the bodice, forming the revers or vest; in some instances a corsage will be found to give a very effective finish to these very dressy gowns.

White and flowered muslins will also hold a fair position among fashions by reason of their being so cool, besides forming delightfully "chic" gowns particularly suitable to young girls. A charming arrangement of this fabric I saw at Redfern's a few days ago. I have much pleasure in introducing to you in the following description:

This gown is made with full pleated skirt all round and has two rows of fine lace insertion, one about an inch from the hem and one about four inches above. The full, drawn waist has wide frills over the shoulders edged with lace to match the insertion; a small ruffle encircles the throat, while the sleeves are puffed to the elbow, from whence they wrinkle to the waist like long gloves; a pretty willow green ribbon finishes the waist and adds much to the dainty effect of this lady like frock.

AN ATTRACTIVE DRESS.

Returning to our former subject; let me tell you about a marvelously attractive dress I saw at this establishment, which was an exact copy of a Paris model of the latest style. It was made entirely of this grape canvas, which the French call "linen" over a glace silk of a mixture of mauve and red which was, of course, only dimly visible through this semi-transparent material. The linen of the bodice was completely masked in a beautiful embroidery in silver and gold mixed with several shades of green and finished at the throat and wrists with a full band of willow-green velvet. The hat destined to be worn with this extremely elegant costume is of green straw, covered with Russian violets and green tulle, with two Paradise feathers falling like wings on each side. The feature of this season's hats is the turned up back with cachepeignes of leaves, flowers or choux of many colored tulle.

For yachting and any good substantial wear, linen cannot be surpassed. It is to be had in many delicate shades, among which a very taking combination will be found in making up the pale blue and light tan together, or butter color and dark tan. A coat and skirt which are among the leaders this week combine the shades of cream with dull light blue. The full skirt is plain, with the exception of having a band of blue round the bottom, about an inch wide, at the top of which are three rows of dead white braid, forming a very pretty, simple finish. The double-breasted coat has a wide sailor collar scalloped out all round and braided in a like manner, silver anchor buttons decorate the front, and also form the fastenings; in this case a white silk shirt waist is worn under the coat with small bow tie. A girl possessing a couple of these suits and a variety of shirt waists for the summer may consider herself well-dressed, for they wash splendidly, and come out looking fresh as ever and always dressy.

BOSTON ENGLISH.

A Language Not Heavily Fringed With Culture.

Here is an impeachment of Boston English that is an impeachment, says the Boston Transcript. As it is well to know the worst that can be said about us, and as the letter which follows is not all a general accusation, but a specific one, the Listener presents it in all its awfulness:

Dear Listener—May I send you a few specimens of English "as she is spoke," not a thousand miles from Boston by persons in good society—so-called—many of them members of women's clubs, Browning and Emerson societies etc., including some ex-school teachers? In some of the instances mentioned it will be noticed that the degree of culture is indicated more by the pronounciation than by the words used:

"I've read French quite a little."

"Is he much better? Yes, some considerable."

"It is quite a good deal warmer than what it was yesterday."

"She lives quite a ways from here." (This by a college graduate, feminine.)

"I like the furtherest one best." (Said of two things.)

"There isn't a cluzet (closet) in the house."

"He don't feel real well."

"I hope you will be a lot better."

"They stayed at the Mounting house," (Mountain house.)

"I says to Henry's teacher," etc.

"I shew (pronounced shoo) her my new dress."

"If I was you."

"I don't know as I can."

"At our last meeting you was elected a member of the club."

"I saw you going acrosst the lawn."

"I just escape pneumonlar. I know."

"I might have gone to lawr about it."

"She sawr a man."

"That was the blear I had."

"I wished (present tense) you would come and see me."

"I was here when she come." (Past tense.)

"If any one would like their name presented to the club," etc. (This by the president of the club.)

"Did you sleep good?"

"We don't keep a dog, nor the Smiths don't."

"I don't know but what it is so" (by a public speaker of superior education.)

"I suppose I shall find it somewheres."

"I saw him when I was down to Portland." (The last two by a former president of one of our leading female colleges, a woman of uncommon culture and literary attainments.)

"Yes, that's her" (by a dean of the Episcopal church, not in New England.)

"That equivocal (equivalent) to saying," etc.

"That man is a colossial liar."

"When my daughters were in a convent in Italy, the nuns learned them to do Florentine embroidery. They worked a chair cover, and one of them done the seat and the other done the back."

The last three by a wealthy woman in fashionable society, not in Boston. With the exception of these I have heard all the above expression used by well-educated people, some of whom have had uncommon advantages. It reminds me of a story, which I know to be true, of a very dull pupil in a young ladies' academy of note, who was asked by her teacher what good she thought it had done her to study grammar. "It's learned me to speak more proper," was the encouraging reply.

It is needless to say that my criticism does not apply to all well-educated people. Happily there are many, even in my "suberbian town," who speak pure and faultless English. I suppose the difference is due in many cases to early home influence.

Then there are some people whose grammar is not always correct, who will yet take pains to say "Did—you." "Don't—you." "Would—you," etc., instead of "Didjew." "Don'tchew." and "Wouldjew," seeming to think that nicety in this respect is sufficient evidence of a high degree of culture. Of course, a slovenly pronounciation should be avoided; but of the two, is not grammatical correctness and care in the choice of language more important than mere nicety of pronounciation?

FELL INTO THE TRAP.

At the last New Year's fair in Paris, says Le Temps, one of the stallholders who, despite the good weather and the multitude of passersby, had done very little business, had recourse to an original method of clearing out his stock. While delivering his usual speech on the excellence of his 50-centime articles, a gentleman, in a state of great excitement, pushed his way through the crowd and exclaimed:

"There you are, you rascal! No wonder you can sell these things at 10 sous when you still owe me a franc and a half apiece for them. But the matter shall be looked into. I am going straight to fetch the police."

The excited gentleman disappeared. Our salesman trembled in his shoes and entreated the bystanders to relieve him of his wares. This they were ready enough to do in the belief that they were about to get all sorts of nice bargains at a third of their real value. And the trick was done, for the pretended wholesale merchant was merely an accomplice of the cheap-jack.

The Gossiper.

Russia's young empress has created consternation at the court of St. Petersburg by discountenancing the use of tobacco by the ladies with whom she is brought into contact. She is credited with the observation that a cigarette in the mouth of a woman is as bad as an oath in that of a man, and she requested that neither her ladies in waiting nor yet the ladies of the court should approach her as long as there is the slightest aroma of tobacco about their clothes or about their persons. Now, nearly every member of the imperial family, and in natural consequence well nigh every lady in court and in society at St. Petersburg, is addicted to the use and even abuse of cigarettes, the grand Duchess Vladimir being conspicuous among the number.

The widowed czarina, like her sisters, the princess of Wales and the duchess of Cumberland, never favored the use of tobacco by ladies, but in spite of all the influence which she wielded over her husband, Alexander III, she did not venture openly to object to it on the part of members of her court. That the young empress should have had the courage to do so constitutes a proof not only that her influence over her husband is of a predominant nature, but also that she will not hesitate to use it for the execution of her ideas, irrespective of any prejudices or obstacles that she may encounter.

A trait that has added greatly to Mrs. Cleveland's popularity is her wonderful memory of faces and names. A woman visiting Washington during last winter attended a public reception, but when she found herself in the procession composed of the queer medley of people, she was greatly embarrassed. Beside her in the line was an old woman fresh from her country market. In front was a cowboy from the prairies in slouch hat and top boots; near by she saw an old woman flower seller with her basket of half-faded carnations in her hand.

When at last she reached Mrs. Cleveland she said a few words of her distress at being one of such company. Mrs. Cleveland was all graciousness. "If you will tell me your name and address," she said with one of her bewitching smiles, "I will send you a card to my private reception. You will find that pleasanter, I think."

The visitor told her where she was staying, and was much pressed at her pleasant reception, but it did not occur to her as possible that the president's wife should remember the card. But she received the invitation the next morning! When she attended the private reception her cup of bliss was quite full when Mrs. Cleveland recognized her and called her by name.

After experimenting with the cane, the natural flower garter, the pajama and the black nightgown, the young woman in search of novelty has adopted the ankle bangle.

The ankle bangle is distinctly new, and as poplar as it is novel. It will be seen on the seashore, in the mountains, in sailboats, in the tallyho, but its most effective background will be the veranda of the summer hotel. There it will appear in large numbers and in all the designs conceived by expert jewelers.

It is worn only on the left ankle, and is usually a chain-shaped affair of gold or silver links, with a small pendant. This pendant may be a heart, a locket, a monogram coin or an amulet of any kind. Low shoes, of course, set off the ankle bangle, and appears to the best advantage against a background of black silk stocking.

If the baby, despite your injunctions, will insist upon crying, just choke it. That is the Indian mother's way. At the first attempt to cry on the part of the infant the mother places her hand over its mouth and pinches its nose, so that it cannot breathe freely again. This operation, repeated persistently whenever the baby begins a crying spell soon persuades the child that it is its own act—the effort to cry—which produces the uncomfortable choking fit. It soon decides the game is not worth the candle and stops its wails.

Now, it is too much to expect the doting American mother will resort to this heroic measure to persuade her infant that crying is superfluous and unnecessary, but will she, perhaps, see the moral in the proceeding? Herbert Spencer points the same in his essay on education, when he advises parents to follow the methods of nature in their correction of their children. A child touches a hot stove and his finger is burned. He does it again and again his finger is burned. Every time he tries it the punishment is ready. Probably the second attempt cures him, and never again while he lives does he voluntarily try the temperature of a piece of heated iron on his exposed skin. It is not the violent, spasmodic punishment that means correction of a child's faults. Retribution may be small and comparatively insignificant if it is absolutely sure to follow transgression. It is the persistent, relentless and not-to-be-escaped-from character of the consequences of his misdemeanor that impresses the childish mind and finally convinces him. All of which is with apologies to Mr. Spencer, who has said it infinitely better in his essay, to which all mothers who have not read it are earnestly referred.

The real keynote to successful hairdressing, as the tasteful woman has long ago found, is to follow only in the distance. If that capricious dame announces that "hair is worn low this season," it means simply to the woman who knows that the general effect of her coiffure is to be slightly lowered. She will still dress her hair, as she must always, to suit her face. A low, straight forehead may be surmounted by a pompadour arrangement; a high-pointed brow never. Fine, straight, black hair ought never to show itself in frizzes or fine curls; loose, shining waves are its heightening beauty. It is a curious fact, too, that blonde or brown hair may permit itself a sweet confusion that in black hair is simply untidiness. The woman with coarse, wavy hair may congratulate herself, for it always lends itself, above all chevelures, to easy arrangement. Novelists like to describe the fine hair of their heroines, but such hair is a trial to its owner and its owner's maid, if she has one, and if, in addition, it is straight, both owner and maid are justified in regarding it as a genuine handicap to all successful coiffing.

There is an artist in Abazzi, in Austria, who is now plunged in the blackest depths of despair, and an archduchess who is not as good-tempered as is her wont. It seems that the unlucky wight of a sculptor was commissioned by the town authorities to execute a statue of the "Virgin, Star of the Sea," to adorn one of the public squares, and, as the Archduchess Stephanie of Austria is a regular visitor there every winter, the sculptor conceived the brilliant idea of giving to his Madonna the features of this royal visitor. It was a great success, the archduchess was pleased, and, when it was decided to erect a monument to the railway magnate who had developed the place, the same sculptor was chosen for the work. The design selected represented a bust of the railway magnate being crowned by a nude female figure. When the work was finished, Stephanie was requested to unveil the monument and gladly consented to do so. Fortunately, however, before the public ceremony, she had a private view of the group, and her horror may be imagined when she discovered the sculptor, wishing to repeat his courtly success, had again reproduced her features in those of the nude female. Having no desire to go down to posterity in company with Pauline Bonaparte, who Canova reproduced in marble as "Venus Victrix," Stephanie was so indignant that the group had to be changed.

Handsome stockings are a necessity and not a luxury in a woman's wardrobe this season. Short skirts are responsible for this, for what woman is willing to wear cotton, or even plain lisle, hosiery when fashion demands that a good bit of a neatly-turned ankle must show? Never before have eyes beheld such pretty silk stockings as those recently brought from Paris by the importer. It is a well known fact that no matter how severe a French woman's gown may be she is sure to be gorgeously arrayed as far as her under garments are concerned, and this is especially true of her stockings.

For many years American women have affected somber black stockings, varying them with colored ones to match evening shoes or slippers. Last season, however, they took the hint from the Parisian woman, and colored hosiery was worn to some extent. This season bright hues are much in demand. The very latest novelty in the way of silk stockings is a changeable effect, and two and even three colors shimmer and gleam until one is at a loss to know whether the stocking is really woven of silk thread or made of changeable glace taffeta. Some of the combinations of colors are beautiful and striking. A particularly pretty one is pale green and lilac; another, rose and old blue; a third of a regular pumpkin color and old blue; Some of the open-work, changeable stockings show yellow and olive, yellow and old blue, and lavender and blue. They are absolutely fadeless, will wear for years with care, and retail at $4.50 a pair. The plain ones sell for $4.

"This political life is not all that it has been pictured."

The new woman sighed and laid aside her pen.

"What's up now, dearest?" I asked, with tender inelegance.

"I must have Charley's vote," she went on "and Charley says he must have me. Now, if I get his vote and he gets me, what have I gained politically?"

She rested her head on her hand and sighed again. I sighed too.

"It looks to me," she said, "as if he would get back his vote, with the office and me thrown in to make it a better bargain. That may be politics, but it it does not commend itself to my business judgment."

She knitted her brows and scowled at the political circular that she had been preparing.

"If I refuse to accept his terms," she continued, "he will swing the ward against me, and then what will I have? Nothing. Not even a husband. I must give myself, including the office, and if I don't I am stranded in both politics and love."

She threw the circular into the waste basket and prepared to write a new one.

"On the other hand," she said, suddenly stopping in her work, "if I accept Charlie's terms I shall give mortal offense to Will, and Will has a strong pull in the other end of the ward. Will is a nice fellow, too, but if Tom only controlled a ward or two I think I'd"——

She shook her head at the very thought.

"No; Tom doesn't amount to anything politically;" she argued with herself. "If I were not a new woman I might—I wish I were not a new woman. I don't see what good it does me to be one, when there are such drawbacks. I—I don't believe I will be one any longer."

She tore up the second circular, decided to let the country go to the demnition bow-wows as far as she was concerned, and accept Tom's invitation to go to the theater.

And I went with Charlie.

Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a certain, prompt and thorough medicinal agent through the use of which sound digestion, and the peace tranquility which its disturbance causes, can be recovered. IN THE LABOR FIELD

Is President Morrison of the Ore Trimmers' union a traitor to organized labor?

The Trades Assembly last evening has resolved that the trouble between the Ore Trimmers' union and the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railroad company cannot be solved by local applications and that the remedy of a resort to the International 'Longshomemen's association must be tried. The report to that effect of the committee to which was referred the matter was adopted last evening, and the trimmers were assured of the sympathy and moral support of organized labor in Duluth. This action was not taken until after a somewhat dramatic scene had been enacted. In which Delegate Cobb tossed accusations in a dignified way at President Morrison.

Delegate Baker, of the committee to confer with the railroad people, reported that the committee had failed to accomplish anything and recommended that the grievance be carried to the International association and also that the good offices of the Lake Carriers' association be sought.

President Morrison of the Trimmers' union, pending the motion to refer, told the assembly that his union wanted the moral support of the assembly in the fight, and said that the union would endeavor to enlist the Lake Carriers' association. Delegate Cobb opposed the motion. His principal reason seemed to be that the Lake Carriers' association was not in sympathy with the men and it would be useless to approach it. This objection did not seem very strong and many of the delegates wondered that Mr. Cobb should put it forward. To those who had already something in the wind, it appeared as if Mr. Cobb was holding back a bomb which he did not care to throw if he could make a firecracker do as well, and all around there was an air of expectancy.

Delegate Baker forced the fighting by giving Mr. Cobb a mild roast. He scouted the latter's objection and said that when the endeavor was made to prevent the assembly from taking up the cause of the trimmers because the Lake Carriers' association did not want its business interfered with, Mr. Baker lamented that Cobb had allowed himself to be dictated to by the chamber of commerce.

This stung Mr. Cobb to reply that the committee had not received any instructions from the chamber in regard to the matter. It had acted on conclusions arrived at by independent investigations. Mr. Cobb now fixed his eyes on Mr. Morrison and said that the committee had been presented with evidence of a character very damaging to that gentleman, which had been submitted to it by Vice President McBride.

Mr. Morrison jumped to his feet and said he had evidence very damaging to Mr. McBride. Mr. Morrison had evidently made up his mind to head off Mr. Cobb, and he launched into a diatribe against Mr. McBride, accusing him of having broken his contracts. "When I called on Mr. McBride in behalf of the union," said Mr. Morrison, "he whispered in my ear to go quietly home and submit a proposition for this session. I did so, making a proposition in February to give him a quarter of a cent a ton. But he found he could get 1¼ cents out of it and he threw us overboard. I made that proposition at his request."

Mr. Morrison asked Mr. Cobb if the proposition he had seen did not commence with the words "with your permission." Mr. Cobb said that might be true, but that, as an honest man, he could not join in any recommendation to refer the matter to the International union. "The men now employed on that dock have, many of them, been engaged there for four seasons. They are satisfied. They are earning from $20 to $30 per week, and are at liberty to join a labor organization if they wish. If they had been refused that right, organized labor would have a grievance, but it has none at present."

"Now let us see who the members of the Ore Trimmers' union are. They have never worked on that dock. What right have they to form a union and demand access to that field? It is generally supposed that only working members of a craft can form a union. These men have no right to ask us to go any further."

Mr. Cobb went on to say that Mr. McBride had said that if Morrison importuned him further, he would have to show that gentleman's letter of March 2 last. "I have seen it," said he, "and if anyone doubts it is a clear proposition by Mr. Morrison to sell out his men, they can ask Mr. Owens, of the district court.

"Morrison has made a clear proposition for a job as foreman of the dock trimmers. He has offered to get up a gang to trim ore at 2 cents a ton, of which he was to get one-quarter of a cent and Mr. McBride the same. This letter may be a forgery, but the handwriting resembles Mr. Morrison's."

Mr. Morrison acknowledged that he had written a letter, but said it was at Mr. McBride's request. As he sat down after this explanation, there was a painful silence for a few moments. It was evident that a bad impression had been created. The sense of the assembly, however, as expressed by the committee's report, was that the Trimmers' union should not be deserted because of any action its president might have taken personally. As to him, there is a feeling that Mr. Cobb has made a center shot.

As delegates to attend the convention of the Minnesota State Federation of Labor, to be held in Minneapolis on June 14, J. M. Murray, E. J. Maher and William McEwen were elected. An amendment to the constitution in regard to the election of officers was given its first reading. It provides that elections shall be held at the first meetings in January and July, instead of the last meetings in December and June as heretofore. A committee to agitate a Saturday half holiday was named, consisting of Messrs. McDowell, Murray and G. H. Thompson.

G. B. Moore, a promoter of a state savings and investment association, was given the floor and enlarged on the advantage of the scheme. The committee appointed to solicit aid for the Theatrical Employes' union reported that it had collected and disbursed $53.75. A collection for the Women's and Children's home was taken, netting $3.75. Delegate McEwen was appointed on the organization committee, vice Nichols, resigned. It was resolved to appoint advisers for new unions, and to urge on them the adoption of higher dues, not less than 50 cents per month.

CONVENTION OF PAINTERS.

For the annual convention of the Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators, which commences at Chicago Aug 3, the city council has granted the free use of the council chamber. Only once before has this privilege been accorded to trades unionists, and that was on the occasion of the Chicago convention of the American Federation of Labor. Members of the Painters' union have other matters in connection with their forthcoming gathering on which to felicitate themselves, and are confronted with the brightest prospects in the career of their organization.

Besides delegations from fifty cities who will represent the brotherhood's own membership of 7000, it is probable that delegates from nearly all of the largest unions of the Elliott faction will be seated. Many applications have come in from them, and they are being welcomed by officers of the brotherhood. Two years ago the split in the Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators took place. John T. Elliott seceded from the union and took with him 180 members, establishing headquarters at Baltimore. He left behind 1600 members, and the two figures represented the then total strength of the painters of a large part of the country. Now the Elliott faction has a membership of 3500 and the Western faction, which has headquarters at Lafayette, Ind., and is recognized in the West as the original organization, has a membership of 7000. Despite the bitterness of the contest between the two factions, the split has been of great benefit to painters, for the rivalry has incited effort that has resulted in a gain of 7000 members of one craft to organized labor in two years.

The convention will devote its attention to drawing all the union painters into one fold. Numerous attempts have been made to have a peaceable settlement with the Elliott faction, but all have failed, and the Lafayette people will take action looking to the complete absorption of the former and to affiliate with the American Federation of Labor. It is almost certain that the latter organization will meet overtures to this end more than half way. The refusal of John T. Elliott to submit the difficulty to the arbitration of the Federation has done much to alienate the sympathies of the powerful national organization. It is charged by members of Elliott's own organization that he refused to call a convention this year, alleging specious reasons, and thereby insuring his own continuance in office. This action incensed the big unions in his faction and led to their applying to the brotherhood for admission. Upon their showing at the convention will depend the life or death of the Elliott faction, and it is probable that they will come to Chicago in such force that their sister unions will perforce come into the fold.

The beginning of the end is visible in Chicago, where, within the past week, Elliott's local No. 91, his only important Western union, has come in bodily into the Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators.

DEBS AT CINCINNATI.

Debs was there but twenty-four hours, but the preparations and anticipations which preceded his coming, and the thought and enthusiasm which he aroused and which remained after him, were so exacting as to time and occupation that nothing was done during the week except to register and hear Debs. It was a Debs week, says the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette. His appearance in Cincinnati was a significant event.

Debs is a man of his convictions. He is eloquent. He is liberal minded. He is a forcible refutalion of the old adage in vogue somewhere that the laboringman are essentially of a brutal nature; that they possess only blunt intellects, and, that, therefore, they are capable of understanding only the harangues of men of more animalism than intellectuality.

Debs has great faith in the future; he said so. He said the solution of the labor problem would be found in the educating of the workingman and the uplifting of his home. His reference to the fireside and its happy associations was with much feeling and fervor. The individuality of the workingman was made light of the fireside, said Debs. Was he to become master of the situation? Was he to own himself and direct his own energies? Was he finally to live like a man and act like a man? If he was, said Debs, it would be through his own efforts and his own self-education.

The vivid way in which Debs pictured the workingman—the workingman of high intellectual attainments and the workingman with an empty cranium—cannot but have left a deep impression on the minds of those who heard him. Minute wages paid by niggardly wage payers were largely due to the existing condition of affairs. The lack of sufficient pecuniary remuneration deprived the laborer of education and refining home influences.

Debs denounced child labor. He told a pitiable story of the child life in the factory. He said the majority of people knew little or nothing of the real conditions and recited the facts of child labor in the Northern furniture factories. Creatures, earning from $2 to $3 per week, he said, when asked to hold up their little hands, showed from one to five fingers missing. The keynote of Debs' speech was: "You have not the right to rob the child of its childhood."

Debs is a rare combination of sound judgment, conservatism and common sense.

UNIONS TO BE NONPARTISAN.

Never in the history of this country was such determined effort made by politicians and all grades of reformers as is being made now to induce the trade union to espouse a cause other than that for which it was organized, says M. J. Carroll in the Eight-Hour Herald. Advocates of free silver and free trade, protection and the gold standard, for purity of the ballot, civil service reform, direct legislation, socialism, single tax and all manner of nostrums besiege the union and labor with the members in an effort to convert them to their way of thinking. More than this, the writers who advocate these measures insist that the trades unionist is disloyal to his union when he fails to see the great benefits to accrue from the triumph of the particular measure advocated, an error into which have fallen many well meaning labor papers.

All the measures referred to here are distinctly and essentially political in their nature, and can only be effected through the medium of the ballot box. The trade union is economic in its character and tendencies, established for the express purpose of improving the industrial and social condition of the mechanic and laborer, and is strictly nonpartisan and nonsectarian in its makeup. The purposes and objects of the union are so simple and so easily understood that so long as they are adhered to there is little likelihood of serious differences between the members. Aside from the well-defined objects of a trade union, the members' interest in reforms of a political nature is no greater nor no less than of other citizens, and in the consideration and disposal of it he should be allowed the same freedom of action as is accorded to other citizens. When the socialist, the free silverite or the protectionist try to bring these questions into the union, and try to make these questions a part of the platform of trades unionism, he is but sowing the seed of discord without strengthening its own cause. We contend that a trades unionist can go outside his union and join a socialist club, vote for free silver, or advocate a protective tariff to his heart's content. These are political questions; and in politics the trades unionist is free to act as he pleases.

UNIONS BRING ADVANCEMENT.

Peace, happiness and a sense bordering on contentment can never prevail until the great mass of people have learned to successfully establish a better and higher plane of life, says the Cigarmakers' Journal. The trades unionist holds that the surest way to permanently reach that state is through the trades-union system of organization. History fully confirms that belief. The trades union lives on, despite all drawbacks, and other reforms fail to accomplish one-half the beneficial results for the producing classes that are to the credit of the trades-union movement. Who can successfully say that the trades unions have not done more to lift the masses up to their present standard than all the other alleged agencies combined? Who shortened the hours of labor from sixteen and eighteen to eight, nine and ten hours per day? Trades unions. Who established scales of prices all over the land? Trades unions. Who cared for the unemployed during the present industrial depression. Trades union. Where would the scale of prices be now if it were not for the trades unions? And yet there are idiots who can be found who will say trades unions are no good and that other means must be adopted. In reaching conclusions let us consider facts. They are more substantial than theories. It is not the fault of the trades union that it has not accomplished more; it is the fault of those who blindly stand aloof. If the union can do so much with its present membership, what would be the result if all were organized? Let us bend our efforts in that direction.

SPEAKS FOR ORGANIZTION.

F. Thorold Rogers, professor of political economy in the university of Cambridge and member of the British parliament, says: "I at one time looked upon labor unions with suspicion, but a long study of the history of labor has convinced me that not only are they the best friends of the workingman, but the best agency for the employer and the public, and to the extension of these associations statesmen and political economists must look for the solution of some of the most pressing and difficult problems of our time. Such testimony ought to silence the little fellows who, without giving the question one moment's serious reflection, denounce labor organizations as harmful, tyrannical and everything else that is bad. Professors of political economy and public men whose duties require them to study the relations between labor and capital are unanimous in the opinion that labor should organize, that it is to the interest of the nation and of the laborers that they should do so."

James Redpath, the historian, registered his opinion with regard to shorter hours of labor in the following terms: "I favor the eight-hour workday. Whether or not it will increase the cost of production I don't know and I don't care. The cost of production of goods is of infinitely less importance to a democratic civilization than the more equitable distribution of wealth, leisure and intellectual advantages. Better cheap goods than cheap men. The most important products of a republic are not its manufactures, but its citizens. Long hours make shoddy Americans."

LABEL MAKES A WEAPON.

During the recent years organized labor has invoked the aid of the union label as an effective weapon in its warfare. It does not involve any of the disagreeable features attendant on boycotting, while much more satisfactory results are obtained, says the Union Label Herald. I mean supporting your friends in an unobjectionable manner, rather than fighting your enemies. You are requested to assist in strengthening the label question by demanding that all printing bear the union label.

The label indicates that union workmen have been employed in producing the book or paper upon which it appears. There is no other means open to organized labor whereby it can so effectively advance the interests of union labels as by patronizing the label issued by the printers. Every work bearing the printers' label is an advertisement for other labels and unionism generally. Ask your employers to use it on their printing. Ask the book agent if it is on the work he is attempting to sell to you. The label is more potent than strikes or boycotts. Support your friends and fair employers of all trades.

PINGREE FAVORS EIGHT HOURS.

The movement for the eight-hour day finds its chief promoters in the cities where the pressure of employment and the consequent reduction in wages, combined with other conditions which restrict consumption, are most severely felt, said Mayor Pingree, of Detroit, in a recent public address. It is one of the several desirable changes in the present industrial system, which, in my opinion, is deserving of adoption. Its promoters deserve every aid possible from right thinking men, and all who are alive to the general interests upon which their own interests depend. From all parts of the United States come reports that at least two leading trades of organized labor, backed up by their international unions, will make a demand for eight hours, and although it would have been better if other conditions of the employers as well, if their requests had been granted, the prospects are exceedingly bright for the attainment of the result so often asked for, but as often refused.

VOICE FROM KANSAS CITY.

The labor movement from Russia to the United States is marshalling its forces today for the purpose of controlling tomorrow, said Rev. Carlos Martyn, of Kansas City. Christianity takes no interest in it, never addresses it, has never said one word to it. The preachers are too busy bombarding the Pharisees of the nineteenth century. They only say, bless us, what a noise fellows in their shirt sleeves are making out there. Let us sing the doxology." Labor cries, 'Give me a chance. I want shorter hours, better wages and more bread.'" Christianity whispers "Sh—. Capital rents the pews, pays for the pews and patronizes the parson. We'll open a soup house. We'll build a mission in a side street and name it St. Lazarus." The church confronts itself with elevation and does not study to cure. It gives pity, not justice. It provides charity instead of insisting on a rearrangement of the situation.

The church builds cathedrals, not men. It meets on Sunday for worship in splendid exclusion and seclusion and shuts the building through the week while the congregation is occupied at the theaters, in ball room or on Wall street. The church is warned off from the treatment of living issues, drones through a parrot-like repetition of the creed and puts the emphasis on belief when it should put it on conduct. Another result is that the church is pre-empted and emptied by wealth and fashion. Lawyers who are counsels for trusts and monopolies, capitalists whose names are identified with tricky monetary transactions, leaders of the town whose real god is society, occupy the highest seats in the synagogue and have to come because they feel surer that they will not be reminded of time in the contemplation of eternity.

LAUDS THE UNION LABEL.

"What can be more sacred, more holy or more deserving of the reverence of men or angels than the union label, which signifies that human life has been more highly valued in the production of commodities than the mere profits sought for by greed?" said Rev. Walter Wyeoman, of Baltimore, in a recent sermon. "The label is an emblem of justice, of fraternity, of humanity. When you find a label on a garment or on a box of cigars or a loaf of bread you can be sure that neither was made in a sweat shop. That no little children's fingers were compelled to sew or sort tobacco in the hours of the night intended for healthful, childish sleep. When you see this label on any commodity you can buy it with a clear conscience, knowing that in doing so you are not becoming partner to any institution that degrades humanity for private profit. You can sleep sound also and not be worried with thoughts of typhus fever, smallpox or leprosy, which are often scattered broadcast from Chinese opium joints, penitentiary convicts' cells and tenement sweat shops, where the most degraded specimens of humanity put their life's blood into marketable goods that the poor, unsuspecting public buys unknowingly and from which this same unsuspecting public suffers all manner of foul and loathsome diseases.

"The union label is a religious emblem. It is a religious act to buy goods to which this label is attached, an act blest on earth and honored in heaven, while it is a sin to buy a cigar, a piece of clothing, a pair of shoes or a loaf of bread without this label, for then you do not know but you are building up the business of some heartless tyrant who is extracting a fortune from the drudgery and degradation of his fellows at the risk of public health. God bless the label! And I hope that all of you, as you leave this house tonight, will carry indelibly impressed upon your minds the picture of the union label, surrounded by angels, and that you will always know that the favorite banner in heaven represents justice to labor, fresh air and sunshine and healthful conditions for those who toil, and the truth that human life is of greater moment than the gain of gold."

SHOULD HAVE ARBITRATED.

Regarding the failure to arbitrate the street car strike in Milwaukee, the Journal of that city says: To the ordinary citizen it would seem that the railway company has made a mistake in not fully accepting arbitration or rejecting it absolutely. The half way policy is not likely to result in anything but delay and disappointment at last. It settles nothing. The Journal is still of the opinion that the question at issue should have been fairly and fully submitted with an understanding that the decision should settle the matter. The company seems to forget that it is to remain in Milwaukee and be dependent on the good relations it can establish with its citizens. Then every business man has a direct interest in this matter and ought to take his share in the adjustment or the attempts to bring it about, even though he has no peculiar interest or bias in the subject, but for the common good he should make himself felt. The frank and open course in this case, as in all public and semi-public affairs, is the best. When people know all the facts and arguments they can be trusted to decide rightly, and they should have this information as soon and as directly as possible. No half way work will win confidence, shilly-shallying is out of place and futile. The business men and the city are the natural arbitrators before whom the parties can lay their cause with confidence. This should be done frankly and fully by both parties, and the quicker the better for all.

BILL REGULATING CONTEMPT.

Senator Hill has reported a bill in the United States senate from the judiciary committee in relation to contempt of United States courts. It defines direct contempts to be those committed during the sitting of a court or judge in chambers in its or his presence. All other contempts are indirect. Especial interest in the bill centers in the provision for the punishment of indirect contempt, as in the case of the American Railway union directors. On this point it says:

"That upon the return of an officer or process or an affidavit duly filed showing any person guilty of indirect contempt a writ of attachment or other lawful process may issue and such person be arrested and brought before the court, and thereupon a written accusation, setting forth succinctly and clearly the facts alleged to constitute such contempt shall be filed and the accused required to answer the same by an order fixing the time and place of hearing. If the accused answer the trial shall proceed upon testimony produced as in criminal cases, and he shall be confronted with the witnesses against him; but such trial shall be by the court or, in its discretion, upon application of the accused, a trial by jury may be had as in any criminal case. If found guilty judgment shall be entered accordingly, prescribing the punishment."

The bill allows appeals to the supreme court.

The union carpenters of Cripple Creek held a meeting immediately after the great fire and decided not to ask for an advance in wages, as they were planning to do before the fire. All carpenters are warned away from Cripple Creek, as a lumber famine makes it impossible to give work to more men than are already in the district.

All Sorts of Panaceas Provided For Real and Imaginary Ills.

Advertising Matter to Convince People They Suffer From Disease.

Strange Idiosyncrasies and Antipathies in Regard to Certain Foods.

Nowadays, when, by reason of improved machinery and the harnessing of electricity, man is able to touch the button and see the work of the world and his bread earned by the sweat of the steam chest and the travail of the electric spark, he has more time to think about himself. He usually fails to worrying about himself, and, instead of sweating to earn his bread he perspires over the problem of digesting and properly assimilating it. Not that nature requires that he should sit up nights and worry over her work; she would get along just as well, if not better, if so much of the vital force she needs for her uses were not spent in this way, but man is born to trouble as the sparks fly upward and he must fulfill his destiny. And it is a dull, unimaginative man who cannot provide himself with a case of dyspepsia at least.

Certain shrewd men, with an eye to the acquisition of the dollar that contributes so much to make things pleasant in this world, and other men who are theorists and have figured out exactly what is ideal food for their fellowmen, concoct mixtures which, by reason of the hypochondriacal tendency alluded to, they succeed in getting down the throats of mortals to the fattening of their pocketbooks, the triumphant vindication of their theories or the death of the patient. And so it comes that men spend a good portion of their time groping in the dark mapping themselves. They often become addicted to the medicine habit and fill up on extracts of barks and roots to the discouragement of their stomachs and the stirring up of rebellion on the part of their livers. They are as great slaves to their panaceas, self-prescribed, according to the symptoms in the advertisement, as is the opium fiend to his pipe, and the results are, often, as deplorable in the one case as in the other. And what contributes to the formation of the habit is that the average man cannot read an artistically worded description of the symptoms of any known or unknown disease without failing to imagining that he has that very disorder. As the people with designs on the Indians' ink, his attention is called, in the course of a year, to the critical condition of every organ of his body, from his cerebellum to his corn, and he gives each the treatment he thinks it needs. Nature—long suffering nature—waits around until he is asleep and then rushes in to repair the fences as best she may, that his immortal soul may not make its escape from the tortured body before its time. She is a wise, generous and long-suffering friend, but she gets out of patience once in awhile and often punishes meddlers in an odd way by bringing about the symptoms of the very disease that was feared.

The annals of medicine contain the proof of cases of this kind, of which "sympathetic hydrophobia" is an example. Perhaps this is not the best example, though, that might be cited, for the physician can distinguish between this brand of rabies and the genuine article, but stomach and brain disorders that have been known to ensue after the entertainment of a morbid belief in their presence are undoubtedly the real thing. There is a class of people who will have a great deal to answer for at that last great judgment when the man who hangs out in front of his store a slot machine that won't work meets those who have put their pennies into the device, and that is the accursed one who puts in print to betray his fellows to fresh tortures the list of things edible that are supposed to be valuable for their medicinal effects in certain cases. The unfortunate ones who bite according to direction realize to the full, usually, that one man's meat is another man's poison.

Some of these glib folks, who are full of this sort of advice, publish the information that peanuts are good for indigestion. Well, so they are, for a good many; probably the very best thing next to lava or kiln dried brick. The same kind friend of humanity conveys the information gratis that onions are very healthful, whereupon some seeker after health and strength joyously incorporates some into his anatomy, with the result, often, that he rolls on a bed of agony and imagines he is sent for. And then the turnip. Somebody discovers that the turnip is good for something. One small turnip has been known to resent undue familiarity by dogging a man for a week. Cows were built especially to handle turnips, having a battery of four stomachs, but unless a man is born with a natural talent for turnips, or, in fact, any particular eatable, he had better direct his attention to other things.

The special likings or antipathies of certain people for certain foods, what medical men call idiosyncracies, while they sometimes are of origin in the imagination only, often have their basis deep in the constitution of the individual. Those complex machines, human bodies, do not all do their work exactly alike, any more than clocks or threshing machines. In one individual, the acid secretions in the stomach may be in excess. That person would, perhaps, have the enviable faculty of disposing without inconvenience of great quantities of candy; but one little insignificant strawberry might knock such a one completely under.

Speaking of strawberries. It is generally supposed that the strawberry is the ne plus ultra of healthful aliment, the perfection of fruits from a digestive standpoint. That is just where the tempting berry has played a confidence game on humanity. It has many times been to indigestion as the wooden horse of Troy, enabling it to gain entrance to the citadel. All sorts of antipathies of the appetite have been noted. There is a man living in the southern part of the state who cannot, it is vouched on good authority, partake of shingle nails without positive discomfort. The admixture known as "16 to 1" is, also, nauseous to a great many.

UNEQUALLED IN MEDICAL ANNALS

A Patient Cured who was Afflicted with Rheumatism, Locomotor Ataxia in the Legs and Paralysis of the Throat.

It was in Prescott, Mich., the Patient was an Old Soldier and has Hundreds of Friends. The Case Reads Like a Miracle.

From the Lakeside Monitor, Au Sable, Mich.

The publisher of this paper having some business to transact at Prescott, Ogemaw Co., Michigan, Monday last, repaired to that hamlet. While there he chanced to learn of a remarkable recovery from an illness of thirty-four years standing, the fortunate person being Thomas F. Galvin. The writer hunted that gentleman up, introduced himself, and requested Mr. Galvin to give a brief history of his terrible disease and some history of himself. Mr. Galvin's trouble culminated three or four years since in three diseases—Rheumatism, affecting the general system; locomotor ataxia, affecting the legs, rendering him unable to direct his course in walking, and paralysis, rendering him unable to use lips, throat or palate.

In giving a history of his trouble, Mr. Galvin said:

"In 1861 I enlisted in the army and was made captain of Co. H., 40th Illinois Infantry. I was stationed at Paducah, Ky., in September of that year and while there caught cold and contracted rheumatism. I was in the hospital there three months; when I recovered sufficiently to report for duty, although far from well. Previous to this time I had never been sick a day in my life and weighed 195 pounds. I continued in the service during the war, although suffering all the time from rheumatism. At the close of the war, I was discharged and a few months afterwards granted a pension of $8 per month for my disabilities. I was never free from pain for thirty-three long years until late last fall or early in the winter. I continued to grow worse all the time during the entire period until last November. I was then in a pitiable condition. I had been stricken with paralysis and locomotor ataxia in addition to my rheumatism. For three years I was helpless. I could not talk because of paralysis, I could not walk because of the locomotor ataxia, and my hands, arms and legs were all out of shape, withered and drawn, from rheumatism. You see my knees now. Just as limber as yours. Last summer I could not move my knees, nor could I get them together within six inches. You see my fingers, straight and nearly recovered from their stiffness. At that time, if I attempted to walk I was liable to go backwards or sideways or fall down as I was to go forwards, because of the lack of power of locomotion. I prayed for years to die and be relieved of my sufferings.

"Had it not been that our Government saw fit to increase my pension from $8 to $17 per month and pay me $3,140 back pension, I should have suffered for the necessities of life.

"Before this time I had treated with the best medical men of Detroit, Cleveland, Milwaukee, Chicago and several other northern cities, but as I said, grew gradually worse until I would not have given $1 for my chances of life last November and, in fact, would rather have been dead than alive. I only weighed 132 pounds. You see me to-day. I weigh 175 and am free from pain entirely, am slowly but surely gaining strength. You see I get up stairs all right, and I come up these stairs a dozen times a day now. You would not discover that I was ever unable to speak. I shall go to work with my tools as a carpenter soon, so as to help me increase in strength. I was so long unable to take a step that I do not feel hardly safe on 'my pins' yet, although I have not fallen down in several months. I am learning the use of my legs, hands, arms and tongue again. I guess you will think I have recovered the use of the latter if I keep on, but I want to practice up again and make up for lost time and tell every one of my now happy lot.

"I want to say now that for ten years previous to last November, I had been able to perform but little labor, and was totally disabled for nearly three years. I was in an awful shape. Mr. Anthony Stone's folks here, with whom I boarded, will tell you that they did not expect to find me alive any morning when they came to wake me, for over two years. But here I am yet, and can walk six or seven miles any pleasant day without discomfort. My appetite is good and I enjoy sleep. If I was taken as bad as ever again to-morrow, I have enjoyed life so well for seven months, that it has a thousand times paid me for the trouble and expense I have been to get relief.

"You ask me how I got relief? Well I had not forgotten that part of it by a good deal. But I am so happy when thinking and talking about my recovery, that I can not get in everything at once. No one but myself can appreciate my condition before last November, and now I want to say to any one who may be affected with either rheumatism, locomotor ataxia or paralysis, that if they will write me, I will make affidavit as to the facts that I have stated and to what I owe my recovery.

"As I stated, last November I was at my worst, could neither eat, sleep, walk, talk, or use my hands or feet in any way. I read in some newspaper of some one who had been similarly affected as I was. This person had sought cure everywhere for years and given up to die, when he commenced taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and was cured. I did not have any faith in them, but was prevailed upon to buy a half dozen boxes for $2.50. I commenced taking them the first of November, and in thirty days by following directions closely, I could see a marked improvement in my condition.

"Well, I kept right on following instructions to the letter. I bought another half dozen boxes and then a third, of which I have left nearly two boxes. It has cost me $7.50 and I am going to make it an even $8 before I stop. Not that I fear that I am not cured, for I never felt better every way in my life. But I don't propose to take any chances on quitting too soon.

"Am I sure that Pink Pills cured me? Why should I not be? Did I not suffer the agonies of hell for years without relief? Then I took Pink Pills and came out in the shape I am, as you see me to-day and then ask me if I am sure? Is a man sure he is going to die some time? I am just as sure Pink Pills cured me as you are sure that you are going to a lodge to some time. Sure Pink Pills cured me? Well, I am happy to remark, yes! A thousand times yes?

"I know positively that I was cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I believe firmly that it is the most wonderful remedy in existence to-day, and every fact I have presented to you is known to my neighbors as well as to myself and they will certify to the truth of my remarkable cure."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after-effect of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, that tired feeling resulting from nervous prostration, all diseases resulting from vitiated humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature.

These pills are manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., and are sold only in boxes bearing the firm's trade-mark and wrapper at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and are never sold in bulk. They may be had of all druggists.

RANK

Origin of Gentleman and the Present Use of the Term.

Professional Gentlemen Who Have No Standing in Our Society.

How the British Table of Precedence Was Established By Statute.

The British table of precedence has been determined partly by statute, partly by the king's patent and partly by the ancient usage of the kingdom. Much more than half of it, says the New York Sun, relates to the rank, after the sovereigns, of the different members of the royal family, of the great officers of state and church, and of the different orders of the nobility, that of their wives, their sons and daughters, and of their sons-in-law and daughters-in-law. Next after the nobility come the knights of various degrees, and then the colonels. Why, particularly, the colonels? Well, says an eminent authority, because the colonel is exercising command—the pillar of the army; in fact, however, the commanding officer of a regiment. Following upon the heels of colonels come sergeants and doctors of the law; then the gentlemen, followed by yeomen, tradesmen, artificers and laborers.

Selden, in his "Manual of Dignities" enumerates about 150 royalties, officers of state and church, nobles, and so on, in the social and political order of Great Britain, before he reaches the gentlemen, of which rank he alleges, however, that every nobleman and every public officer, whether in the army, the navy, or the civil service, is one. This goes upon the theory, it is to be presumed, that the greater includes the lesser title, as it always does in the peerage.

Dodd makes a very curious and interesting statement in his Manual; curious and interesting, at any rate, to the average American, as indicating that a class of persons who in the United States are regarded as first in the social order hold a very vague and subordinate place in the social life of Great Britain. "Professional gentlemen," says Dod—naming solicitors, attorneys and counselors-at-law, medical practitioners, artists, literary men, merchants, master manufacturers, college professors and the like—"are considered to have some station in society, although the law takes no cognizance of their rank."

CAESAR'S CHOICE.

Caesar said that he would rather be first man in a village in the Alps than second man in Rome—a characteristic observation, to which the average sensible Briton subscribes who belongs among the commoners; he would rather be in the front of his order than at the tail of the aristocracy.

The word "gentleman" in its original and strict sense meant a person of noble extraction, or a person created a gentleman by the sovereign, whose descendants took his rank by inheritance; the king's patent in the case of the creation of a "gentleman" being accompanied with no title of honor, but with a coat of arms merely. According to the fine old ballad of "Adam Bell and Clym of the Clough" the queen as well as the king could make a gentleman and also a gentlewoman, as the queen did of "Willyam of Clondesle" and his wife; investing "Willyam" with an income of 1 pence a day to support his dignity. According to Clark and Wormull in their "Introduction to Heraldry" "the eldest son of a viscount had no title or peerage, nor were his daughters ladies, but the eldest son and daughter of the first viscount of Great Britain and Ireland are said to have been the first gentleman and gentlewoman in the kingdom," which, however, must be a mistake, for the first viscount in Great Britain was Beaumont, created such by Henry VI about 1440; although "viscount" was already an old title in continental countries. As a fact, the British "gentleman" dates back to Saxon times. For, says Freeman, the historian, "as early as the eleventh century the order of gentleman, as a separate class, seems to have been forming as something new, and by the time of the conquest the distinction appears to have been fully established."

SAXON GENTLEMEN.

And it is very well known that the Saxon "gentleman" enjoyed certain privileges—that of decapitation, for example, instead of being hanged in case of a capital crime, as would have been the punishment of peasants or tradesmen for the same crime, and they were allowed to fight a duel or combat in case of insult or injury by members of their own order, but could not fight with peasants or tradesmen. The Saxon gentleman was, in brief, practically the French gentleman, with privileges substantially the same and subject to like restrictions.

No one was admitted to the degree, either in Saxon or latter times, who lived by any trade of buying or selling, except merchants beyond the seas and those owning lands tilled by themselves; in the latter case, of whatsoever estate they might be, although they go to plow and common labor for their maintenance, yet were they gentlemen." It was different in the case of the noble, for he lost his dignity if he had not fortune to sustain it; and he could pursue no manual occupation for his maintenance. But there was one description of gentlemen whose rank was dependent upon their means of livelihood, who were neither merchants nor in the practice of husbandry. These were the incumbents of certain offices. They were gentlemen solely because of their incumbency. When they lost their offices they ceased to be gentlemen.

DIFFERENT CLASSES.

In the very nature of the institution, however, different classes of gentlemen were developed, and very early in its history they were already "gentlemen of blood" or ancestry—descendants of four, some say of five, generations of gentlemen on both the father's and the mother's side. These were the flower of the order, and the more ancestors one could boast the finer gentleman he was of course. There was another class of gentlemen of very distinguished description. These were the "gentlemen" who had been in the crusades, and had slain each his Saracen; some of them had slain more than one. It is not difficult to imagine that in the wide-prevailing and absorbing religious enthusiasm of the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, he who had destroyed an enemy of Christ stood high with both king and people, and was a gentleman, not only by virtue of the king's investiture, but by the approval of the church. But this kind of gentleman was not made after the year 1400.

It was, of course, possible, to divide the order into many different classes by the exercise of a little subtlety, as was done in the early period of the institution, the author of the "Rise of the Gentry," quoted in 1586, enumerating, for instance, no less than nine different descriptions of gentlemen. The author says also that "Christ was a gentleman on His mother's halve, and bare cotarmure of aunseturie."

The existing degrees are four, and familiar enough. "Gentlemen by blood," those whose gentility is derived from their ancestors: "gentlemen of coat armor," who are not gentlemen by blood. These are created by grants of coats-of-arms from the heralds, and those issued in the third generation are gentlemen by blood: "gentlemen" created by conferring knighthood upon yeomen, and "gentlemen" created by conferring a spiritual dignity upon a yeoman.

A SOVEREIGN'S PRIVILEGE.

It would appear then that, as already observed in the strict sense of the word gentleman describes a social and legal state, which includes royalty, the nobility, the knighthage, the officers of the army, of the navy, and of the civil service, and the four classes of persons just above designated.

Formerly the sovereign could create a gentleman, but for centuries even the kings-at-arms have made no official gentlemen of England, except as certain persons have become such by necessary inclusion within some degree of nobility, knighthood or office, conferred by the sovereign. So long as the order was within the royal Keeping its membership was extremely restricted, numerically, at least, no one was made a gentleman except for some sufficient justifying reason, with the consequence that the English gentleman was a definite and easily ascertained person, like his French brother. When the herald king-at-arms was invested with the right to make gentlemen the granting of coats-of-arms became a mere matter of business. "In our days," says Nicholas Bailey, writing now nearly two centuries ago, "all are accounted gentlemen that have moneys; and if he has no coat-of-arms the king-at-arms can sell him one.

And Hudibras:

An herald
Can make a gentleman rearce a year old
To be descended of a race
Of ancient kings—in very short space.

And also:

And for a piece of coin
Twist any name into line.

In conclusion, the gentleman—the creation of the King and by blood—held not only a special political and social relation, but was supposed to possess also certain personal virtues of a very high kind. He was generous, polite, brave, chivalric, endowed with the learning of the time, and altogether an admirable person. This was true of a proportion of gentlemen; it was far from being true of all. But it was not in the least surprising; indeed, it was the most natural thing in the world that, as the "gentlemen" of the heralds increased in numbers, and not all of them such in the sense of the personal virtues, their social and political importance should diminish, until, as in fact, the herald's gentlemen have for more than a century been of no special importance. The public long since took the matter in hand, in effect dismissing the heralds and creating their own gentlemen after their own kind. While an ancient and honorable ancestry will always be a matter of just solicitude and pride, there are many gentlemen in both England and America, and, indeed, there are some peers in England who would be very glad if they could have a satisfactory account of their grandfathers, but none the less honored or the less gentlemen because they cannot.

BOOKS AND MAGAZINES.

Zola's new volume, "Rome," has just been published by Macmillan & Co. The book will be of interest to every student of religious systems as giving an exceedingly minute account of the inner life of the heart of the Roman Catholic church—the papal court. Its dignitaries, their ideals and ambitions are clearly pictured and religious questions of the day are fully discussed. But it is far more than a merely "religious novel;" it is a strong story of keen rivalries, sure to satisfy those who care more for human interest than the discussion of theories. Two cardinals of the old and of the new schools are eager for the tiara soon to slip from the head of Leo XIII. Young men show themselves either as the degenerate sons of old families, or as the best hopes of young Italy. There is a soldier from Garibaldi's army, a scheming deputy, and, among the other women in the story, two heroines, one at least young, both very beautiful.

Mrs. Frank Leslie understands the foibles of society and the hypocrisies of sex, if her book published by F. Tennyson Neely, of New York, is to be believed. "Are Men Gay Deceivers?" is the question asked and answered in thirty-two sketches that bring out very clearly the contrasts of hey-day life. Among these trenchant strokes of her pen are to be found her relations on the following pertinent subjects: "Favorites of Men," "Men Women Admire," "May a Woman Propose," "Did Columbus Discover America," "Art in Kissing," "The Whims of Women," and "Angels Have Blond Hair But There Are Many Brunettes." If any of these subjects seem frivolous or irrelevant, the reader will soon discover his error. Mrs. Leslie writes with the black ink of righteous indignation and the tingling nerve of generous concern for the moral enlightenment of society. Seldom does a book come from the hands of one so fortified as an authority on the subject of which she writes. Her business and social eminence establishes her as a high-priestess of the ways of the world, and any serious discussion by her of the lights and shades of social conduct is a contribution of lasting value to didactic literature. It is a book of more than 300 pages, published at 25 cents.

James Allen Lane's story, which ran through the Cosmopolitan at the beginning of the year under the title "Butterflies: A Tale of Nature," will be issued this month by Macmillan & Co. The title has been changed to "Summer in Arcady," and when it appears in book form it will embody a number of slight changes. More important still, it will contain a grave preface. Many readers of the story in its serial form were strongly exercised about its main drift; but whatever Mr. Allen may write we have no doubt about its integrity. His art will always be on the side of right against wrong, and it will be what we know he wishes all his work to be, spiritually invigorating and uplifting.

To say that it contains information of nearly universal interest, and that is, practically, obtainable by most readers nowhere else, is the simple truth concerning "Alden's Living Topics Cyclopedia." The second volume, extending from Boy, to Con., contains the latest facts concerning the nations, Brazil, British empire, Bulgaria, Cape Colony, Chili, Chinese empire, and others, and concerning three states, California, Colorado and Connecticut, also concerning six large cities, Brooklyn, Buffalo, Charleston, Chicago, Cincinnati and Cleveland. The facts are commonly from one year to five years later than can be found in any of the leading cyclopedias, and commonly a year later than the 1896 almanacs and annuals. We name only leading titles; besides there are hundreds of others, all of them "living" topics. One wonders how busy seekers after knowledge have got along without such an up-to-date cyclopedia. The whole series of six handy volumes is to be completed during the year, and at the surprisingly low cost of $1.50 to $2 for the set, with liberal discounts for advance orders. Specimen pages may be had free by addressing the publisher, John B. Alden, 10 and 12 Vandewater street, New York.

Harper & Bros. have recently published the following books: "Extraordinary Cases," by Henry Lauren Clinton; "Colin Kidnaps For Fort Weather," by Ysaguirre and Mr. Merriman's "The Cavaliers," a novel, by S. R. Keightley, which deals with stirring events in Cromwell's time; and "Mark Heffron," a novel by Alice Ward Bailey. The last named work is a remarkably clever study of American life and manners, and withal an interesting story. The satire is sharp without being ill-natured and whatever may be the faults of the book, dullness is not one of them. The types, the follies, the situations, are all familiar enough, but the author has succeeded in marshaling them into a new and entertaining order.

Outing for May opens with a complete story, "The Search for Mrs. Donbeigh," cleverly told by Jerome L. Provost. A second complete story, "Llano Estacado," by J. F. Duncan, is a thrilling account of an Indian skirmish on the Staked Plains. Other notable features are: "The Truth of a Trouting," by Ed W. Sandys; "Canoeing on the St. John," by Rev. W. C. Gaynor; "Camp Cookery," "Bass Fishing," "Racing Sandbaggers," "Yachting on Frisco Bay," and "Handicap Reform in Lawn Tennis," by J. P. Paret. The number is strong throughout and carries many fine illustrations.

Beautiful paintings, magnificent stationary and bronzes, all of them reproduced in the best style of modern photographic art, are the distinguishing feature of the Monthly Illustrator and Home and Country, New York, for May. Its pages are teeming with attractive illustrations. And many of them are tributes to the genius and ability of American artists. Lovers of the old school as well as the new, and those who care for neither school yet are judges of and admire excellence in art—the professional as well as the amateur—the younger children and those of older growth—the poor as well as the rich—will every one find something to appreciate, to glory over, in this collection. As a family art magazine, the Monthly Illustrator and Home and Country has many attractions for the common people as well as for the 400. And it has won success by deserving it. Issued by the Monthly Illustrator Publishing company, 66-68 Center street, New York. Subscription, $2 a year.

In the May issue of Table Talk, that invaluable little magazine for housekeepers, one finds much of interest that is seasonable in the culinary line, as well as many hints through which the home-maker wants to stick the proverbial pin. The inquiry department which is filled with questions direct from the housekeeper, contains many tested recipes in the replies, for plain, simple and choice dishes; the "New Bill of Fare" is filled with woman's interests, while "A Lunch With Longfellow" is described by Howard Paul. "Some Features in Jewish Cookery," by Miss Cornelia C. Bedford; "How to Manage a Husband," by Mrs. Burton Kingsland; "Books of Interest to the Housekeeper," by L. Hastings West. The publishers of this magazine offer any of our readers a sample copy, if they will send their address to Table Talk Publishing company, Philadelphia, Pa.

An able and suggestive symposium under the title of "The Engineer in Naval Warfare" is presented as the opening feature of the May number of the North American Review, the contributors to it being such eminent authorities as Commodore George W. Melville, engineer-in-chief of the United States navy; W. S. Aldrich, professor of mechanical engineering in the University of West Virginia; Ira N. Hollis, professor of engineering in Harvard university; Gardiner C. Sims, of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, and George Uhler, president of the Marine Engineers' Benevolent association. The noted French astronomer, Camille Flammarion, writes most interestingly of "Mars and Its Inhabitants," and in "Men Who Might Have Been Presidents," Joseph M. Rogers, of the Philadelphia Inquirer throws some important light on the presidential elections of the past, and there are articles by other distinguished writers.

Those interested in political science—and what intelligent man is not to some extent?—will find much suggestive reading in Appleton's Popular Science Monthly for May. "The Development of the Monetary Problem" is traced by Logan G. McPherson, who shows that the use of precious metals as money is only a refined form of barter, and is being displaced among the most advanced peoples by the use of paper representatives of value. Hon. David A. Wells continues his review of "The Place of Taxation in Literature and History," describing some very curious and oppressive taxes imposed in France before the revolution, and a system nearly as burdensome now existing in Mexico. Certain "Pending Problems for Wage-Earners" are discussed by A. E. Outerbridge, Jr., who warns working people to beware of socialism and other errors in seeking advancement.

With the May number the Cambridge Magazine begins its second volume in enlarged and more attractive form, with new cover design. In spite of this enlargement, the price (5 cents a copy or 50 cents a year) remains unchanged. This magazine, considering its fine literary quality, its size and attractive form, is certainly a marvel of cheapness. President Eliot, of Harvard university, writes an important article on "Beginning in a Republic;" Mrs. Julia Ward Howe contributes a sketch of her husband, Dr. Samuel G. Howe, the well-known philanthropist. Other articles are: "My Experiences as a Convict," by an ex-convict; "Where Woman Enjoys Equal Rights With Man," by Mrs. M. D. Frazer; "Difficulties of Working People," by a workingman, etc., etc. "The Deputy's Daughter," a serial story translated for the first time from the French of Georges Ohnet, is begun in this issue. There are several attractive illustrations.

The second issue of that extremely bright and clever monthly, Varieties, eclipses not only the previous number, but is far and away the best illustrated monthly published. From cover to cover it is full of readable stories of vital interest, and upon every page are illustrations from the pens and brushes of the best artists of the day.

One of the most interesting characters in Parisian society is the Prince de Sagan, who recently fought a duel with a dramatic author who had been too free with his personalities. The prince is the leader of elegant society in the French capital, and many entertaining anecdotes are told of his exploits. The duel is discussed in a Paris letter in the Argonaut of May 18, and a graphic picture of the prince is presented.

Every Month for May is out, and the announcement of the contents bills it "Better than the best." This is true of it in almost every feature, and its hid for popular success is an admitted fact if the improvement in each succeeding number counts for anything. The feature of the number is a waltz arrangement of Paul Dresser's "Just Tell Them That You Saw Me," undoubtedly the most popular song of the present day.

Donahoe's for May is, as usual, bright, timely, varied, and entertaining, and has more than its ordinary amount of artistic illustration. The leading article is a snappy discussion of the issues of the approaching presidential campaign from the pen of ex-Congressman W. J. Bryan, of Nebraska, the brilliant, young orator whose eloquence won him national fame during his congressional career. The character and abilities of Archbishop Ryan, of Philadelphia, are made the subject of appreciative analysis by Rev. John Talbot Smith. Several examples are given of this gifted prelate's brilliant wit, and oratory, and his position on the prominent Catholic questions of the day is set forth. Bernard Morgan contributes a carefully studied paper on "The Spirit of Frederick Leighton," illustrating his text with many pictures by this great painter lately deceased.

The New Bohemian for May is the first number of that magazine issued by the new management. It comes with a new dress and new cover design, and shows a marked improvement throughout. It opens with a strong and forceful story by Cora Stuart Wheeler, entitled "Margaret Hannaford, M. C." This is a tale of the future, the scenes and incidents being laid in the twentieth century. Under the caption of "Art's Truth Told in Three Tongues," Maude Andrews gives a charming critique of Sarah Bernhardt, Ellen Terry and Eleonora Duse, written in her most exquisite style. "The Oil Industry of America," by Arthur J. Burdick, is an interesting and instructive article, being well written and splendidly illustrated. George M. Baxter writes, in a delightful and sympathetic vein, of "Bohemia—and Its People."

DARING

Wonderful Boat Designed to Gather Up Treasures From Ocean Depths.

Invention, Which if Successful, Will Make Its Owner a Croesus.

Travels on Wheels Miles Below the Surface of the Sea.

A Baltimore genius has invented a boat which he says will wander along the bottom of the ocean and pick up the treasures which have accumulated there since the world began, says the Louisville Times.

Such a boat as this opens up vistas of wealth to which the riches of Solomon, Croesus, Barney Barnato, Vanderbilt, the Rothschilds, the late Jay Gould and Hetty Green pale into nothing in comparison. No statistician has ever been bold enough to compute the wealth which the ocean has engulfed. The dictionary does not possess a word magnificent enough to express this wealth if it is needless to say, if this boat makes a painstaking search of the bottom of the ocean, its owners will, in a short time, be rich enough to purchase a generous slice of the earth.

The inventor of the boat is Simon Lake, who in earlier life was a fisherman on the South Jersey coast. From infancy he has been familiar with the ways of the turbulent ocean, and, moreover, is a mechanical genius. In early life he exhausted the wonders of the surface of the sea and soon acquired a thirst for a knowledge of what went on underneath.

Mr. Lake is not yet 37 years old, but for fourteen years he has been trying to build a submarine boat. He was not content to limit his ambition to the building of a boat which would dart beneath the waves and slam a torpedo into the hull of a warship. Although the latter kind of a craft has puzzled the brains of naval architects for generations, it was too easy for the South Jerseyman to bother with. He wanted a boat that would go directly to the bottom of the ocean and travel on wheels along the ground there, up hill and down dale.

Such a boat is now being built in the shipyard of a wealthy Baltimore concern; one of the owners of which has taken an active interest in the undertaking

WHEEL STOPPED.

And Many Londoners Roosted Very High.

London, May 22.—As a curious coincidence, while the members of the house were practically confined in that so-called most comfortable of all clubs, a number of people, men, women and children, were undergoing somewhat similar experiences at Earl's court. Quite a party had entered the great wheel there known as the "gigantic wheel and recreation towers." This structure is an imitation of the famous Ferris wheel of the Chicago World's fair, but it is larger, the highest point of the London wheel being 300 feet from the ground, while that of the Ferris wheel was only 264 feet high. Then, again, the London wheel carries forty large cars, while the Chicago wheel had only thirty-six.

All the cars of the Chicago wheel were alike, but ten of the cars of the London wheel are upholstered and luxuriously furnished for the use of first-class passengers. Five of these are reserved for smokers and five for non-smokers; the remaining thirty cars carry second-class passengers, the full capacity of the wheel being 1200 people. On top of the two towers on which the wheel revolves are large refreshment saloons.

Shortly before 8:15 p. m. yesterday the wheel started with quite a number of people on board, and everything went merrily until 8:20, when the structure ceased revolving. At first little or no attention was paid to the matter, but as time passed and the wheel would not budge, those who were able to do so left the cars and steps were taken to rescue those who were imprisoned higher up. Ladders were procured and later fire escapes were used. But in spite of all these efforts, quite a number of people were compelled to remain aloft. Every means was resorted to to feed them and make them comfortable for the night.

They eventually went to sleep, but awoke this morning early and in a very hungry condition. By means of ropes, cans of coffee and baskets of bread and other provisions were hauled up to them, and the work of trying to revolve the wheel was resumed. But it was not until noon today that the prisoners were finally released, amid much cheering from crowds who had assembled to witness the rescue.

WILL MEET IN CLEVELAND.

Columbus, Ohio, May 22.—M. A. Bridge, grand chancellor of the Knights of Pythias, of Ohio, being shown the message from Milwaukee says the supreme lodge will meet in Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 24 to 31, and at the same time and place the national encampment of uniform rank will occur. There will not be an encampment at Columbus.

UNDERGROUND RAILWAY.

New York, May 22.—The appellate division of the supreme court today denied a motion to confirm the report of the special commission on rapid transit appointed by the supreme court. This defeats the underground railway plan adopted by the commission.

DON'T NEGLECT

A COMMON CASE OF PILES.

It May Lead to Serious Results.

When people generally understand that all such fatal diseases as fistula, ulcer of the rectum, fissure, etc., almost invariably begin in a simple case of piles, they will learn the wisdom of taking prompt treatment for the first appearance of troubles in this quarter. The Pyramid Pile Cure will certainly cure every form of bleeding piles, itching, bleeding protruding or blind piles, and hundreds of lives have been saved by using this cheap but effective remedy right at the start, because at such a time a single package will affect a cure, while in the old chronic, deep-seated cases, several packages are sometimes necessary before a lasting cure is effected.

Physicians are using the Pyramid Pile Cure in preference to surgical operations and with uniform success. The remedy is prepared by the Pyramid Drug company of Albion, Mich., and for sale by all druggists everywhere at 50 cents and $1 per package.

CROOKED BROKERS EXPELLED.

Denver, May 22.—The board of directors of the Colorado mining stock exchange have expelled three brokers, Lorenzo Romans, H. L. Prentice and W. W. Hoag, who are accused of having conspired to defraud the members of the exchange by giving a fictitious value to the Gregory gold stock. The losses of other members through the deal are estimated at $9000.

STOLE A STRADIVARIUS.

New York, May 22.—Victor S. Fletcher who was convicted for having in his possession a stolen Stradivarius violin, was today sentenced to one year in the penitentiary. It was stated by Fletcher's counsel that the case would be appealed. Fletcher was originally arrested for having stolen a Stradivarius belonging to the late Prof. Mott. It was admitted, however, by the prosecution during the trial that the violin was not the Mott instrument.

A. L. Wooster, a prominent citizen of Osseo, Mich., after suffering excruciatingly from piles for twenty years, was cured in a short time by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, an absolute cure for all skin diseases. More of this preparation is used than all others combined. S. F. Boyce.

They will also meet Pennsylvania line trains at Philadelphia Broad street passenger station and assist passengers who may desire their aid; take charge of rolling chairs when needed; meet carriages and make themselves generally useful to passengers. AMONG THE SPORTS.

With the going out of May the Y. M. C. A. loses its physical director, A. S. Ames, who has been the occupant of that position for two years. The termination of his contract, which terminates May of his contract, which takes place May private life," which course he has determined upon for good reasons of his own. He has made a thoroughly competent director, and his departure will be viewed with sincere regret, not only by the managers of the association, but with the boys who have been associated with him in his gymnasium work and elsewhere. As a director his methods have been careful, systematic and judicious, and they have resulted in the advancement of the association and gymnasium immeasurably.

He has always been a favorite with all who came in contact with him, and his friends wish him success in his future life. He will return to the grain business with his father in the firm of C. C. Ames & Co.

No arrangements have ben made for a successor for Mr. Ames.

To throw a blaze about the passing of the physical director, the boys of the gymnasium have decided to give an entertainment at the Y. M. C. A. building, Friday evening, May 29, that will eclipse all previous attempts of the kind. All the old men, who have achieved athletic fame from time to time during their careers in the gymnasium will be back, and they will show their skill and swell the entertainment array above any previous attempts. Among the old hands who will take part are Syd McPhail, Grochau and other familiar names.

Women are especially invited, because there is more or less talk in the air of organizing a women's class in the gymnasium, with a view to making the ladies' auxiliary of the association a closer and more active body. Miss Pitman, late of St. Paul, will swing the Indian clubs in costume, and she will form a very attractive part of the program. The old things will give exhibitions of ground and lofty tumbling and advanced athletic work, and there will be a vocal, instrumental and orchestral program as well.

Baseball is upon us with all its power, not only in professional circles, but especially in local amateur and semi-professional circles. The Duluth club is fairly launched, and there are a number of other clubs forming. The Herald will be pleased to publish all the names and news from all the mines that may be formed if they are brought in to the sporting reporter before Friday afternoon.

Dry weather provided, Duluth and the Hamm's, of St. Paul, will play ball at the West End park this afternoon and tomorrow, to make up for the two games which wet weather and wet grounds prevented last Saturday and Sunday. The batting order and positions will be practically as announced last week.

The boys of the high school have the baseball fever to a great extent, and the result will probably be a school league before long composed of nines from the different classes. All the nines are now formed, except the senior nine, and Capt. Robert Goodmanson will have his club ready soon. Owing to the field day preparations and the unfavorable weather, there have been no games lately, but after field day—which is today, by the way—there will be more activity. There will be a summer long struggle for supremacy between the four nines, and altogether the season promises to be lively.

There have been three games already, which leave the juniors first, the freshmen second, and the sophomores third. Four weeks ago the freshmen defeated the sophomores 23 to 21 by a scratch, three weeks ago the juniors defeated the freshmen 21 to 6, and two weeks ago the juniors defeated the sophomores 17 to 13.

In addition to the four class nines, there will also be a nine from the school, picked from the best men. This has yet to be formed. The nines already formed are as follows:

Today is the day of the high school field day, and the boys have been hoping for weeks that arrangement had been made for good weather, for that is all that is necessary to make it a success. Last year, it will be remembered, there was an unpleasant mixture of snow, wind and rain. The prize lists are complete, and the event promised to be highly interesting and successful. An exciting argument was held Monday on the question of postponement, but it was voted not to postpone.

What has grown to be the greatest stake race in this country, the Brooklyn handicap, will be a race worth seeing this year, unless all the horse sharps are decidedly at fault.

It has always been the biggest betting event of the year, due primarily to the fact that heretofore it was run on the opening day of the racing season in the East. This year it will be different.

The race will not be run until Thursday, June 4, after two meetings have been held. While the edge of the betting appetite will have been lost by that time among the regulars, the public will have much cash to spare, and that is everything. For, were it not for the great and good public the lot of the regular race bettor would be a very sad one, and his earnings would be smaller than those a cheap actor in summer time.

Thousands of men only go to see a horse race once a year, and that race is the Brooklyn. If they happen to win they go to the Suburban, and the very few who win again take in the Futurity, but the large majority are content with the single annual opportunity which the Brooklyn handicap gives for their sporting blood to flow. The public has seldom quit a winner on the Brooklyn. It backs the favorite with $5, $10 and $20 notes, and usually the favorite loses. If he won three-fourths of the bookmakers would be bankrupt for the rest of the season.

Henry of Navarre will carry the money of the public on June 4 next. No grander horse ever faced a starter, and by all the set rules it is but natural that he should be the favorite. For the post of honor in the betting ring, his old-time adversary, Clifford, will push him closely.

The others are strung up to the hundreds in the betting, as it stands today, but among those others is very probably the winner of the 1896 handicap.

There are many things which will make it very improbable that Henry of Navarre will win the race, although he will be the best horse in the contest. In the first place he will be the favorite, and will carry tons of money.

Of course the bookmakers will not want him to win, but their wishes will not count for anything with the owner, as August Belmont is not racing for the money, but for glory. John Hyland, the trainer of the great son of Knight of Ellersile, is as honest as any man who ever walked, and Henry Griffin, the boy who will ride him, has never been smirched by any of the nasty stories which constantly float about the turf.

Belmont, Navarre, Griffin and Hyland form a four-fold combination which any man can safely bet his money on and know that every ounce of endeavor in the men and the horse will be given to land him a winner at the end of the one and a quarter miles. But there will be other jockeys in the race besides Griffin, and other trainers to give advice besides Hyland, and other owners who care nothing for the glory of the turf, but who do care everything for the fatness of their pocketbooks, and there are bookmakers who will pick out these susceptible owners, trainers and jockeys and do everything in their power to see that neither Navarre nor Clifford will win the great race.

There is one thing in Navarre's favor, and that is that Griffin is a very cool-headed boy. He has complete control of his mount every instant in the race, and he has wide experience. Unlike most jockeys, he does not dissipate in any way, and his nerves are as steady as a rock.

Moreover, he has not begun to take on weight yet, and can avoid the weakening effects of reducing by forced means.

For days before the Brooklyn many of the jockeys will practically live in Turkish bath houses, and when the saddling bell rings to warn them to get ready, they will be so weak that the trainers will have to help them into the saddle.

Heretofore at this season of the year it has been possible to judge very accurately how the horses will be rated in the betting ring, but owing to the state anti-gambling laws few bookmakers are hardy enough to court disaster by making a future book on the race. Very little betting has been done so far, and this has been placed in cities where bookmakers can take and give odds without risk. The best odds quoted now are as follows, and they show how the horses will rank at the post:

	Straight.	Place.
Henry of Navarre	3	1
Clifford	5	2
Sir Walter	10	4
Nankl Pooh	10	4
Keenan	15	6
Halma	12	5
Counter Tenor	15	6
Lazzarone	20	8
Hornpipe	25	10
Dardan	20	8

Against the others the odds range as follows: Belmar, 20 and 8; Dr. Rice, 30 and 10; Handspring, 40 and 12; Senator Grady, 30 and 10; Flora Thornton, 100 and 40.

If Navarre keeps well and fit 7 to 5 will be a good price against him at post time, and 2 to 1 will be fair odds on Clifford's chances. There will be more 100 to 1 shots on the day of the race than at the present time, as the force of the public's money on the favorites will be heavily felt.

Hornpipe, last year's winner, has been going well at Brighton Beach under the astute management of the wizard, Billy Lakeland. Keenan, who is also owned by Mr. Belmont, has developed into a wonderful horse, and there are some who think that he can even dispose of his stable companion. Henry of Navarre. Lazzarone, the great big son of Spinaway, has been looked at with doubt by the sharps ever since he bowed slightly last June, but Billy Donohue has brought him around by putting charges on the horse's legs in the English fashion, and for the past month has been working in first-class form.

Sir Walter, nicknamed the Gallant, is still in fighting trim, notwithstanding the terrific lacking he has had. This little horse will go down to turf posterity as the gamest racer on four legs. There will be many sentimental bets placed on him if he faces the starter, for he has friends by the score, and he has never yet failed to make a good showing, no matter what the company, the weight or the going.

Something over two weeks ago Jim Corbett volunteered to test the strength of his blows against a man accoutered in a recently invented armor for boxers. Amateur Boxer (protected by patent No. 545,086, issued July 23, 1895, to Joseph Donovan, of Chicago,) Boyd Frazier, of Chicago, pulled on the device for deadening knock-out raps, while Corbett thrashed into him for a long round of about five minutes without getting him groggy, and as the man in the armor is only a featherweight, the test proved the thing more than equal to what it was intended to be. Heavyweight and featherweight are not in the habit of milling, so if the little man had been put out it would not have proved the impracticability of the arrangement as between men of the same weight class, and it is safe to say that men so matched, or even where one is considerably the heavier and stronger, can fight to a finish without a knock-out or the shedding of blood. It would be a matter altogether of activity, endurance and boxing science, with punishment left out, but not the hard-hitting part. It is more practicable to armor for boxing than for football playing, because in the latter the entire body has to be protected from the attacks of feet as well as fists, with often several opponents against one, while in boxing there is hitting above the belt only and with padded hands.

In the padded jacket and hood, immediately over the various places a man might get a knock-out if the armor was not there, electric contact points are embedded; fine wires, also embedded, lead away to a register and sharp-clicking bell, which are pocketed on the back of the boxer. When a blow is driven in with sufficient force the electric points, which are held apart by coils of rubber or other means, are compressed and form a circuit, registering 1 and clicking the bell on the sparrer's back. After the bout is finished each contestant has a record of the number of stiff blows he has received marked on the register—that is, such blows as would be liable to stun him or put him out, if he did not have on the armor. Draws and wrangles as to the winner can be counted out; the cleaner and harder hitter, and the man with the better judgment in picking out vulnerable points for attack, must have a record of his superiority on the other's back.

The Gordon-Bennett cup, which is held by the Ailsa, will be sailed for at Cowes in August, the prince of Wales' Britannia and C. D. Rose's Satanita being probable starters. A. B. Walker, the owner of the Ailsa, has promised a cup, valued at 10,000 francs, for competition at next year's Mediterranean regattas. A similar offer is made by Whitaker Wright, who this year chartered the White Heather. Baron Edouard de Rothschild's five-rater Honeymoon has been sent from Nice to Paris, where she is to undergo some slight alterations for racing at the regattas on the north coast of France. It is her owner's intention to enter her for the matches on the Solent during the Cowes week. The yawl building at Southampton for Baron E. de Rothschild is ready for launching.

RULED WILD MEN.

Rajah Brooke, of Borneo, is an Englishman.

The third lecture of the course given under the auspices of the Geographical Society of California was delivered Tuesday evening in Golden Gate hall, to a large audience by Rounsevelle Wildman, late United States consul at Singapore. The subject was "Borneo and Rajah Brooke." Brooke was an Englishman, who wandered away to the northern shores of Borneo, and there became an absolute monarch. The tasks which he accomplished were those at which England and Holland hesitated. Brooke had to fight against pirates and the head hunters of the island, and also to overcome the sultan, who had set God almost in the same territory. And Brooke, by his indomitable energy, his great executive ability, strategic power and determination, became the victor. The head hunters of Northern Borneo were a pretty bad lot, for, as the lecturer explained with a grim vividness, none of the women would marry a man unless he had at least one human head to decorate their happy domicile. The pirates were equally as undesirable neighbors; they were intrepid to a last degree, sanguinary enough to be characters for dime novels, and relentless foes, who resented any encroachment upon their domain.

With this unpromising material, Brooke organized a kingdom that paid taxes, sustained an army and navy—such as they were—and maintained and respected its new government. Slavery in every form was overcome and in nine years the pirates, to a man, were made subjection. Brooke was the Washington of those unknown nations. He died in 1868, crowned with glories from the queen of England and various scientific societies and colleges. Mr. Wildman asked the rajah's son one day how all this had been accomplished; the natives made tractable and peaceful people—a race almost—while America, after more than 100 years, had only made paupers of the remnants of the red men. The answer was that Rajah Brooke had always lived up to his word strictly with those people, and they eventually came to know and admire him; after that it was easy.

Brooke, like his native country, however, enlarged his territory much as England is spreading out at present in Venezuela, and the old sultan of the neighboring kingdom is a pauper in a wretched bungalow. He used to complain that Brooke took 1500 miles of his territory. The lecture was illustrated with numerous photographs of Singapore and Borneo and the straits settlements, and with each picture the speaker had something instructive and entertaining to say. When the photograph of the magnificent palace of the English governor of Singapore was shown, Mr. Wildman said the palace was three times as large as the White House in Washington, quite as elegantly furnished, and decorated inside, and that the governor had an income almost as large as the president.

TO THE ST. LOUIS CONVENTION WITH THE CELEBRATED REPUBLICAN FLAMBEAU CLUB.

A special vestibuled train of sleeping cars, dining and baggage cars, will be run from Minneapolis and St. Paul to St. Louis, June 13, via the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway (the popular "Hedrick route"), to accommodate the Republican Flambeau club and their friends throughout the Northwest.

And whereas there is therefore claimed to be due and there is due upon said mortgage debt at this date, the sum of one thousand three hundred forty-eight and 50-100 dollars ($1348.50) as principal and interest and thirty-nine and 20-100 dollars ($39.20) insurance premium paid under the terms of said mortgage.

And whereas said mortgage contains a power of sale which has become operative by reason of the default above mentioned, and noaction or proceeding at law or otherwise, having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of said power of sale and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described as follows, to-wit: Lots numbered fourteen (14) and fifteen (15), in block twenty-eight (28), in London Addition to Duluth, according to the recorded plat thereof; which premises with the hereditaments and appurtenances thereto belonging, will be sold by the sheriff of said St. Louis County, Minnesota, at the front door of the court house, in the city of Duluth, in said county and state, on the 2nd day of June, A. DEATH IN THE STORM!

Iowa Visited by Another Cyclone and Forty Deaths so Far Reported.

Polk County, North of Des Moines, Was the Severest Sufferer From the Storm.

Minnesota, Illinois and the Dakotas Also Visited by Bad Storms.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 25.—Central Iowa and that section immediately north of this city, was visited by a series of storms during last night, which entailed a heavy loss of human life and the destruction of a vast amount of property and an entailment of an immense damage list in addition.

Owing to the utter prostration of every line of wire, the collection of news is attended with much difficulty, but the estimates of the loss of life place the number at about forty, though this may be increased or diminished by the later returns.

In Polk county the death list is reported as twenty-three. Bondurant, Santiago and the outlying settlements feeling the heaviest force of the storm, while in Valeria, Mingo and Ira, in Jasper county, there are a number of dead. The wind at Durango, in Dubuque county, was accompanied by a cloudburst and the first onslaught was felt at 2 o'clock this morning, and in less than an hour water in the creek raised to a height of twenty feet, sweeping everything before it. In the little railway station were Mrs. Clarke, the station agent, and three children, ages ranging from 2 to 8 years; Tom Griffin, a brakeman, 25 years' old; J. G. Griffin, car repairer; Peter Moss, John Dillion, F. Draller, wife and two children, and all went down the river with the building. This morning it was found a mile away and nine of the inmates were rescued alive.

Brakeman Griffin attempted to save one of the Clarke children, but both went down with the flood, their bodies being found in a driftwood pile three miles away. Another of the Clarke children was found dead in a tree a mile down the river. The body of the fourth was seen floating down the river nearly four miles from Durango, but the flood was so great no one could reach it. Mrs. Clarke is crazed with grief.

Half a mile of Great Western track, and half a mile of main track at Durango are washed away. Three hundred people are searching the valley for dead, as it is believed there are others besides those positively known.

No telephone or telegraphic communication can be established except with Bondurant, which reports four deaths there in the Bathe family, with five in the same family seriously injured. Three in the Phalen family are killed at Valeria. At Santiago the list is three killed in the Bollenbaugh family. Between Valeria and Ira the death list is nine. Mrs. Schell was killed at the former place.

Special trains have been started from Des Moines with physicians on board. The storm is said to have swept along the line of the Great Western from Bondurant to Marshalltown.

M'GREGOR FLOODED.

Lives Lost and Damage Done By Water.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 25.—A cloudburst at North McGregor, Iowa, resulted in great destruction of property and the probable loss of several lives. One body has been recovered from the debris. A mile of the tracks on the St. Paul road are under water and there is but one wire between Milwaukee and McGregor, the connections with the West being broken. A small telegraph office at McGregor was completely washed away.

Running through McGregor is a small stream bearing the historic name "Bloody Run." This empties into the Mississippi just below this town, but after the cloud-burst this morning the run was unable to carry its immense volume of water and buildings in the ravine along the stream were inundated and before people were aware or could remove their property their houses were swept away.

One body has been found and several persons are missing. Water and debris quickly filled the low lands, carrying away the telegraph office, covering the tracks between the main town and North McGregor where the round house is located, the area being about a mile in extent.

Out bound passenger trains which left Milwaukee last night for South Dakota points were unable to proceed farther than McGregor, and were ordered returned to Milwaukee, arriving here about two hours late. Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern road suffered a bad washout beyond LaCrosse, in Wisconsin, and at LaCrosse turned all its Chicago passengers over to the St. Paul road which was running all right today between Milwaukee and LaCrosse and as far as St. Paul north.

On a branch of the Mineral Point division of the St. Paul road several washouts occurred, delaying trains to and from Shullsburg. No other damage on its lines are reported.

It was stated at the office of Division Superintendent W. W. Collins, of the Prairie DuChien division, that the road west of McGregor would probably not be in condition for traffic before tomorrow. The cars in the yards there were badly used by the heavy debris floating about, but workmen are now engaged in digging them out and the water is subsiding.

IOWA CLOUDBURST,

Great Damage in a Big Stretch of Country.

Marshalltown, Iowa, May 25.—This section of the country has been deluged as it has not been before since June 1881. Tremendous cloudbursts have occurred between Lamorille and State Center, striking at Bear Grove on Lynn creek. This is a small stream which flows through the southern part of this city. The Chicago & Northwestern railroad crosses it three times between here and State Center.

Local officers of the company had warning of serious storm conditions, and were ordered to abandon all trains at 2 o'clock Sunday morning. They sent messages to give the alarm to the residents on the low lands to flee from their homes. An hour later the creek was a roaring river half a mile wide. Two bridges and nearly a mile of the Northwestern track and roadbed were swept away and another half mile of the track badly damaged.

Crops where the cloudburst occurred are ruined and stock drowned. All railroad yards in this city are submerged, but the damage is not so great as farther west. Residents along the creek bottom who failed to heed the warning were rescued in boats and several narrow escapes were made.

SEVERAL DROWNED.

Number of Lives Lost at Durango.

Dubuque, Iowa, May 25.—A terrific electric storm, accompanied by a deluge of rain, swept over this section at midnight, doing immense damage to railroad property. The rainfall was 2.08 inches, and it came as suddenly and in such volume as if a waterspout had burst upon the place. The Mississippi has risen one and three-tenths feet in the past eight hours, and it is still rising rapidly.

The greatest damage was to railroad property. Not a train has come to Dubuque from any direction since Sunday afternoon. It is reported that on the Illinois Central, between Dubuque and Sioux City, eighteen bridges were washed away, and another at Bellevue is gone. North the road is badly washed out. On the Great Western, east of Dubuque, one bridge is reported down, but on the same road west, the work of the storm was most disastrous. Lost bridges and washouts and wires down are reported all along.

At Durango, eight miles west, the flood that swept down the valley struck the station in which were Mrs. Clark, the agent, and her four children, besides Tom Griffin, a brakeman; Joe Griffin, car repairer, and several others. They were all on the depot platform when the water struck and swept it away. Details are very meager, but the report is that the four children were drowned, and Brakeman Griffin missing. Joe Griffin saved himself by grasping telegraph wires and going with the flood until he lodged in a tree. How the others were saved is not stated.

In Dubuque the damage to streets and sewers may reach $3000. A relief train has gone to Durango and will not return until late.

HAIL IN MINOT.

Crops Seriously Damaged and Cattle Killed.

Minot, N. D., May 25.—A severe hail storm over this section yesterday afternoon caused serious damage to crops. Many buildings are without windows. The full amount of the damage cannot be estimated, but it will reach several thousand dollars. The principal sufferer from the storm was the Great Northern line. The Leland hotel also suffered. Several plate glass fronts were broken. Cattle on the range suffered severely from the storm. In a number of instances cattle were pounded to death by the hail, the stones being of an enormous size and falling with terrific force. Crops in the Louse River valley are a total loss.

DAMAGE AT DEVIL'S LAKE.

Devil's Lake, N. D., May 25.—A terrific hail storm struck here last evening. Some hail stones measured five inches in circumference. Nearly all windows facing west and north were demolished. A heavy wind and rain accompanied the hail. The estimated damage in the city is $2000. Great damage must have been done to growing grain and stock. Rev. E. E. Luveland, pastor of St. Olaf's Lutheran church, and his wife, were caught in the storm and severely injured.

TABOR'S TORNADO.

Yankton, S. D., May 25.—A tornado of considerable proportions demolished a dozen frame buildings at the village of Tabor, sixteen miles west of Yankton, last night. The damage was due more to the bursting of a water cloud than from wind. No lives were lost.

MINNESOTA STORM.

Windows in a Passenger Train Broken By Hail.

St. Paul, May 25.—A Springfield, Minn., special to the Dispatch says: A short but severe hail and rain storm struck through this section at about 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The path of the storm was about three miles wide, and indications point toward a much more severe storm north of here. The eastbound passenger train passed through here just at the time, and all the windows on the exposed side were broken.

TRACK WASHED AWAY.

St. Paul, May 25.—A Cherokee, Iowa, special to the Dispatch says: A cloud burst washed out 2500 feet of roadbed on the Iowa Central, near Merrill, last night, causing a seven-hour delay of passenger traffic. Seven hundred feet of ballast was also carried away at Quimby, on the Onawa branch of the Central.

A special from Nora Springs, Iowa, says: The most terrific rain storm for years washed out small bridges and culverts in all directions. The rain gauge indicated a fall of 5 inches.

ELMA IS LIKE A LAKE.

St. Paul, Minn., May 25.—A dispatch to the Dispatch from Elma, Iowa, says: A terrific storm, cyclonic in character, occurred here last night. Many buildings were unroofed, trees uprooted and outhouses smashed. Telegraph and telephone poles and wires were demolished and numerous business fronts were smashed in. The town is almost a lake. Hundreds of dollars worth of damage was done, but no one hurt. The people took refuge in cellars. The storm struck here at 8 p. m. and lasted one hour. At Alta Vista a man was killed and two children hurt badly.

MANCHESTER INJURED.

St. Paul, May 25.—A Manchester, Iowa, special to the Dispatch says: A cyclone struck Manchester at about 10 o'clock last night, leaving a track of six to eight miles in length in ruins. Mrs. James Howland and William Murray were seriously injured.

HAIL AT SLEEPY EYE.

The Heaviest Storm Known For Several Years.

Sleepy Eye, Minn., May 25.—The heaviest hail storm known in years occurred yesterday afternoon, destroying all crops in a strip of country two miles in width and about twenty miles long, the edge of the storm being six miles west of this place.

Passenger train No. 22 was caught by the storm at Cobden and the windows and shades in the coaches on the north side of the train were smashed.

Wheat and oats are hammered into the ground and rye almost entirely destroyed.

A report reached here that farther north the storm was cyclonic. About an inch of water fell here.

RAILROAD DAMAGES.

May Take Forty Days to Repair One Line.

Dubuque, Iowa, May 25.—Reports from railroads tell of only destruction by floods. On the Illinois Central, south of East Dubuque, eight miles of track were swept into the river, and west, on the same road, it is said that sixteen bridges are gone and washouts are numerous. Trains may not be run over this road for forty days.

On the Milwaukee, south, bridges are gone at Catese, Spring Creek and Bellevue, and on the north trains are delayed by washouts.

The Great Western suffered the greatest loss at Durango, where a mile of track, a bridge and the depot went out with the tide. Further west and north the track was torn out at several points. At Rockdale, four miles west, two big iron bridges are so undermined that they may not be used for several days. In this vicinity there was no damage by wind, but at Manchester, forty miles west, a cyclone swept the country, sweeping away barns and outhouses.

DEATHS IN ILLINOIS.

Lightning's Deadly Havoc in Country Towns.

Rockford, Ill., May 25.—The severest storm in years visited this section last night. Many buildings were struck by lightning and crops ruined by hail. Many bridges were washed out. Mrs. Isora Bird was killed by lightning near Egan City, two of her children probably fatally injured and two seriously. Several people are reported killed near Monroe Center. Near Caledonia all the windows were broken out of the Northwestern train and passengers had to be transferred.

Chicago, May 25.—At Edison Park, Norwood park and Ravenswood a total of nearly a score of buildings, two of them churches, were demolished, and hundreds of shade trees were uprooted. The rainfall amounted to a cloudburst.

During the height of the storm last night a small cottage on North Ashland avenue was lifted bodily from its foundations and carried a distance of thirty feet into an adjoining vacant lot. The building, though badly twisted and damaged, held together, and the occupants, James Densler, wife and three children, escaped injury.

DEATH IN ILLINOIS.

Milwaukee, May 25.—A special to the Evening Wisconsin from Elgin, Ill., says: A tornado visited this section this morning. John Keough, engineer of the state insane asylum, was killed by a falling chimney. The Elgin Sewing Machine and Bicycle factory was blown down, and many other buildings were wrecked. The bicycle factory employed 300 men.

PANTON & WHITE

A FIGHT

One Will Probably Occur at the National Prohibition Convention.

Money Platform Will Be the Battle Ground of Factions.

Only a Few Delegates Have as Yet Arrived at Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 25.—As the time for the National Prohibition convention approaches, the prospect for a bitter fight over the money plank of the platform increases. Samuel Dickie, chairman of the National Central committee, who has attended every national convention since the Prohibition party started said today that he had never before seen the lines so sharply drawn upon any question. To adopt the free silver plank he believes will leost the party 100,000 votes at the election.

On the other hand ex-Governor John P. St. John, of Kansas, believes that the adoption of a free silver plank together with planks for government ownership of railways and telegraph lines and anti-monopolies, will add 100 votes to the party strength, if not secure the election of the third party president. "If McKinley is nominated in St. Louis, and if the Democrats adopt a gold standard plank at Chicago, then the Prohibition candidate for president will stand a good chance for election, if we adopt a free silver plank," he said.

As yet the number of delegates who have arrived is so limited that it cannot be told with any accuracy who will win, but those who are here have radical opinions for one side or the other. They are out for a fight.

VISITORS AT DEERWOOD.

They Are Having Great Sport With the Rod.

Deerwood, Minn., May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Bass and muscallonge have been caught in large quantities during the past week, and visitors generally are well pleased with the opening of the season.

Messrs. Johanson, Fryberger and Harrison, of Duluth, were the first arrivals during last week, and, while the weather was not propitious, succeeded in securing a fine box of fish, the result of one day's persistent fishing.

H. M. Bradley and grandsons, N. H. Edwards and Len Bradley, spent the week at the inn, and while the young men secured some very fine bass, Mr. Bradley, who is a veteran fisherman, caught and landed a 19½-pound muscallonge Tuesday, and Friday repeated his experience with a 9-pound one. Mr. Bradley now heads the list for large fish. These gentlemen expect to return again during the season.

Clark Adams, of Deerwood and Duluth, left Wednesday for an exploration of the north shore near Grand Marais.

Alderman Hale and son Paul, of Duluth, arrived Thursday evening, and Friday fished Serpent lake and Saturday spent the day in Black lake and were well repaid for their labor by a string of fine bass.

W. A. Foote and cousin, Mrs. Thayer, are the most indefatigable fishers at the lakes, and their score is rapidly assuming alarming proportions. Mr. Foote's reputation as a fisherman was not decreased by his visit to this place, while Mrs. Thayer as an amateur wielder of the rod is rapidly becoming an alarming opponent. Several of the largest bass taken this season are trophies of Mrs. Thayer's skill with rod and reel.

Saturday's list of visitors from Duluth include Mr. and Mrs. D. G. Cutler and son and Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Silvey, who, despite unfavorable weather, brought to boat no less than thirty-one and forty-nine pounds of fish respectively Saturday afternoon. This is Mrs. Silvey's first experience with rod and reel, and that she is an apt pupil was demonstrated during the afternoon, when she hooked and played an 11-pound pike, which they were compelled to tow ashore as they were not supplied with gaff or landing net. Mrs. Cutler is an accomplished rodster, and a large share of their thirty-one pounds of fish is due to her skillful handling of the rod.

Drs. N. B. McNulty and J. L. Elliott proved themselves more than M.D.'s by securing many fish the first of this week.

A jolly party came down from Duluth Saturday evening, composed of O. C. Hartman, Otto C. Hartman, Jr., Morton Miller, A. W. Hartman and C. F. Hartman. These gentlemen succeeded in finding the fish at home and persuaded many of them to return with them to Duluth.

Fred Reynolds and George Suffel were late arrivals Saturday, and to prove that they had not forgotten the art of angling, caught thirty-four bass the next morning, becoming so engrossed in their sport that neither gentleman thought to return for breakfast and did not show up for anything to eat till 11:45 o'clock.

Fishing is very good, and the absence of mosquitoes makes a stroll through the woods very enjoyable.

D. R. Long, of West Superior, rusticated here Saturday and Sunday and will return later with his family for a few weeks' outing.

IMPURE BLOOD.

The Ills That Accompany it are Legion. The Sufferer Eventually Becomes a Loathsome Sight, with Death the Only Escape From Pain.

Yet a diseased condition of the blood once exist, and unless it is stopped it will from day to day grow and spread. The disease germs in the blood multiply rapidly and impregnate the tissues throughout the entire body, creating ulcers and other horrible sores. The patient grows weaker and weaker. Every one of the great vital organs of the body become affected, and death is looked upon as a blessing. Do not let such troubles go too far; before it is too late take that most famous of blood purifiers, Kickapoo Indian Sagwa. It quickly enriches and purifies this great vital principle of the body, and at the same time acting directly on the stomach, liver and kidneys, dispelling all lurking poisons. Thousands have been cured, and to-day sing its praise.

One of the many who have experienced relief is Amos Lord, of Conway, Iowa. He says, "I suffered from a chronic blood affection for 20 years. In September, '90, had an operation performed on my foot, but the poison still remained and went through my entire system, and placed me in such a condition I could not sleep nights on account of the hot, burning flushes all over me. I lost the use of my limb. My liver and kidneys became badly affected, and my general health so reduced that I gave up trying to live. Took over twenty bottles of certain Sarsaparillas with no relief. At last I concluded to give Kickapoo Indian Sagwa a trial, and am happy to state that after using it I experienced a great improvement. My liver and kidneys became normal, my limbs began to gain strength, so that now I can walk without crutches, and my health is good for a man of my age, being over 70 years old. I cheerfully recommend Sagwa to anyone afflicted with kidney and liver troubles. I think it is the greatest blood purifier I ever used."

Remember it is purely vegetable, and contains no poisonous ingredients whatever, being made entirely of roots, barks, herbs and gums. All druggists sell it. $1.00 a bottle; 6 bottles for $5.00.

WHOLESOME ADVICE

For People Whose Stomachs Are Weak and Digestion Poor.

Dr. Harlandson, whose opinion in diseases of the stomach is worthy of attention, says when a man or woman comes to me complaining of indigestion, loss of appetite, sour stomach, belching, sour watery-risings, headaches, sleeplessness, lack of ambition and a generally run down nervous condition I advise them to take after each meal one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, allowing the tablet to dissolve in the mouth, and thus mingle with the food eaten. The result is that the food is speedily digested before it has time to sour and ferment. These tablets will digest food anyway, whether the stomach wants to or not, because they contain harmless digestive principles, vegetable essences, pepsia and Golden Seal which supply just what the weak stomach lacks.

I have advised the tablets with great success, both in curing indigestion and to build up the tissues, increase flesh in thin, nervous patients, whose only real trouble was dyspepsia and as soon as the stomach was put to rights they did not know what sickness was.

A 50-cent package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets can be bought at any drug store, and as they are not a secret patent medicine, they can be used as often as desired with full assurance that they contain nothing harmful in the slightest degree; on the contrary, anyone whose stomach is at all deranged will find great benefit from the use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. They will cure any form of stomach weakness or disease except cancer of the stomach. Full sized package at druggists 50 cents and $1 or by mail from Stuart company, Marshall, Mich.

MINING

Lot of Litigation About a Rich Gold Mine is Started.

Holy Terror Stockholders Charge the Directors With a Conspiracy.

An Important Lot of Suits Will Undoubtedly Be the Outcome.

Rapid City, S. D., May 25.—Several suits have been filed here by some of the stockholders of the Holy Terror Mining company against the officers and directors to prevent the latter from selling the shares of stock to the plaintiffs who had become delinquent.

This mine is considered one of the richest in the Black Hills, if not in the United States. Plaintiffs alleged that the workings of the mine disclose large and extensive bodies of free milling gold ore, and that there is now in the ore bins 250 tons of gold ore that will yield by free milling process from $50 to $500 per ton.

They also allege conspiracy, on the part of the officers and directors, to precipitate the value of the stock by levying an assessment of 5 cents a share and by shutting down their mill and abandoning work in the mine at this time when the workings show extensive ore workings, which are easily accessible, sufficient to pay all expenses and a large continuous dividend.

The plaintiffs ask that the directors and officers be removed, and a receiver be appointed during this action, who will immediately work the mine for the benefit of all the stockholders.

Ely, Biwabik and Virginia Schools to Be Examined.

County Superintendent Stultz goes to the range tomorrow to superintend the state high school examinations, which under the new law have been extended to the common schools. This is the first year that any of the schools of this county have availed themselves of the privilege. The schools at Ely, Biwabik and Virginia will take the examinations under the county superintendent. The Tower school will also take the examinations, but under the direct supervision of the state high school board, since the board of trustees of that district have established a high school department.

The state examiner treats the county as a unit, hence the principals of the schools named above will examine and grade the papers and forward the satisfactory ones to the county superintendent, who will make a consolidated report to the state examiner. The subjects upon which the students will be examined are English grammar, history of the United States, civil government, arithmetic, physiology, geography, algebra and Latin.

WEST END

West Duluth Ball Team Defeated the New Duluths Yesterday.

West Duluth and Proctorknott Expect to Play Next Sunday.

The Ball of the Ladies of the Maccabees Tomorrow Evening.

The ball game at the West Duluth grounds yesterday afternoon was witnessed by about 150 people and resulted in the defeat of the New Duluth's by the home team by a score of 13 to 19. The West Duluths' were sadly weakened from the fact that several of the best players were picked up to play at the West End baseball park, and new men were put in their places. Up to the fifth inning the game was a good one and the score stood 5 to 0 in favor of the New Duluths. The West Duluths, however, captured two scores in the fifth and through a couple of two baggers in the sixth they got in six runs and made a turning point in the game. The batteries were: West Duluth—O'Brien and Le Moore; New Duluth—Martin and Crawford.

Next Sunday the West Duluths hope to play at the home grounds with the Proctorknott team. On the following Sunday they will play a return game at New Duluth. The team is fully organized now by the selection of William Brotherlon as captain and manager, and E. Fillacrault as treasurer. The fence surrounding the grounds will be repaired and everything put in condition for ball playing.

Cupid breaks his bow at the sight of a face full of pimples and blotches. Hollow cheeks, sunken eyes, and a sallow complexion will defy his best intentions. Beauty is more than skin deep. The skin is merely the surface on which is written in plain characters the condition of the body.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is good for the complexion because it makes the whole body healthy—because it clears and purifies the blood, makes the digestion strong and clears out impurities of all kinds. By increasing the ability to assimilate nutritious food, and by the infusion of its own ingredients it enriches the blood and so makes solid, healthy flesh. It cures diseases of the lungs, liver, stomach, bowels, skin and scalp, simply because all these diseases spring from the same cause—a disordered digestion and consequent impure blood. Sold by all medicine dealers.

FIRST RAILWAY PASSENGER.

News has been received from New Zealand of the death of Crawford Marley at the age of 83, says the Yorkshire Post. Mr. Marley, who emigrated from Darlington to New Zealand about fourteen years since, was for a long time well known in connection with the Durham coal trade. He is believed to have been the last survivor of those who had a first ride on Stephenson's No. 1 engine when the Stockton & Darlington railway was opened. He was about 13 years of age at the time, and, with two other boys, he went to see the "iron horse," which was brought from Newcastle on a dray by eight horses. When the locomotive had been got on the line George Stephenson's brother, Joseph, who was in charge of it, asked the lads to run to a farm house for some buckets, and the boiler was filled from a spring near at hand. The fire having been lighted and steam raised, the boys, in return for their assistance, were invited to have a first ride.

DECLINED

Wheat Opened Firm and Unchanged But Suffered a Decline.

There Was an Increase in Receipts and Other Bearish News.

Michigan Crop Report Aided Those Who Believe in Lower Prices.

Wheat opened this morning at about Saturday's closing figures and rather firm. The Northwestern receipts, however, showed a considerable increase and the Michigan crop report was disappointing to the bulls and after a small advance early, the price eased off. The absence of foreign news gave the market rather of a holiday character, and it fluctuated considerably, finally becoming weak and selling down sharply. Trading was quite active at the decline.

July opened unchanged at 61⅝c, declined ⅛c, reacted and sold up to 61⅞c, but dropped again and touched 61c before noon. After 12 o'clock it went down to 60⅝c, and after rallying to 61¾c, closed at 61c bid. September opened at 62¾c and sold down to 61⅜c. Shippers bought 60,000 bus to arrive at ½c under July and the mills took 15,000 bus at ¼c under July. The close was 5c lower all round than Saturday. Following were the closing prices:

Wheat—No. 1 hard, cash, 61¾c; May, 61¾c; July, 62¼c. No. 1 northern, cash, 60½c; May, 60½c; June, 60¾c; July, 61c bid; September, 61½c. No. 2 northern, cash, 57@58½c. No. 3, 56@57c. GOSSIP.

Received over private wire of B. E. Baker, grain and stock broker, room 107 Chamber of Commerce and 207 Board of Trade, Chicago, May 25.—After holding steady a little while this morning, wheat has lost all of its strength and broken to the lowest point on the crop, largely for the lack of buyers. What support was given to the market early disappeared as prices began to weaken. There has been a lot of September wheat for sale all day. Clearances for the day small. Scattered reports of harvesting in the Southwest. Sentiment has been generally bearish on the floor today, which is natural as all our markets have been weak. We are coming into a time of the year when advances in wheat are not expected, and it may be too much to hope for an advance. We have felt all day that wheat was about low enough and are inclined to that opinion tonight.

Corn and oats dull and featureless.

Provisions have been heavier than lead all day long. Continued liquidation of long stuff keeps coming out and the bears take advantage of the market to hammer it. The Cudahy element is selling ribs and pork and the packing element selling lard. Cash trade dull.

Puts, July wheat, 59⅝c.

STRANGE PHENOMENON.

Chicago Post: An old man, a resident of England, who recently died at the age of 62, attracted considerable attention in the community in which he lived on account of a phenomenal growth of hair which appeared on his head just before his death. For over twelve years he had been bald, and then, in some inexplicabe way, a heavy growth of hair suddenly appeared, like that of an infant.

NEW YORK STOCKS.

An Irregular Opening Was Noted This Morning.

New York, May 25.—Stocks opened irregular. Tobacco started ½ per cent higher but lost the gain. General Electric opened ¼ higher. Laclede Gas dropped 2¼.

The market became steady after 10:15 and general fractional recoveries ensued, despite the engagement of $1,550,000 gold for export to Germany tomorrow. Laclede Gas exceptionally rose 1¼ per cent, but did not maintain the full advantage. Sugar was helped by an advance of 1 1-16 in refined grades of the product. The market at 11 o'clock was almost lifeless, but steady at the improvements noted.

The absence of outside interest in the market encouraged the bears to make a demonstration against the list during the second hour. But the volume of business was not enlarged materially. The specialties were the chief points of attack, and concessions of ⅛@½ per cent were made in Manhattan and Consolidated Gas. The market continues weak at midday. Sales to noon were 61,100 shares.

THE WEATHER.

United States Agricultural Department, Weather Bureau, Duluth, Synopsis of weather conditions for the twenty-four hours ending at 7 a. m. (Central time), May 25.—The barometric depression now central near Winnipeg, and extending southward over the Missouri and Upper Mississippi valleys and the upper lakes, has been attended by showers throughout Montana, the Dakotas, Minnesota and the greater part of Wisconsin; also in portions of Illinois and Michigan. Heavy rainfall (1.46 inches) is reported at Chicago; elsewhere the rainfalls range from trace to .60 inch. It is now generally cloudy in the Northwest, the Upper Mississippi valley, and the upper lake region, with local showers. A hot wave prevails in the Mississippi, Lower Missouri and Lower Ohio valleys. The thermometer rose to 100 degrees at Dodge City, Kan., yesterday, breaking all previous records of high temperature for that station during May. It is cooler than yesterday in the Upper Missouri valley, and thence northward over the Canadian provinces, where brisk to high westerly winds prevail.

Depth of water in Sault canal at 7 a. m. today, 13 feet 10 inches. Forecast for the next twenty-four hours: Rising.

THE GUBERNATORIAL FIGHT.

The Clough organ, which is also the organ of the Merriam-Bixby machine and the organ of the Minnesota Iron company's political annex, is highly indignant because The Herald has dared to voice the sentiment of the rank and file of the Republican party in St. Louis county, in opposition to the bosses and would-be bosses. The Herald, it asserts, "is not a Republican paper by standing or profession." This is true, and everyone knows it, even though the St. Cloud Times and other Democratic papers say that The Herald is Republican. The Herald has no right, the morning paper further asserts, to speak "on behalf" of the Republicans of Duluth. This postulate cannot be granted. The Herald exercises its right as an independent public journal to criticize whom and what it pleases and to offer its advice and use its influence whenever the occasion demands that it shall do so. And this is one of those occasions, because the great masses of the Republican voters of St. Louis county have no party paper of their own through which they can express their sentiments. The News Tribune does not represent their views. It is controlled by the political machine, and the rank and file of the party have no confidence in it, or respect for its statements or opinions.

The assertion that The Herald has sold its editorial space to Mr. Lee or any other candidate is utterly false. The statement is made by a venal, mercenary sheet which is so accustomed to demanding its price for political support and has been subsidized by the political bosses and aspiring candidates until it cannot imagine that any newspaper would act solely in the interest of good government and advocate the election of men because they are able and honest. The insinuation that Mr. Lee is carrying on a corrupt campaign is as contemptible as it is libellous. No doubt Mr. Lee, whose reputation for honesty and integrity has hitherto stood unchallenged, will deal in a proper manner with the villainous attack made upon him by the mud-slinger of the Merriam machine.

Regardless of the rage of the News Tribune and the political bosses, whose subservient tool it is, The Herald will carry on the campaign against the Merriam-Bixby-Clough machine in the way that best suits it, and it will, in the future as in the past, expose the hypocrisy of the Clough boomers who are professing friendship to Mr. Towne and endeavoring to persuade him to remain neutral in this fight and thus enable them to regain the political power which they lost two years ago in this county, when Mr. Towne and his friends wiped the earth with them.

The Herald has expressed the belief that Mr. Towne should state for the benefit of his friends where he stands in this fight. It cannot understand why he occupies any different position from any other Republican voter in this county, so far as declaring his preference is concerned. Why should he get up on a high fence or preserve a sphinx-like attitude? This is what the News Tribune and the Clough men urge him to do, because they fear his influence, if exerted actively against them. They are now engaged in promising him a renomination by a majority of 1 in a convention of 207 delegates, if he will not support Mr. Lee, yet the fact is that they would be powerless to deliver a single vote that they promise. On the other hand, Mr. Lee's friends are in a position to assure him of a renomination by acclamation, without any contest whatever. But the simple fact that Mr. Lee is a resident of the Sixth district and will have almost the solid support of the other counties in the district should be sufficient to ensure for him the support of Mr. Towne and every other Republican in St. Louis county.

OF SUPREME IMPORTANCE.

The next legislature will deal with a number of very important matters. One of these matters is a legislative reapportionment. The state census, taken last year, shows that the present apportionment is unjust to several sections of the state. The people of St. Louis county have not the representation to which their numbers entitle them. The whole of the northern part of the state is in the same fix. It is desirable therefore that the next session of the legislature shall pass a reapportionment bill that will deal justly with this section of the state and give to it its proper representation in the state senate and house of representatives. The members from the northern part of the state must necessarily stand together in order to get a fair apportionment. St. Louis county must depend upon the friendship of the members from the other counties in the Sixth district to get that to which she is entitled. If, however, we do nothing to gain their friendship—which we do not now possess to a very great extent—we cannot expect to have their assistance when the matter comes up in the legislature.

The pending gubernatorial campaign presents to St. Louis county an opportunity of gaining the friendship of the rest of the district, and it would be a suicidal act to neglect the opportunity. The people of the western counties in the district have a candidate for governor—William E. Lee, of Todd county, a man of ability and integrity, and in every way qualified for the office. They are giving their united support to his candidacy, and despite what the Clough claquers say, he is assured of the almost solid vote in the state convention of all the counties in the Sixth district, outside of St. Louis, Lake and Cook. Our next door neighbor, Carlton county, is in line for Mr. Lee. Itasca will give him a solid delegation. Wadena, Crow Wing, Hubbard, Morrison—all will be found voting for Lee at St. Paul. There are but three counties in the district which may vote for Clough—Anoka, Aitkin and Mille Lacs, and two of these are doubtful.

There are sound political and business reasons why St. Louis, Lake and Cook counties should join their neighbors in supporting Mr. Lee. If St. Louis county should oppose the candidate of the rest of the district, we could not count upon their friendship in the legislature in regard to the legislative apportionment. Nor could we consistently ask their aid at that time, if we now refused to assist them in placing Mr. Lee in the gubernatorial chair. If we act in harmony with them now we can count with confidence upon their aid in getting a just and fair apportionment. It is a matter of great moment to every resident of this section of the state, and it outweighs in importance the retention by several Duluth men of a few petty state offices.

THE OFFICE HOLDERS' PLEA.

At last the Clough-Merriam organ has given the reason why it thinks St. Louis county Republicans should support Mr. Clough for the governorship. He has appointed several Duluthians to office; these men are anxious to retain their jobs; therefore, St. Louis county should support the man who gave them the offices. This is the sum and substance of its plea for a Clough delegation from this county.

It is hardly likely that the Republicans of St. Louis county will regard this as a good and sufficient reason for refusing to support the candidate of the other counties in the Sixth district. The fact that some Duluth men hold state offices and desire to retain them may be a good reason for those men supporting Mr. Clough, but it does not furnish the slightest reason why others should support him, particularly when the political and commercial interests of Duluth will be advanced materially by acting in harmony with the rest of the district and supporting a strong and able candidate in the person of William E. Lee.

The officeholders and the Merriam machine and the "old gang" that dictated Republican politics in this county until dethroned by Mr. Towne's friends two years ago may support McClough, but the masses of the Republican party will be found in line for Mr. Lee and they will control the county convention.

A TRADE DISTURBER.

A commercial paper published in New York complains that the bicycle craze has an adverse influence on general trade. It asserts that so great is the rage for the popular wheel that the amount diverted from tradesmen's receipts the country through reaches well up into the millions and becomes an important economic factor. Girls buy less ribbon and get along with less ornamental head gear, as well as reducing their payments to the dressmaker; young men no longer contribute liberally to the tailor, and where substantial luncheons were eaten at noon, many Americans are playing fast and loose with their digestion, merely to economize, and all with the end in view of paying for a wheel. Fewer cigars are smoked, and the pet habits of American youth in general, masculine and feminine alike, yield before the all-conquering bicycle.

When the wheel can produce so radical a change in a nation's character, it is certainly entitled to be called great.

The News Tribune is not accounted an authority on American politics, and when it essays to discuss Canadian politics it is equally bemuddled. Yesterday it solemnly announced that "Sir Charles H. Tupper, Bart., relinquished the Canadian high commissionership in London to lead the ruling party through the present strife." There are just three serious errors in this sentence. First, Sir Charles H. Tupper is not a baronet; second, Sir Charles H. Tupper was never Canadian high commissioner in London; third, Sir Charles H. Tupper is not the leader of the Conservative party, which is "the ruling party" now.

The Washington correspondent of the New York World says: The state department will enter an energetic protest against Gen. Weyler's order forbidding the exportation of tobacco from Cuba after May 20. This will be the first official protest by the government since the Cuban rebellion started. It is estimated that American citizens own more than $1,000,000 worth of leaf tobacco in Havana alone. This tobacco is American property, and Weyler's order is an invasion of rights which cannot be tolerated.

It was once the merry way of the street car conductors in New York to throw newsboys off the cars while the latter were in motion. Three years ago a newsboy who was pitched into the street by a conductor lost one arm in consequence. The court of appeals has sustained a verdict of $1500 damages recovered by the newsboy. The street car company, it should be added, resisted payment of damages, but did not justify pitching the boy off the car.

The Chicago Times-Herald publishes the following mortifying acknowledgment for the Windy City: "After nearly three months of labor on the school census it is found that, partly because of carelessness by the enumerators and partly because the census of 1894 was padded to the extent of 5 per cent, the population of the city is no greater now than it was two years ago, and the census is practically valueless."

Next month, at the old Spanish capital of California, Monterey, there will be celebrated the semi-centennial of the raising of the American flag. There will be a regatta and a naval parade. A year from next January it will be fifty years since gold was discovered in California. The golden state will probably celebrate that event also.

The river and harbor bill, having passed both branches of congress, has gone to the president. He has ten days in which to veto it, sign it or let it become a law without his signature. There are some people who believe that he will veto the measure, but it is confidently asserted that congress will pass it over his veto.

In renominating Mr. Fletcher for congress, the Fifth district Republicans acted wisely. Mr. Fletcher has been an efficient representative and will be able to do more for his district in the next congress than would a new member. It is good policy to keep good men in congress.

Mr. Towne is still silent. His personal representative here is saying nothing. Is it not time to break the silence and let the Republicans of St. Louis county, who have made him politically, know where Mr. Towne stands on the governorship?

The Merriam machine is fighting for its life, and therefore it is fighting hard. The people must crush it out forever now.

LEE DESERVES SUPPORT.

Virginia Enterprise: The Hon. William E. Lee is making a bracing campaign in his gubernatorial aspirations, and will run Governor Clough a hot heat in the state convention. * * * As a resident of the Sixth congressional district, a district comprising over two-fifths the State in area, in proportionate population and more diversified industries and wealth than any other district in the state, we believe Mr. Lee should and will obtain the unanimous support of the better element of the voters of the district.

ALMOST SOLID FOR LEE.

Cloquet Pine Knot: Judging from the reports sent out by responsible parties in the different counties of the Sixth district it seems almost certain that William E. Lee will have all but one or two counties on his list July 1. The friends of Clough may disguise the facts as much as possible but the true situation can be seen through the mask.

IN TOUCH WITH THE PEOPLE.

Melrose, Stearns County, Beacon: In sizing up the political situation The Duluth Herald is good authority to bank on, it is in touch with the people and reflects the sentiment of the people.

CARLTON COUNTY FOR LEE.

Cloquet Pine Knot: The Grand Rapids Magnet in an editorial gives Carlton county to the Clough column of strength in the Sixth district. Bernard was never farther off his reckoning in his life. Carlton county is for Lee.

A VALUABLE MEMBER.

Todd County Argus: Whatever may be said of Congressman Towne's silver views it must be acknowledged that he is a hard worker, and in the very short time he has been in congress has attained a prominence rarely reached by a new member during his first term. Experience has shown that Speaker Reed made no mistake when he placed Mr. Towne upon the committee of rivers and harbors, of which he has proved himself a valuable member.

Politics Past, Present and to Come.

The following striking article by Alfred Henry Lewis, a well-known writer, appeared recently in the New York Journal, an independent paper, but strongly opposed to McKinley:

To those harebrains of politics who rake the lake for the moon, go forth with a cobweb to seine for whales, and who would slay bears with my lady's hodkin—in other words, to those unreasoners who are, so they say, to unmake the nation's tariff conditions and settle all things of commerce by making McKinley president, one would pause to put a question: How are you going to do these mighty tariff things? I have no tremendous political interest in the matter, for I pass but a broadsword existence at best, eating my bread hot with the battle that won it. Yet am I bitten by a sharp curiosity.

Assuming that you elect McKinley, O Rattleheads of Republicanism, what are you going to do with him?

"Pass a McKinley tariff bill," say you.

Let me ask: Did you pass the Dingley bill? Is it not that as this is read your Dingley bill, unadopted, hangs by its shanks on the senate hooks, blue with the putridity of failure and long waiting? Were McKinley—silent today through cowardice, silent through weakness, silent through ignorance, silent with the silence of fear and flight, silent with the gag of a syndicate which owns him and paid for him body and soul and bread and butter, and which is to hereafter drive him like a horse—were McKinley, I say, today in the White House, could you pass a tariff bill?

Wouldn't it crash on the reef of silver and sink in the waters of the senate as the Dingley bill has done? Haven't the Republicans both branches of congress on joint and separate ballot and haven't they failed utterly, flatly and absolutely in their tariff efforts?

What will be the change in congressional conditions during the two years, the four years to follow next March 3, that is to pave the way to all this tariff protection of which one hears so much from your unenlightened lips? Who is to leave the senate and who to come, to make easy victorious sailing for McKinleyism, where Dingleyism—the terms are synonymous—met such shattering wreck?

Let me say a word to you who exalt your horns and deafen quiet and better folk with your uproar—unholy as inane—as to what tariff bills will pass and what "protection" flourish when McKinley is king.

And let me particularly say it to those pushbird people of manufacturing sort who are digging up their dollars to furnish a McKinley war.

There will not in the next four and for aught that can be seen in the next forty years, a tariff bill go through congress except at the price of free coinage. No free silver 16 to 1, no protective tariff.

You will find my words true. Incidentally, I don't personally care a blank cartridge about it. I can live with protection, or live with free trade: I can live with free silver, or live with gold, and find a nightly place to spread my blankets. But I repeat: This century will never see a tariff change except it be hand in hand with freedom to silver 16 to 1. The bandits of silver have you on the hip. Tariff is down in the arena and you don't know it. Protection is captive to silver, and it will pine its black life away behind the bars unless you pay its ransom.

Just a week ago I wired from Washington that the silver men of the Northwest were planning a bolt at St. Louis. They would walk off with Nevada, Utah, Colorado, Montana and Idaho and set up the standard of rebellion. They would name Teller for the presidency, and whether they or the Populists or the Democrats carried them, they would defeat regular Republicanism in November in every state west of the Missouri.

With the Democracy making a clean sweep south of Mason and Dixon's line, the next presidential election would fall finally to the house of representatives. This last, however, is another story.

In the dispatch a week ago was told how Dingleyism met defeat; how Teller, Dubois, Mantle, Tom Carter and Cannon, of the senate, joined dogs with the Democrats and made a pack to run it down and rend it.

It was also pointed out that this assault on Dingleyism, made as a method of free silver 16 to 1 war, had separated Dubois and Shoup, the two senators from Idaho, as well as Teller and Wolcott, the two from Colorado. It made the issue squarely and left it to the people of their states to approve or censure.

Since the dispatch of a week ago much water has run under the bridge. Teller and Dubois have been indorsed, Wolcott and Shoup disgraced and turned down. The two first will go to the St. Louis convention to prepare and perfect the free silver bolt. The two others will stay at home. The two first will, whatever the outcome at the polls in November, return to the senate to do again for McKinleyism what they did for Dingleyism—smite it hip and thigh; do death to it. Their colleagues, wiser, sadder men, will creep faithfully in their wake, voting as they vote. There will be more guns aimed at "protection" in the senate next session than before. Its destruction will be more complete.

The narrow man of the East will say: "But the pressure of public opinion will be too great for these desperadoes of silver."

What pressure? What public opinion? Teller cares no more for the bluster of Boston than Lodge for the bullying of Denver. Dubois recks as lightly of the censure of New York as would Hill of the threats of the miners of the Gunnison. There's no way to avoid the result, or win a separate way for tariff. The bugands of silver, occupying the trail of legislation, have held protection up.

It all comes to this, O McKinleyite! Whatever the result at the convention in St. Louis, or the polls in November, you will get no protection without granting free silver. The silver people will meet you, Indian for Indian, and offer to trade beads for blankets, feathers for raw hides, and they'll do no more. And they can kill protection as often and as long as you can kill free silver.

All this was decided at the obscure primaries held last week in Colorado, Idaho and other regions to the Northwest. The alternative was indorsed: "No free silver, no protective tariff." The assault on "protection," made by Teller, Dubois, Mantle, Cannon and Carter, was indorsed. They were told to do it again.

The Eastern protectionists should have attended to the carrying of these Colorado and Idaho primaries. The Eastern goldbugs should have attended to the carrying of these primaries. Both elements failed to do this, and the chance has forever gone. Now gold or "protection" is to be sacrificed. Silver has been permitted a bull dog grip on each, and one or the other it can surely drag down. The history of the next congress will select and show the victim.

And now, most vociferous yet featherheaded McKinleyite, what think you your man—or rather the ring which has bought him—would do? Would he give free silver to gain protection? It is my view he would; the ring would tell him to. And those banks, and those businesses which fear free silver might better ponder the future in this behalf.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE SALE.—

F. A. PARKER CO. 10 E. Superior St.

ON THE WESTERN MESABA.

Work at the Mines in and Around Hibbing.

Capt. Kline, who is exploring on the lands of T. B. Walker, in section 18-56-21, about three miles east of the diamond mine has struck ore of good appearance, says the Hibbing News.

The drill hole on the Longyear property in section 28-55-20, which was reported at a depth of 230 feet in ore was bottomed Wednesday at a depth of 262 feet in ore.

There will probably be several big strikes at the Oliver mine during the present season as that company has recently put in a big steam hammer capable of striking a 1100 pound blow.

E. J. Longyear has started a drill to complete the hole in which 100 feet of ore was found in section 17-58-20 last fall. This hole is about half a mile east of the 262 body of ore just bottomed in section 28.

The Commodore is the scene of considerable activity and will become one of our best known mines again this season. A spur track is being put in to No. 2 shaft and shipping from both shafts will be carried on. It is probable that a force of 200 men will be employed.

A Swindling Peddler.

A number of Duluth and Superior people were swindled by cloth peddlers last week, who claimed to be selling a portion of the Clay exhibits at the Atlanta exposition. As is known the clay suitings are among the very best manufactured and are expensive goods. The peddlers claimed that the exhibitors did not want to send the goods, which are imported, back and under the law could only sell them to individuals. Among those who purchased was Rev. Dr. Ryan. When he took the pieces to a tailor he found that they were not Clay goods at all and that he had paid an exorbitant price for them. The next day he found the peddler, who agreed to settle and appointed a meeting for the following day. Of course, he did not show up and Dr. Ryan learned that he was in Superior. He went over and secured Chief Compton's assistance, but the man got away on a train before they caught him and Dr. Ryan decided to drop the matter.

Organized the Men.

The sawmill men at Cloquet were organized yesterday and a branch of the Sawmill Workers' Progressive union was formed with 194 men signing the charter. J. W. Nichols organized the union and was assisted by other men from the head of the lakes. Daniel McCarthy, president of the West Duluth Sawmill Workers' union, and J. H. Bachman, of West Superior, addressed the men as did also J. W. Nichols.

A large number of relatives and friends were present and after the ceremony supper was served and there was dancing.

FIGHTERS

Virginia Pugilists Pleaded Guilty and Were Sentenced This Morning.

Principals Were Fined $100 or Ninety Days in Jail.

Seconds Got Off Easier--- Beaton Blames the Mayor For It.

The principals and the seconds and abettors of the prize fight at Virginia on Saturday, which was nipped in the bud as by a chilling frost, in the person of Sheriff Butchart, accompanied by a force of deputies, were arraigned in the municipal court today on the charge of having violated the statute relative to fistic recreation. They had no counsel, and all pleaded guilty.

When the court asked the prisoners if they had anything to say, George Beaton, alias "Pig Iron Kelly," put in a plea for clemency. According to Beaton, it was all the fault of the naughty mayor of Virginia, who induced him to go on the stage to box for points, no hard hitting to be allowed. Beaton said he heard that an effort would be made to stop the affair and he told the mayor he would not fight.

"And then the mayor came to me," said Beaton, "and says he, 'Now this will be all right; you just go on the stage to box for science just to show the people of Virginia that the sport is not cruel. The boys all understood there is to be no hard hitting and there'll be no trouble.'"

This plea on the part of the mayor in behalf of the advancement of science and the enlightenment of the benighted folks of Virginia, who had somehow got the idea that prize fighting was not the gentlest sport in the world, appealed to Beaton's love for and desire to better the condition of his fellow men and he consented to give an exposition of the manly art and its power for the uplifting of humanity.

The court, however, could not be brought to see that Beaton was exactly an apostle of sweetness and light, and on him and Mossa LaFans, better known as Mose Jackson, the other principal, was imposed a fine of $100 or ninety days in the county jail.

John LaFans, Dan Horgan, Ad Newcomber and William Rooney, who pleaded guilty to aiding and abetting the mill, were each fined $75 and costs, with the alternative of forty-five days in the county jail. None of the prisoners had the lucre with which to satisfy the demands of outraged justice, and they went up on the hill.

Sheriff Butchart was put on the stand for the purpose of informing the court as to the situation when he arrived on the scene. The sheriff testified that when the representatives of the law put in an appearance there was every indication that preparations had been made to punch the peace and dignity of the state of Minnesota chockfull of holes. In response to a query from the court as to what composed ring costume, the sheriff stated that of a pair of gloves and a breech clout.

It developed, as the story of the mill was told that Under Sheriff Shephard has earned the respect of the fraternity by his handy way with his dukes. When the officers broke into the ring, Shephard seized Mossa LaFans, who, in the melee that followed mislaid somewhere any plea he may have had of his ability to get away with the agile chief deputy. He was surprised and chagrined at the ease with which Shephard handled him. On the way down, he was thoughtful, and gazed at his victor in a meditative way. Finally he remarked, in a tone that evinced contempt for his own judgment: "Well, I thought I could lick that skinny."

A. L. Wooster, a prominent citizen of Osseo, Mich., after suffering excruciatingly from piles for twenty years, was cured in a short time by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, an absolute cure for all skin diseases. More of this preparation is used than all others combined. S. F. Boyce.

Hamm's Did Not Come.

In default of Hamm's Export nine a scrub nine from West Duluth and West Superior was put together to entertain the visitors at the ball park yesterday. They dallied with the Duluth club through nine innings, but the game was devoid of interest, and the Duluth boys won by a score of 24 to 4. Hines, the new pitcher, make his debut and did some creditable work.

The West Duluth nine yesterday defeated New Duluth by a score of 19 to 13.

Murphy's Gymnasium.

Jimmy Murphy's gymnasium in the Howard block opens tonight with an entertainment which he promises will eclipse any sporting event of the kind given in Duluth in some time. A feature of the entertainment will be a 10-round glove contest between Jimmy Murphy and George Patterson. The principals promise to make this event of interest, and at the same time it will be void of the features which call upon pugilism the wrath of the state executive.

Then there will be bouts between Charles Gullickson and Charles Wren, Billy Heffernonard, George Curtis, Hugh McGuire and James Arnold, Jimmy Lyle and Gilbert Goulette, Tim Ryan and Froban. The first named in each hour are from Superior, and the second from Duluth. Frank Hall will give an entertainment scattered through the evening on fourteen different instruments. There will be other athletic features of bag punching, wrestling, etc., to vary the program. The absurd report that Governor Clough would interfere, put in circulation by illwishers, is absolutely untrue.

GENERAL ADAMS' SERMON.

Addressed the G. A. R. Yesterday Morning.

Before a large assemblage at the First Presbyterian church, gathered together yesterday to do homage to the memory of the valiant ones who bore arms that the republic might endure and the beacon light of liberty kept burning to mark the path for the nation, Gen. R. N. Adams, of Minneapolis, who was himself a comrade of those to whom the time was set apart, preached the sermon of the day. The Grand Army of the Republic and other organizations attended in a body, being escorted to the church by the local companies of the National Guard.

Gen. Adams fitly took his text from one of the war songs of Israel, psalm xx, 5: "We will rejoice in thy salvation and in the name of our God we will set up our banners."

This song, said the speaker, was penned to fire the hearts of the people throughout the war period. It anticipated the nation's victories, as others resounded in the conflict and crowned the triumphs. Not with a confidence as great as that which animated the souls of David and his people went the people of this country into the conflict of thirty-five years ago to preserve the union of the states and which eventuated in the destruction of slavery. Of the alms that nerved the hearts to battle of those who went forth under the war banners, that of preserving the unity of the country may be called the main cause. It was the one alm of a considerable portion of the Northern people, both in and out of the army. In fact, many in the army, avowed that for this and this only they fought, and even by regiments declared that if the war was for abolition they would not fire another gun. The cry in many parts of the North was, "Slavery as it is, and the government as it was." But God had a cause, deeper and more beneficent than man's, that of liberty and inalienable rights in fact as well as in name. And, in that cause, the Omnipotent stayed not his hand nor stretched it forth in mercy until the tide of blood had washed the curse of slavery from the land. It was necessary that the nation should be chastened ere its sin would be acknowledged and its banners set up in the name of liberty that was not a lie and they were gathered, he said, to thank God that both God's cause and man's cause triumphed.

"And we are here, too," continued the speaker, "to rejoice that the manifest purpose of God was fulfilled, that slavery, the abomination, which revolution and treachery sought to foster and perpetuate is dead, thanks be to God and the Grand Army of the Republic." History and compacts read in the light of the camp fires of 1861 and 1865, disclose that the states are children of the nation and that state sovereignty was a device of the evil one. The war had also taught that a nation cannot tranquilize with the evil one. "And now, in God's house, a most fitting place," said he, "we are gathered to honor the noble dead and to celebrate the victories of truth and righteousness, not forgetting that noble band of abolitionists many of them martyrs, who led the way."

HER LIFE TRULY SAVED.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure Does It.

Mrs. Chas. La Point, a well-known resident of Denver, praises this wonderful remedy. Her testimony should convince all as to the worth of the New Heart Cure and Restorative Nervine. Her letter dated Sept. 11th, 1894, reads as follows:

MRS. LA POINT, 2137 Humboldt St.

"Typhoid fever left me with heart trouble of the most serious nature. Nothing the doctors gave had any effect. I had severe pains in the heart, and was unable to lie on my left side for more than three minutes at a time. My heart seemed to miss beats, and I had smothering spells, in which it seemed every breath would be my last. We accidently saw an advertisement of and Restorative Nervine, and purchased a bottle of each. After taking the remedies a week, I could be lifted in a chair and sit up an hour, and in a short time I was able to do light housework. I shall be ever grateful to you for your wonderful medicines. Truly they saved my life.

TWO WERE KILLED.

Disastrous Accident on the Iron Range Road.

A head-end collision on the Duluth & Iron Range, one of the worst in years on that road, caused the instant death of Engineer George Weaver and Fireman Wallace Moulton at 6 o'clock Saturday night. The trains were a work train and an ore train, both of which were running wild between Tower and Ely, with orders to dog against each other. The accident occurred in a deep cut on a curve at Eagle Nest Lake, and neither train could be seen from the other more than a dozen rods away.

The work train, upon which were the men who were killed, was loaded with rails, and the shock of the collision drove them through the cab, and this it was that caused the fatalities. Head Brakeman McKinnon, who was in the cab of the work train, was dangerously injured. Engineer Cotter and Fireman Shea, of the ore train, saved themselves by jumping. Engineer Cotter was buried under a pile of splintered box cars, from which he emerged without injury. The speed of the trains must have been considerable, as the two trains were badly smashed and many cars were splintered and ditched.

The bodies of Engineer Weaver and Fireman Moulton were covered with the rails, seventy-two of them being removed to recover them.

The accident occurred just before 7 o'clock, and the northbound Duluth train which arrived shortly after was obliged to return to Tower, the passengers and mail being afterwards transferred to an ore train sent down from Ely. The dead men were brought to Tower and viewed by Deputy Coroner Shephard and a jury, consisting of A. G. Kingston, C. C. Oprel, M. F. Marion, J. D. Murphy, T. H. Winchester and A. Philips.

Both trains were "extras," and on whom the blame for the disaster rests has not been fixed. The coroner's jury has summoned those present to attend the sitting Tuesday evening, when this will be inquired into. The wreck took fire, but by heroic efforts, continued the whole night, the flames were subdued. The ore engine was completely burned, and both are badly wrecked, together with five cars. Only a few minutes previous to the accident Roadmaster Shea was at the throttle of Weaver's engine, but went back to the caboose. On the last car of the work train were several brakemen and two train crews, and had the train backed down as is sometimes done, instead of turning at Ely, the loss of life would have been appalling. As it was, the section men were badly bruised and shaken up.

Both the men who were killed were well known the entire length of the road. Both lived at Two Harbors, and Engineer Weaver had been with the road eight years and Fireman Moulton four years. A special train brought George Weaver's remains to Duluth last night, accompanied by Mrs. Weaver and her daughters Carrie and Jessie and her son George. The body was taken to Osage, Iowa, for burial. The pallbearers were six Iron Range engineers, J. F. McGraw, P. J. McGuire, A. W. Switzer, Jacob Wratten, William Tracey and D. J. Hayes. The deceased was an Odd Fellow, and a number of members of that order accompanied the body to Duluth.

Wallace Moulton's funeral will take place in Two Harbors, where an inquest was to have been held this afternoon.

It took until 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon to clear the road.

Mayor Truelsen May Not Allow Boxing Contests This Evening.

Thinks the Law So Sweeping as to Preclude Sparing Matches.

If Gov. Clough Approves He Will Cause No Interference.

The mayor has a great respect for the manly art of self-defense, so he says. But it is tempered by a respect for the law. And the law, the vintage of 1889, relating to fistic encounters is very sweeping in its provisions.

The mayor sat in his office this morning with his eyes glued to a law book, the statutes of Minnesota. The result of his law studies was that he notified Chief Hansen that even that style of encounter "commonly known as a sparring match" could not be allowed.

The interest of the mayor in the subject at this time is due to the fact that boxing is one of the attractions advertised in connection with the opening of Jimmy Murphy's school of athletics this evening. In view of the interpretation put on the statutes by Judge Edson in the case of the Virginia pugilists, the mayor felt that the forthcoming entertainment might come under the ban of the law.

Mr. Murphy called on the mayor today and a conference was had. Mr. Murphy explained to the mayor that whatever boxing occurred would be merely an exposition for the benefit of his pupils. The mayor said he could see no harm in that, if the boxing was kept strictly within those bounds.

Mr. Murphy has letters from some of the leading clergymen requesting that a permit be granted to him in the interest of athletics and legitimate practice in the science of self-defence," said the mayor. "If Mr. Murphy can keep outside the provisions of the law, I shall have nothing to say."

Mr. Murphy sent us telegram this afternoon setting forth the nature of the entertainment he proposes to give, and asking permission to go ahead. No word had been received from St. Paul at a late hour.

Mayor Truelsen relented late this afternoon and decided that the exhibition could be given as originally planned, without violating the law.

THE DISTRICT COURT.

Insurance Case Given to the Jury This Afternoon.

This was a quiet day in district court. Judge Moer gave the case of Stanislaus Yanka against the Hartford Fire Insurance company to the jury just before noon. The following question was presented to them for an answer: "What was the value of plaintiff's store, stock and fixtures at the time of the fire?"

Judge Moer then took up the case of Axel Hendrickson against Oscar Peterson. Hendrickson claims that Peterson caused his arrest, Feb. 26, 1895, for malicious destruction of personal property. After Hendrickson had been in jail several days his case was dismissed, and he was released. He now sues for $3025 for false imprisonment.

Saturday evening the jury in the Lisbon forgery case found Lisbon not guilty. He was immediately arrested again on another count and taken back to jail. He appeared in municipal court this morning charged with presenting to C. W. Erieson for payment a forged order for $5. At Lisbon's request the examination was set for June 2. His case ended the criminal calendar in district court, and this morning Judge Morris resumed the civil calendar. He took up the case of Andrew Swordling, as assignee for Fredin & Wilson, against the Security bank. Swordling alleges that prior to the firm's assignment they paid the Security bank $3000, and he sues to recover that amount on the ground that it made the bank a preferred creditor.

Judge Ensign at noon was still hearing the case of William Hare against the Eastern Minnesota railroad. Just before noon a motion to direct a verdict for the defendant was denied, and the arguments to the jury are in progress this afternoon.

New Sleepers Received.

The Omaha has received two of the new Wagner sleeping cars which will hereafter be used on that road. The contract with the Pullman company has expired and a new one made with the Wagner company, sixteen cars being ordered. They are brand new and are beauties. The two which are here are 16-section cars, the Paoli and Paris. They are very heavy cars, finished in mahogany and blue plush. The vestibules take in the whole platform, a decided improvement. They are lighted with gas and heated both by steam and water. They will be used on all the Omaha runs.

DESTROYED BY FIRE.

F. C. Wigginton's Residence at Woodland Buried.

The residence of Fred C. Wigginton, at Woodland Park, was totally destroyed by fire last night. The building was valued at $2500 and was insured for $1700. The loss on the furniture is estimated at about $700, fully covered by insurance. The first steamer arrived after the building was destroyed and some of the apparatus may be on the way yet.

At about 9:30 o'clock, quite a loud report was heard by those in the house, the explosion being accompanied by the extinguishment of the electric lights, and in a very few moments the woodwork in the vicinity of the electric meter was discovered to be in flames. A messenger was at once sent to the nearest fire alarm box, which was three-quarters of a mile away, and such means as were at hand were employed to extinguish the blaze, but unavailingly, for at 10 o'clock, and some time before the arrival of the first fire engine the building was in ruins. When it was seen that the structure must go before the arrival of aid, every effort was made to save the contents, the carpets, range and a portion of the furniture being gotten out.

The occurrence, say the Woodland Park people, is an endorsement of their representations of the need of more adequate protection against fire. They say, that with alarm boxes scattered at wide intervals and the nearest fire engine several miles away they might as well be in Patagonia so far as protection is concerned, and that, in case of fire, it is a waste of breath to try to hunt up the fire department.

SHOULD GET TOGETHER.

G. G. Hartley's Idea on the Water Question.

During last winter's epidemic of typhoid, exaggerated reports of the matter came out all through the country. In relation to this G. G. Hartley, who has just returned from the East, said to a Herald reporter this morning:

"The people of this city will never know how much they have been damaged by the typhoid epidemics; you cannot go far enough away from Duluth to get out of hearing of it. The practical thing to do at this time would be for the city officials and the owners of the water plant to get together, like reasonable business men, and arrange for the purchase by the city of the present water plant, then go ahead; first provide for a supply of pure water, then extend the system to the utmost settled portions of the present city. In this way the city would have the revenue of the present plant, with which to pay interest, and the work of constructing an extension would progress all right. The situation, as it now stands, seems to me very discouraging. The company is working in one direction and the city in another. Good money is being wasted, and little or nothing being acquired. No good citizen of Duluth wants to see the company treated unfairly, and it is for the best interest of all concerned, it seems to me, for the company and the city to get together, at this time, on a fair and equitable basis, and at the earliest possible date."

Robert Was Drunk.

Robert Bruce was the historic name that bowed the shoulders of a gentleman who pleaded guilty in the municipal court to a charge of drunkenness today. In consideration of his illustrious cognomen, sentence was suspended and he was allowed to go.

William Ready went back on his name when it came to paying a fine of $10 and costs for being drunk and he went up on the hill. John Dunn did not respond to a like demand, and he also went to the rock pile. Hugh Blake, arrested for vagrancy, proved that he was not guilty and was discharged, and Oley Sunberg, who pleaded guilty to the same charge, was let off with sentence suspended.

No Reflection Intended.

Vice President McBride, of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern, has taken exception to the publication of the impromptu remarks of William Morrison, of the Ore Trimmers' union, made at the Trades' assembly Friday evening. In publishing Morrison's remarks The Herald had no intention of endorsing them in the least degree, nor did it have the remotest idea of casting any reflections upon Mr. McBride or of placing him upon the same level as the man who made the remarks. The statements made by Morrison were merely published incidentally as a part of the debate in the assembly on the Ore Trimmers' union and its alleged difficulties. They were uttered by Morrison in the heat of debate, and it is probably unnecessary for Mr. McBride to deny them.

Congratulated Butchart.

Sheriff Butchart this morning received a telegram from Governor Clough congratulating him upon his dispatch in shutting off the fight at Virginia, and enjoining him to see that the fighters and their seconds were given the full extent of the law.

MR. LEE HERE.

Hon. William E. Lee, who hopes and expects to be the next governor of Minnesota, is in the city today and will remain until tomorrow. He is quite well satisfied with the outlook throughout the state and his chances are very good.

This agreement witnesseth that the undersigned do hereby associate for the purpose of incorporation under and by virtue of Title one (1), of Chapter thirty-four (34) of the General Statutes of Minnesota, 1878, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto, and adopt and sign the following articles of incorporation:

ARTICLE I.

The name of this corporation shall be "Duluth Great Western Railway Company" and the general nature of its business shall be to survey, locate, construct, equip, maintain and operate for the transportation of persons and property for hire a line of public railway with one or more tracks or lines of rails, commencing at the city of Duluth, in the county of St. Louis, Minnesota, where terminal facilities can be procured, and extending thence southerly to the boundary line between the states of Wisconsin and Minnesota to the most practicable point of crossing the St. Louis river between Rice's Point and the dividing line between ranges fifteen (15) and sixteen (16) west, where the same crosses said boundary and where said line of railway will meet and coincide with a line of railroad beginning at that point to be built through the state of Wisconsin thence over said last mentioned line in Wisconsin. Then beginning again in the state of Minnesota at a point on the boundary line between the states of Minnesota and Wisconsin at a point on said boundary on the western border of township number forty-eight (48), north range fifteen (15) west found to be most feasible for crossing said boundary, and where said line of railway will meet and coincide with a line of railway to be built through the northwest corner of the state of Wisconsin as aforesaid, thence extending in a general westerly course, by the most practical route through and across the north central portion of the state of Minnesota; passing near the southern boundary of Hubbard county, thence westerly to a point near the southwestern corner of White Earth Indian reservation, thence in a northwesterly direction to a point on the western boundary line of Minnesota on the Red River of the North at or near Caledonia where said river can be most easily crossed; thence westerly through the state of North Dakota to the Missouri river by the most practical route to be more specifically determined and located. Also beginning at a point in the line already described near the southwest corner of the White Earth Indian reservation, thence extending in a southwesterly direction by the most practical route to a point on the boundary line between Minnesota and North Dakota at or near Moorhead to be specifically determined and located, together with the construction, maintenance and operation of all necessary switches, side tracks, switches, turnouts, car houses, depots, machine shops, bridges, warehouses and all other necessary buildings, structures and erections necessary for the proper maintenance and operation of said railway, and to acquire and hold property and do all things necessary and proper for or incidental to the conduct of said business; and further, to construct, maintain and operate a line, or lines, of telegraph on or over its line of railway and branches and to charge a reasonable compensation for the transmission of messages over and by means of the same. The more definite location and selection of said line of railway, spur tracks, side tracks, depots, machine shops and other necessary erections shall be hereafter made, determined and established by the board of directors of this corporation, and it shall be legal and within the province of these articles for the said board of directors to cause the work of construction to commence at any point, upon any of the lines established by them in pursuance of these articles, and, if necessary, to obtain for a reasonable hire the right to run the locomotives and cars of this corporation on other railroads, in the conduct of its business, and if necessary to reach for the time being its own termini over lines so leased, or to procure any of the facilities for the transportation therein contemplated either by purchase, lease or consolidation. The principal place of transacting the business of this corporation shall be, and is hereby declared to be, in the city of Duluth, county of St. Louis and state of Minnesota, wherein the general office of this corporation shall be kept.

Whereas default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by Mary Sargent, (a widow), mortgagor, to Agnes Callender, mortgagee, dated June first (1st), 1892, and duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds for St. Louis county, Minnesota, on June twentieth (20th), 1892, at 4:10 o'clock p. m., in Book one hundred two (102) of mortgages, on pages three hundred twenty-eight (328), three hundred twenty-nine (329) and three hundred thirty (330); such default consisting in the non-payment of the semi-annual installment of interest upon the debt secured by said mortgage, which became due on January first (1st), 1896, amounting to the sum of four hundred seventy-two and 50-100 dollars, no part of which has ever been paid; and also in the non-payment of the sum of forty-five and 18-100 dollars, heretofore paid by said mortgagee for insurance premiums upon the premises covered by said mortgage, in accordance with the provisions thereof; by reason of which defaults said mortgagee has, after said defaults had continued for more than ten days, elected to exercise the option to her given by the terms of said mortgage and of the note secured thereby, by declaring, and she does hereby declare the whole principal sum secured by said note and mortgage, with all accrued interest thereon, and exchange, and said insurance premiums paid, to be now due and payable.

MARINE

The Severe Storm Extending Over a Large Section Curtails Reports.

The Wooden Steamer Gratwick and Whaleback Barge 133 Are Libelled.

The Schooner Moonlight Has Been Pulled Off the Beach at Chocolay.

Owing to the severe storm which prevailed last night and today over a large section of the country, The Herald's marine reports are somewhat curtailed.

THE GRATWICK AND 133 LIBELED.

The wooden steamer W. H. Gratwick and McDougall pig 133 have been libeled by the owners of the schooner Sunrise for the value of that vessel, which was sunk in midlake off Racine on Thursday by collision. Claims for individual losses have also been filed by the crew of the Sunrise. In speaking of the disaster Capt. Buchanan, of the Sunrise, is quoted as having said: "This would not have happened if there had been a bell or a warning of any kind. I just heard the signals of the steamer and that was all. The pig was towing 900 feet behind her, and naturally as I kept on our course we got in her way, and she walked right through us." While en route to Chicago on the Gratwick after the collision the mate of the steamer told Capt. Buchanan that the lookout on the pig did not ring her bell while passing the Sunrise. The mate also added that on a previous occasion during the trip he had been compelled to blow four blasts of the steamer's whistle to warn the crew of the pig to ring the bell.

The force of the collision broke several plates in the bow of the pig and caused her forward compartment to fill with water.

THE MOONLIGHT RELEASED.

Capt. Osborne received a dispatch from Marquette on Saturday evening stating that the schooner Moonlight had been pulled off the beach at Chocolay. The Kent and the Moonlight were purchased by Capt. PLEA FOR HARMONY.

Presbyterians Resume Their Session at Saratoga.

Saratoga, N. Y., May 25.—The docket of the Presbyterian general assembly for the forenoon session today contained only two items on regular order, the report on the work of the board of missions to freedmen and the continuation of the discussion in regard to relations of the young people's societies to the church. It was recommended that no action be taken, as the present freedom is more edifying than any other strictness of uniformity could be.

Before taking up the regular order the moderator made a plea for harmony in the subsequent proceedings of the assembly. The report of the standing committee on work among the freedmen was presented by Dr. Villeroy D. Reed, of Philadelphia.

The report of the board showed receipts for the year of $146,992, and expenditures $149,763. The present debt of the board is $16,371. The board has under its charge 181 ministers, 214 churches and Sunday schools, 75 day schools with 230 teachers and 9511 pupils. During the year 2983 members have been added to the board's 182 churches. The freedmen have themselves contributed $68,000 to the support of their churches and schools.

At the close of the report the assembly was addressed by Dr. Reed and Dr. E. P. Cowan, secretary of the board.

When the second order was taken up the floor was accorded to Rev. Lane, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y. He moved as a substitute for the remainder of the report that the committee on young people's society be discharged from the further consideration of the subject.

Dr. Breed then addressed the assembly, saying the committee had taken the middle course, and that they had no intention of suppressing the societies of Christian Endeavor. It was simply a question of whether the members of the societies shall be Presbyterians first and members afterwards, or vice versa. The discussion of the subject continued until adjournment at 12:30, and was made a special order for Tuesday afternoon. The report of the committee of conference with theological seminaries was also made a special order for Wednesday.

MORE BISHOPS.

Methodists at Cleveland Selecting Missionary Primates.

Cleveland, May 25.—The Methodist Episcopal conference opened today with Bishop Foss in the chair. Bishop-Elect McCabe led in the morning hymn. The first business of the conference was to limit the speeches of delegates to five minutes, and the time for chairmen of committees to speak was limited to ten minutes. Bishop Foss had difficulty in receiving parliamentary courtesy, but he wielded the gavel with determination and maintained order.

A suspension of rules to allow the committee on boundaries to make a special report was granted. After much discussion it was decided to hold two sessions a day hereafter.

The order of business of the day—the election of a missionary bishop to Africa—was called for. An effort was made to open the old fight by moving that the vote by which it was decided to elect a missionary bishop be reconsidered. It was promptly tabled. Another motion was made to postpone the election of a missionary bishop until the committee on judiciary had reported on some of the legal points. It was promptly tabled. It was decided to elect by ballot without nomination, and that a two-thirds majority was necessary to elect. The first ballot was then taken.

On the second ballot for a missionary bishop, Rev. Dr. Hattersell was elected, receiving 335 votes out of a total of 411.

PECULIAR DROWNING.

Singular Fatality in the Streets of Village.

Ft. Scott, Kas., May 25.—Mrs. Georgia Rickett and Edith Caswell, well known ladies of Lazayne, while out boat riding on the streets of that place, last night, were drowned by the overturning of their boat. The town was flooded by the recent rains, and the water stood from four to six feet deep in the streets. Several parties were out boat riding. A strong current carried a boat containing the Mandolin club against the one in which the women were, with four others, causing it to tip.

ROASTING OLNEY.

English Papers Comment on the Stern Case.

London, May 25.—Commenting today on the published correspondence between Marshall Von Bieberstein, the German minister for foreign affairs, and Baron Von Thielman, the German ambassador to the United States, regarding the case of Louis Stern, of New York, the Courier says "Secretary Olney has made himself so notorious throughout the world by the vigor, not to say rudeness, of his style in diplomatic correspondence, that Baron Marshall Von Bieberstein seems to have thought it time to give him a severe snubbing."

The Globe says on the subject: "The Stern incident is a most useful and instructive lesson which will do the Americans a great deal of good, if only they are not too vain to profit by it."

WYOMING WINS.

And Bannock Indians Must Observe Game Laws.

Washington, May 25.—The supreme court, in an opinion by Justice White, today passed upon the right of the Bannock Indians to kill game in the unsettled lands of their former reservation in Wyoming, holding that under their treaty the Indians could not kill game in violation of the laws of the state. The title of the case was that of J. H. Ward, sheriff, vs. Race Horse, the latter being an Indian, who had surrendered himself to the Wyoming state authorities for the purpose of testing the matter.

The opinion of the supreme court for Wyoming, by which Race Horse was released, was reversed, and it was ordered that the Indian be remanded to the custody of the state authorities.

A DECEPTION EASILY PRACTISED

Is the offer of a reward for "any case of catarrh not cured" by certain "cures" or "blood medicines." Nothing is said regarding the number of bottles required, and therein lies the deception. The makers of Ely's Cream Balm have never resorted to such devices. Cream Balm is an elegant preparation, agreeable to use, and immediate in its beneficial results. It cures catarrh. You can rely upon the fact that it contains no mercury nor other injurious drug. Fifty cents.

Said default consists in the non-payment of the monthly interest on the principal sum secured by said mortgage for more than the space of four (4) months after the same has become due.

It Is Just As Well

that you should know why this sale will interest all economical men and women. The basis of these prices is founded upon solid facts, such as our available cash always commands. Manufacturers planned this year to sell more goods than there was a demand. The accumulation, of course, has made this condition of things, and consequently, instead of holding on to their immense stocks, they thought a "bird in the hand was worth two in the bush." We made them an offer—they accepted—and this sale is the result of our great purchase.

Sweeping Reduction In Bicycle Prices...

The following letter, received today, explains itself.

HARTFORD, Conn., May 24, 1896.

MESSRS. FRENCH & BASSETT, DULUTH, MINN.:

Dear Sirs—There are hundreds of bicycle manufacturers in the field looking for a market for the product of their factories. The competition among them is such that cutting of prices is going on to a great extent. Most of these makers list their machines at the highest price and then sell them for the most they can, according to the shrewdness of the buyer and the skill of the seller. Some of these bicycles are good, some indifferent and some bad. We do not consider any of them equals of the Columbia, which which stands in a class by itself—the standard of the world, price $100 to everybody, a Price Which Will Be Maintained.

But in order that our agents may be able to meet this line of competition and give to the buyer better value for his money than he can get by taking other machines, many of which are made by inexperienced manufacturers, we have decided to reduce the list prices of Hartfords as follows: Nos. 1 and 2 from $80 to $65; Nos. 3 and 4 from $60 to $50; Nos. 5 and 6 from $50 to $45.

These bicycles are made by the HARTFORD CYCLE CO., which we have controlled from the beginning. Last year the POPE MANUFACTURING CO. took the exclusive sale of Hartfords, and at the opening of 1896 we made prices on them that were equitable and fair, but now that most of the makers and dealers are cutting, we prefer to reduce the prices, so that they will successfully compete with any made by others, and that all shall be treated alike. Yours Truly,

DESTRUCTION BY TORNADO

Four Michigan Counties Devastated By Wind and Forty People Killed.

Awful and Singular Horror Caused By the Wind at Cairo, Ill.

Ferry Boat Overturned and Thirteen Persons Went Down to Watery Graves.

Oxford, Mich, May 26.—From reports that continue to come from adjacent points, the full force of the fierce wind that swept this part of Oakland county is beginning to be appreciated. Everywhere is devastation. Villages that were yesterday the homes of contented citizens are today desolate sights, and maimed and bruised fathers, mothers, brothers and sisters mourn for those who met death in the twisting, grinding resistless wind.

The death roll in this vicinity may run to the hundred mark, for many homes that were on the edges of the cyclone suffered from its fury. At Oakwood, a hamlet five miles north of Oxford, having a population of about 200, not a house is left standing. Two churches are flattened to the earth. The path of the storm was between half and three-fourths of a mile wide and extended in a nearly straight course eastward for over a distance of thirty miles. A remarkable circumstance is that the buildings in close proximity to each other were blown in opposite directions, some being swept northward and others southward. The following are known to have been killed in Oakland county:

NEAR ORTONVILLE.
W. J. Mitchell, wife and two children.
Daniel Thompson and son.
Abraham Tealck, wife and two children.
Mrs. Henry Quick.
John Wilkins.
John Porritt.
Mrs. Joseph Porritt.
John Milkey.
T. E. Gleason.
Mrs. T. D. Eaton.
Abe Kitchell.
Mrs. William Kitchell.
Edwin Fifield.
Mrs. Stuart.
Mrs. Wolverton.
Mrs. William Davidson and daughter Ida.
Ed Fifield.
Child of Alfred Fifield.
Ed Howe is fatally injured.

AT THOMAS.
Charles Hicks and son.
Mrs. Austin Slate.
Charles Hicks and son.
A. L. Addison.
Thomas Bishop.

AT NORTH OXFORD.
Mrs. Oscar Slate.
Thomas Bishop.
A farm laborer, name unknown.
Joseph Smiley and son.

INJURED.
Frank Laidlaw and child, Mrs. Laidlaw, seriously hurt.

At Thomas: Mrs. C. A. Hicks, frightfully crushed; Mrs. Sid Copeman, will not live; Elvory Hicks, badly crushed; T. P. Knapp, head badly bruised; William Althouse, internal injuries; George Hibler, both legs broken; William Carr, fearfully bruised, injured internally; Charles Bradley, injured about the head; A. M. Kidder, arm badly shattered.

At Oakwood: Al Fifield, both legs broken; daughter Jessie, badly injured; Harvey Francis, internal injuries, cannot live; Myron Johnson, leg broken; Mrs. E. A. Howe, and two children.

Young son of William Davidson.
Daughter of Charles Fifield.
Edward Howe's 3-year-old child.

Scores of people have been injured whose names cannot be ascertained. Most of the destruction in Thomas is near the railway station, which is badly broken up. The Sage hotel has hardly a window left, and the roof has been torn away.

Near Ortonville, between twenty and twenty-five were more or less seriously injured.

CAIRO'S CALAMITY.

Storm Capsizes a Ferry Boat and Drowns Thirteen.

Cairo, Ill., May 26.—A hurricane and cloud burst struck this city at 8:30 this morning. Thirteen lives are known to be lost by the sinking of a steam ferryboat at the wharf. Five miles of telegraph poles were blown on the Mobile & Ohio railway. It is impossible to tell the extent of the damage south of here, but it is believed to be very great.

The storm struck this locality at 8:30 a. m. There was a terrific wind and rain. The opera house and Union depot were unroofed. Numbers of trees were destroyed and signs blown down, but no houses were destroyed nor lives lost in the city. The ferryboat Katharine was capsized at the mouth of the Ohio, drowning all on board but the captain, engineer and clerk. As near as can be learned the dead number thirteen, among them are:

Capt. Rittenhouse, superintendent of the Ferry company.
Dr. Orr's two daughters.
Richard Thurman, of Wickliffe.
Charles Gilhoffer, a merchant of this city.

Only three bodies, those of Thurman, Miss Orr and a deck hand, have been recovered. A tug is searching for the others. Business in the city is practically at a standstill.

The following were killed: Charles Gilohofer, Cairo; Daniel Hayes, Cairo; a colored woman, Cairo; Edward Rittenhouse, Cairo; Mr. Stanley and Miss Stanley, Wickliffe, Ky.; Richard Thurman, a printer, Cairo; Mrs. William Shannon and baby, Birds' Point; Mrs. Mary Jones, Jackson, Tenn.; Lewis Hall, Hall, colored, Cairo; Asbury Alexander, colored, Wickliffe, Ky.; George Davis, colored, Cairo; Miss Orr, Birds' Point.

The saved were: Joe Curry, Capt. John Hacker, Clerk A. R. Pavey, Engineer McGee, all of Cairo; Dr. Orr, of Birds' Point; Mr. Richardson and an unknown man.

At Birds' Point, Mo., opposite this city, a church and ten buildings were moved from their foundations, trees were blown across tracks and trains interfered with.

M'GREGOR'S DEAD.

Little Iowa Town Was Terribly Stricken.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 26.—Later reports from North McGregor, Iowa, relative to the terrible havoc caused by the storm and flood which visited that place on Sunday night, show that the destruction of the vast interests of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road, at that point, as well as of the little town, are about complete, the total damage to property of the company alone being today estimated at $125,000.

The loss of human life, the worst phase of the terrible affair, will probably be found to be nearer twenty than ten. Of thirteen persons known to be missing, the bodies of six had been recovered up to last night, but as the water is receding very slowly, but little by the way of the search for bodies, or the recovery of railroad and other property has as yet been done.

It is stated by officials of the St. Paul road, now at the scene, that it will be at least ten days before the company can resume the operation of its line running west from McGregor.

DROWNED HER CHILDREN.

Belton, Mo., May 26.—Mrs. Mark Frost, wife of a prominent farmer residing at Cleveland, near here, drowned two of her children and herself last evening. Mr. Frost was absent at Kansas City when the tragedy occurred. Mr. and Mrs. Frost had been married six years and were in good circumstances. No cause for the act is known.

AT MT. CLEMENS.

Several Fatal and Many Severe Injuries Noted.

Mt. Clemens, Mich., May 26.—Last night's cyclone left a track 550 feet wide through the southern part of town, which looks as though a reaper with a gigantic scythe had been endeavoring to mow a harvest. Fortunately nearly everybody was in such a position as to avoid fatalities. No one was killed outright and none of the injured have died. The injured so far as known are: Mrs. Anna Popl, widow, back broken, injured internally, breast crushed in, will not live.

Henry Popl, injured internally.

Adolph Popl, aged 12, right leg broken, bruised about shoulders and body.

Willie Popl, aged 10, injured internally, right leg broken, recovery doubtful.

Mrs. Harder, injured internally, cut about head and arms.

Russell Carter, head and face cut.

Mrs. Russell Carter, injured internally, breast and shoulders bruised, recovery doubtful.

Gustav Cutche, cut on head and right arm broken.

Mrs. William Ormsby, left arm broken and badly cut on face.

A WISCONSIN TORNADO.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 26.—A special to the Wisconsin from Appleton, Wis., says: A strip of country a quarter of a mile wide and several miles long, in the towns of Center and Freedom, Outagamie county, was devastated by a tornado last evening. One dwelling was wrecked and barns, outbuildings and fences were swept away like chaff. Timber and crops were levelled and cattle injured and killed, but no person was hurt.

STORM SPLINTERS.

Galena, Ill., had a severe rain storm last night which did over $100,000 damage. Every railroad is blocked tightly.

CROWNED

Czar and Czarina Are Finally Crowned in Moscow Today.

The Coronation Ceremonies Were Gorgeous and Were Carried Out Finely.

An Imposing Civic and Military Parade During the Ceremony.

Moscow, May 26.—(Copyright 1896 by the Associated Press)—His majesty the Emperor Nicholas Alexandrovitch, autocrat of all the Russias, and her majesty the Empress Alexandria Feodorova were solemnly crowned today in the cathedral of the Assumption with the utmost ceremony and in accordance with all the religious forms and ancient rites.

At 7 o'clock this morning the ceremonies commenced with a salute of twenty-one cannon shots marking the opening of the day, and at the same hour the bell of the cathedral of the Assumption began ringing. Half an hour later the court dignitaries and distinguished persons who were to take part in the imperial cortege began to assemble in the halls of the palace and in the cathedral. The ladies wore court dress and the dignitaries were in full uniform. The envoys extraordinary, the ambassadors, the ministers plenipotentiary and charges d'affairs, with their wives, as well as the representatives of the diplomatic corps, assembled at the palace of the Kremlin shortly after 8 o'clock and were invited by the masters of the ceremonies to repair to the cathedral of the Assumption and take the place reserved for them.

Previous to this an immense body of troops had been gathering around the Kremlin, and from one end to the other of the route followed by the imperial party in passing from the palace to the cathedral of the Assumption, and from there to the other cathedrals of Kremlin, troops formed double lines on both sides, those immediately protecting their majesties being the grenadiers of the palace and detachments from the various cavalry regiments. The troops were also stationed in the palace, officers in brilliant uniforms being placed conspicuously at all the doors and turnings of the corridors.

A Te Deum was celebrated in the cathedral at 8 o'clock in the morning, and after prayers the clergy in full canonicals assembled in front of the cathedral to receive her majesty, the ex-Czarina Marie Feodorovna. The latter on the conclusion of the Te Deum, repaired to the cathedral of the Assumption, accompanied by the members of the imperial family of the highest rank, with the exception of those who were to take part in the emperor's procession, and by the distinguished guests of their majesties. The train of the ex-czarina was carried by four chamberlains and the imperial mantle was held up by two court officials on either side.

From the last step of the Krasnoe Kryltso up to the cathedral entrance, eight court dignitaries of the third class carried the canopy beneath which the ex-empress walked, and the golden cords of the canopy, a most gorgeous construction, were carried by eight court dignitaries of the third class. After leaving the throne hall, her majesty, immediately preceded by two masters of ceremonies and by the grand master of ceremonies, all three carrying the insignia of their office, and by a number of gentlemen of the chamber, court chamberlains, dignitaries of the grand ducal courts, dignitaries of the foreign courts, and officials belonging to the imperial court, and the whole party was preceded by two runners, four equerries of the court and an equerry of the chamber.

In front of the cathedral of the Assumption, her majesty was received by the metropolitan of Moscow, who presented her with the cross and holy water. Her majesty then received the benediction of the clergy, and was escorted to her seat on the throne of the Czar Alexis Mikhalovitch, which had been placed on a special estrade for the occasion and surmounted by a beautiful canopy. Their imperial highnesses, the grand duchess and the grand dukes and the august guests of their majesties, took the places set apart for them, and the grand master of ceremonies of the imperial court stationed himself to the right of the estrade. The members of the military household of the grand dukes and foreign princes were afterwards escorted to their places by masters of ceremonies.

A moment later a signal announced that the time had arrived for the departure of the imperial cortege, and the latter moved toward the cathedral. The grand procession was headed by the Chevalier guards of the ex-Empress Marie Feodorovna. Following were the imperial pages, representatives of the syndics of the rural communes, the mayors of the leading cities, and members of the various local governments, presidents of the committee and financial bodies, and of artisans' guilds of Moscow, etc. These were followed by Cossack soldiers and people, delegations from the nobility, the senate, the church, etc.

The imperial insignia borne by high court dignitaries, included the collar of the Order of St. Andrew of the czarina; the sword, the standard and the seal of the empress, the imperial mantles of their majesties, the globe, the scepter, and the crowns of the empress and emperor. These were followed by ceremonial officials, preceding the emperor and empress, walking beneath canopies borne by aides-de-camps. After these came representatives of the hereditary nobility, and interspersed throughout were military officers and soldiers, whose brilliant uniforms made the cathedral resplendent. At the moment the imperial cortege appeared leaving the palace, the bells in all the churches of Moscow were rung, and the troops, in parade order, presented arms and rendered all military honors to the imperial party.

As their majesties approached the entrance of the cathedral the metropolitan of Moscow pronounced the usual allocution, the metropolitan of St. Petersburg presented the cross of their majesties, and the metropolitan of Kieff presented them with holy water. Entering the cathedral their majesties bowed to the knee three times before a holy door and venerated the saintly images. They afterwards moved toward the estrade, and took their seats on the throne of the Czars Michael Fedorovitch and John III. The archbishops, archimandits and the official clergy placed themselves in two ranks between the estrades of the thrones and the door and the choirs chanted the psalm.

Other auxiliaries to the pageant were grouped about in suitable order. The ceremony of the coronation and anointment was then accomplished as follows:

The metropolitan of St. Petersburg mounted the steps of the throne, placed himself in front of the emperor and invited his majesty to make before his faithful subjects, and in a loud voice, his profession of orthodox faith, and presented him with the open book from which the emperor recited the symbol of the faith. After this the metropolitan of St. Petersburg pronounced the ritual. The metropolitan then left the estrade, and, after the reading of the holy gospel, the metropolitans of St. Petersburg and of Kieff mounted the steps to the throne.

The emperor arose, and taking off the collar of the order of St. Andrew, ordered that the imperial mantle with the collar, in diamonds, of that order, be presented to him. They were presented on cushions by the metropolitans of St. Petersburg and Kieff, who assisted his majesty to put on the mantle. His majesty received the pontifical benediction of the metropolitan of St. Petersburg, who placed his hand on the czar's head in the form of a cross, reciting two prayers prescribed by the ritual. The prayers terminated, the emperor ordered that the imperial crown be presented to him. Thereupon the metropolitan of St. Petersburg took the imperial crown and handed it to the emperor, who took it in his hands and placed it on his head. The metropolitan then, in a loud voice, pronounced the prescribed allocution.

In a similar manner his majesty caused to be presented to him the scepter and the globe, and having taken the scepter in his right hand and the globe in his left hand, he seated himself upon the throne. A few moments later his majesty arose and placed the scepter and globe upon the cushions. The monarch then called upon her majesty, the Empress Alexandra Feodora, to approach and she knelt before him on a velvet cushion richly embroidered with gold. His majesty thereupon solemnly lifted the crown from his own head and touched with it the forehead of the empress. He then replaced the crown upon his own head. His majesty afterwards took up the crown of the empress and placed it on the head of her majesty. Her majesty's imperial mantle, and the collar of the order of St. Andrew were next presented with the same ceremony. This done, her majesty took her seat upon the throne, while the emperor again took the scepter in his right hand and the globe in his left. The archdeacon next proclaimed the imperial title in extenso

WOMEN

Third Biennial Meeting of the Federation of Women's Clubs.

A Large Attendance is Expected and Numerous Speakers Promised.

Miss Margaret Evans, of Minnesota, Will Represent the Northwest.

Louisville, May 26.—The third biennial meeting of the General Federation of Women's Clubs will convene in this city this week. A large attendance is expected and many distinguished visitors have signified their intention of being present. Among the speakers will be Mrs. Helen Campbell, of Chicago; Miss Agnes Repplier, of Philadelphia; Miss Amelia Hofer, president of the International Kindergarten association; Mrs. Sarah B. Cooper, of San Francisco; Mrs. Virginia J. Berryhill, Des Moines; Mrs. Ella H. Osgood, Portland, Me.; Mrs. Lucia E. Blount, Washington; Miss Mary D. Steele, Dayton, Ohio; Mrs. Elizabeth Lyle Saxon, New Orleans; Mrs. Annie McKinney, Knoxville, Tenn. Among the prominent women expected to speak are Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, Miss Susan B. Anthony, Mrs. Belva A. Lockwood and Mrs. Mary E. Lease.

The first meeting of this federation of clubs was called in 1890 by the New York Sorosis. The first biennial meeting convened in Chicago in 1892, the second in Philadelphia in 1894. This Federation of Women's Clubs has no special measures to further. It does not permit organized effort; among its clubs for woman suffrage or municipal reform, however much individual members may encourage such works. Its objects are general improvement, and the furthering of common sympathy and encouragement among the members. Some very weighty questions will be handled at the convention, and they will be presented by the ablest minds in the feminine world. At its meeting in Washington a year ago last February the executive committee of the Women's National Council created a sensation by one of its propositions, but the proposition never came to much, and it will probably be revived at the Louisville convention and develop into an actual fact. The proposition was nothing less than the formation of an organization to include a senate and a house of representatives, and a cabinet composed of officials representing popular departments of women's work. It also provided for a president and for the erection of a temple to answer the same purpose that the capitol does to the government. The council relied upon 8,000,000 of organized women to aid it in realizing this project. The federation has the same societies to call upon, namely: The W. C. T. U., 1,000,000 members; the King's Daughters, 800,000; the National Woman's Suffrage association, 1,200,000; the ten Domestic and Foreign Missionary unions, 2,000,000; the Kindergarten, 100,000; the Business Women's association, 700,000; the stenographers and typewriters, 500,000; five college alumni associations, the National Jewish Women's council, the Women's Relief corps and the National Association of Loyal Women of American Liberty. The central idea of this organization was to legislate by an ideal government, morally, for the women of the country. There was to have been a department of philanthropy, education, law, sciences, art, domestic relations, household economics and history. This is only one of the gigantic propositions which will be placed before the convention.

Two familiar figures will be absent, Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Miss Frances E. Willard. The latter is in London, and the weight of eighty years is too much even for the enthusiasm of Mrs. Stanton. One of the picturesque figures at the convention will be Mrs. Julia Ward Howe. She founded the New England Woman's club away back in 1868. She is now president of the Massachusetts State

Ruth McEnery, of New York, and many others of equal note and ability. The meeting will last three days. On the evening of May 27 a reception will be tendered the General Federation by the Women's club of Louisville.

There are between 450 and 500 women's clubs enrolled upon the list of membership of the General Federation of Women's Clubs alone. On that list there are also sixteen state federations of women's clubs, representing Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New York, New Jersey, Ohio, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, Kansas, Utah, Colorado, Kentucky, Michigan and the District of Columbia. Georgia and Florida have formed federations, but have not yet joined the general. Tennessee, Pennsylvania, Missouri and Washington have appointed committees on federation. The G. F. W. C. also embraces the Bombay Sorosis, of Bombay, India; the Women's Educational society, of Ceylon, Sangamisa, Ceylon, and the Girls' Literary society, of Adelaide, Australia.

The president of the federation is Mrs. Ellen M. Henroth, of Chicago, who won considerable fame at the women's congress at the World's fair. The other officers are: Vice president, Mrs. Mary E. Mumford, of Philadelphia; recording secretary, Mrs. C. P. Barnes, of Louisville; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Philip N. Moore, of St. Louis; treasurer, Mrs. Sarah B. Cooper, of San Francisco; auditor, Mrs. Fanny Purdy Palmer, of Providence. The members of the advisory board are Mrs. Sarah M. Johnson, Orange, N. J.; Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, Boston; Mrs. J. C. Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

DOUBLE DOMESTIC TRAGEDY.

Palouse, Wash., May 26.—Albert Taye killed his wife and then committed suicide at the farm of A. Torrey, about five miles south of here, last night. Taye killed his wife because she would not live with him.

THE DAKOTAS.

NORTH DAKOTA.

A meeting of the executive committee of the state Y. M. R. L. was held at Fargo to arrange for work to be done during the coming campaign. They are promised financial assistance from the state central committee, and will prove a powerful factor in state politics this fall.—Theodore Franks, one of the oldest mail carriers in this city, was discharged this morning as a result of charges filed against him by Postoffice Inspector Clement a month ago, alleging the malicious destruction of mail matter.—Democratic caucuses to select delegates to the county convention at Casselton were held last evening.

Farmers are through seeding wheat at Cando and are busy sowing oats and flax. Owing to the continuous rains the ground is thoroughly soaked and some fields are so wet that no crop can be put in this year. The wheat acreage in this county will be about 70 per cent, compared with last year.

On the last day of the Catholic laymen's second annual convention, to be held at Fargo June 2 and 3, the bishops of the archdiocese of St. Paul will hold an important conference. Archbishop Ireland and Bishops McGolrick, of Duluth; Cotter, of Winona; O'Gorman, of Sioux Falls; Marty, of St. Cloud, and Shanley, of Fargo, will be present.

A terrific hail storm struck Devil's Lake Monday, lasting about fifteen minutes. Some hail stones measured five inches in circumference. Nearly all windows facing west and north were demolished. The day was oppressively warm, and the hail storm was preceded by a heavy wind storm and followed by heavy rain. The estimated damage in the city is $3000. The heavy rain stops seeding.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

All along the western borders the roundup camp fires burn brightly now, says a Fort Pierre dispatch. Far to the west, bounded only by the snow-capped Rockies, hundreds of mess wagons staked camp for the first time last night. The Missouri river marks the Eastern border of the great Western ranges. In Dakota alone at least 1500 riders are now engaged in rounding up cattle and branding the calf crop. Twenty-five outfits have planned and laid out their routes, and at least six weeks of continuous riding will be necessary to do the work. Fifty to sixty riders will follow each wagon or outfit.

A case of accidental shooting occurred in Webster Monday, the victim being the 5-year-old son of State Senator Kelley. The little fellow got hold of a loaded revolver and managed to shoot himself in the abdomen. The physician has not found the ball yet, and is of the opinion that the wound is not a fatal one, but very dangerous.

A cloudburst occurred ten miles northeast of Brookings Sunday, doing considerable damage to crops. The bottom lands north of here are flooded with water. A farmer living ten miles north states that thirty minutes after the storm commenced water stood eight inches deep on the level. A man coming to town this morning from the north with a load of hogs came near drowning himself and team by driving off a bridge into the raging torrent of water which came down the valley.

STATE SUPREME COURT.

Justice Mitchell Decides an Octette of Cases.

St. Paul, Minn., May 26.—Justice Mitchell, of the supreme court, handed down eight decisions yesterday. One, which will probably affect a large number of settlers on the Hastings & Dakota road, holds that, although lands may have been withdrawn since it was never restored to settlement and entry, the withdrawal continues in force, and no lawful settlement can be acquired, or, in other words the settlers cannot acquire title thereto. The order of the lower court is affirmed. The title of the case is Russell Sage, assignee of the Hastings & Dakota Railway company, respondent, vs. N. S. Swenson, appellant.

Other decisions were: George W. Chambers as administrator, etc., respondent, vs. the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company, appellant. Order affirmed.

Mary R. Major, respondent, vs. Home Savings and Loan association, appellant. Order for judgment modified.

Peter Miesen, respondent, vs. Harry Canfield, appellant. Order affirmed.

St. Paul Title Insurance and Trust company, respondent, vs. Sverke O. Johnson et al., defendants, Benjamin F. Knauft, appellant. Order affirmed.

James McCormick, respondent, vs. Robert Louden, appellant; Thomas Boyle, respondent, vs. Robert Louden, appellant. Order affirmed.

John E. Jensen, appellant, vs. The Chicago Great Western Railroad company, respondent. Order affirmed.

Florence E. Adams, respondent, vs. Arthur H. Castle et al., defendants. Arthur H. Castle, appellant. Order affirmed.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Gov. Clough's Proclamation Relative to Next Saturday.

St. Paul, May 26.—Governor Clough has issued a proclamation calling the attention of the people to Memorial day, which occurs next Saturday, and which by legislative law is made a holiday for this state. The governor desires the people of the state to refrain from their usual labors and business and show their devotion to the cause of the flag and country.

BRITISH BARK MISSING.

San Francisco, May 26.—Shipping men believe the British bark Cambusdoon has been lost at sea. She left Java carrying a cargo of sugar for Vancouver, Jan. 2, and has not been sighted nor heard from since. She has been out 145 days on a voyage that should have been made in about ninety days, making her fifty-five days overdue. She has now consumed much more time than was required for the longest trip on record from Java to Vancouver. The London underwriters have offered 25 per cent for reinsurance on the bark and her cargo, which carries about $300,000 insurance. The Cambusdoon was commanded by Capt. MacDonald and carried a crew of thirty men.

TRUST COMPANY SUSPENDS.

Seattle, Wash., May 26.—The Guarantee Loan and Trust company closed its doors yesterday and assigned for the benefit of its creditors, naming Jacob Further, of the Puget Sound National bank, as assignee. It is said the creditors will be paid in full. The failure created no stir, as it has been known for some time that the bank would not last long. Injudicious loans on Washington property are blamed for the failure.

PROHIBS

The National Prohibition Convention to Open at Pittsburg Tomorrow.

Principal Contest Will Be on the Question of the Platform.

The Narrow Gaugers and the Broad Gaugers Will Do Battle.

Pittsburg, May 26.—The national Prohibition convention meets here tomorrow. The sessions are to be held in the new music hall of the Expositon society. Samuel Dickie, chairman of the national committee, will call the convention to order. Among the leading candidates for the presidential nomination are Joshua Levering, of Baltimore, who represents the "Narrow Gauge" wing; C. E. Bently, of Illinois, the favorite of the "Broad Gaugers;" R. S. Thompson, of Springfield, Ohio; H. Clay Bascom, of New York; Col. G. W. Bain, of Kentucky, Miss Willard's candidate; Theodore R. Carskaddon, of West Virginia; Henry Metcalf, of Rhode Island, and John G. Woolley, of Chicago. Tonight the oratorical contest of the National Intercollegiate Prohibition association will take place.

Homer L. Castle, chairman of the Allegheny county prohibition committee, says there will be no consolidation with Daniel Swoger's national reform party, but that the Prohibitionists intend making their own platform and going it alone. Nevertheless, it is understood that Swoger and his National Reform cohorts, who met here in national convention yesterday, will make an attempt to capture the cold-water convention by means of a combination with the "Broad Gaugers."

At the convention there will be 1240 delegates and 1240 alternates, and at a minimum calculation an attendance of 15,000 people is expected. The principal contest in the convention will be on the question of platform. Generally speaking, the West is in favor of a broad platform, the supporters of which wish to go in for all manner of reforms all over the country, while the East favors the single-plank platform, which has for its object the destruction of the liquor traffic only.

That there is a serious split in the ranks of the Prohibitionists no one who is on the inside doubts. It has made itself felt in the East in a very decided way. E. J. Wheeler, the brainy editor of the Voice, the Prohibition organ, who has done more to make it a power, it is said, than even Dr. J. K. Funk, recently had a row with Dr. Funk, the proprietor, who objected to Mr. Wheeler's sympathy with the Western idea. Mr. Wheeler therefore threw up his position and went West. He will be one of the leaders on the floor of the convention.

For several years the party has been becoming more and more divided in regard to the policy that should be pursued. One faction, having its center of influence in New York, known as "Narrow Gauge" Prohibitionists, favor a single-plank platform, and that, of course, dealing with the question of prohibition alone. This wing has the support of the New York Voice, John G. Woolley, the gospel temperance evangelist; William T. Wardwell, the treasurer of the Standard Oil monopoly; H. B. Metcalf, a Rhode Island manufacturer, and others of wealth or influence. Opposed to these are the "Broad Gauge" Prohibitionists, who urge that the party should declare itself upon the leading issues of the day in a candid and sincere manner. Among these may be mentioned ex-Governor John P. St. John, Frances E. Willard, John A. Bidwell—in short, the ablest of the old-time leaders.

C. H. Mead.

That this division imperils the existence of the party is made apparent in a recent interview with Frances E. Willard. She refers to the probability of the formation of a new party, providing the "single-plank" advocates win at Pittsburg, and very significantly adds that the suffragists and W. C. T. U. would undoubtedly leave the old organization for the new one. The national W. C. T. U. has been a powerful ally of the Prohibition party since the memorable St. John campaign of 1884, furnishing it with many of its strongest newspapers, speakers and supporting in a large degree its political campaigns. The loss of this ally would mean a great deal in prestige, resources and votes.

Undoubtedly there will be nearly as spirited a contest for the national chairmanship as for the leadership of the national ticket. The present incumbent, Professor Samuel Dickie, of Albion, Mich., is a "single-plank" advocate, and is said to be decidedly unpopular in the West and South. He desires re-election. He will have a formidable opponent in L. B. Logan, state chairman of Ohio. Mr. Logan is very popular with the "broad-guage" faction.

WEST END

J. E. Johnson Was Given a Bad Pounding Saturday Evening.

Peter Nelson and Peter Anteen Were Arrested this Morning.

Republican Club Will Have An Interesting Meeting Tomorrow Evening.

On Saturday evening J. E. Johnson, a millwright, was slugged and knocked senseless on Central avenue, in front of the Great Eastern store, about 12 o'clock at night. He was taken so quick that he could not detect who his assailants were or for what purpose he was so attacked. He was rendered unconscious for a time and his face has since been in a swollen and lacerated condition. The police department has been working on the case and the matter has been kept quiet in order that their plans may not be thwarted.

Circumstantial evidence pointed strongly to Peter Nelson and Peter Anteen as the assailants and these parties have been arrested and their preliminary hearing took place at the municipal court this morning.

THE REPUBLICAN CLUB.

The West Duluth Republican club will hold its regular bi-monthly meeting at the city hall tomorrow evening. Speeches will be made by D. M. Devoe and J. O. Hancock. As the congressional and state conventions will be held early next month some discussion will probably take place in regard to the congressional and state tickets. C. A. Towne will no doubt receive the unanimous endorsement of the club for a renomination, but no expression has yet been made as to the governorship, and from this time on the meetings of the club will undoubtedly be intensely interesting.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

J. A. Keaney has gone to Virginia, where he has received a position.

G. T. Gunniss has moved his family to Duluth.

Mrs. Clark, formerly of the Hotel Bennett, has gone to St. Paul to reside.

L. A. Barnes denies that he is a candidate for county commissioner in his district.

Mrs. A. E. Huntoon is now among the sick. Freddie Huntoon, upon whom an operation was performed a short time ago for appendicitis, is reported to be doing nicely.

The teachers and pupils of the Irving school have prepared a special program of recitations and songs for Memorial day exercises Friday afternoon. The program will also include a song by Mrs. Olund and a cornet solo by Harry Lammers.

The Ladies' Aid society of the Congregational church, of West Duluth, will meet with Mrs. Mars tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Is Probably Insane.

An individual giving his name as D. P. Dolen, and who is thought to be insane, was found wandering about in the apartments of F. A. Cutliffe, at 522 West First street, this forenoon.

When discovered by members of the family, occupying the first floor of the house, Dolen was opening doors and peering into closets. In response to a question as to his business, he said he was looking for the "Simms boys." He readily acceded to a proposition to take a walk and accompanied Mr. Cutliffe as far as Superior street, where Officer Whalen was met. The latter took charge of Dolen and sent him to the station. He will be taken before Judge Ayer for an inquiry as to his sanity today.

He Identified It.

Mayor Truelsen was asked to step into police headquarters this forenoon to assist in identifying a "suspect" that had been brought in. The "suspect" was a picture—it was suspected to resemble the mayor. It is really an excellent likeness in crayon. The picture was sent in by Joseph Orechovsky to be hung in headquarters.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Why is one woman attractive and another not? The most admirable and attractive thing about an attractive woman is her womanliness. Everybody admires a womanly woman. She must have health, of course, because without it she would lose the brightness of her eyes, the fullness of her cheeks and her vivacity. Real health must mean that a woman is really a woman. That she is strong and perfect in a sexual way, as well as in every other. That she is capable of performing perfectly the duties of maternity. Some are born with what is called "constitutional weakness." Those who do not enjoy perfect health, need only take the proper precautions and the proper remedy to become perfectly well and strong. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will cure any derangement of the distinctly feminine organism. Sold by druggists.

four, and many injured in yesterday's cyclone. A Mrs. Hildebrand was beheaded while going down into the cellar to escape the storm.

Egan City, Ill., shows one death, two fatally injured and many others slightly hurt.

At Adeline, Ill., one church was blown down and another unroofed, and at Foreston the church roof was blown over into the parsonage, badly injuring Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Colvin, who were asleep.

Corrected death lists of the Iowa cyclonic storms and floods fix the number at forty-three, with nearly 100 injured. The property loss is simply enormous and cannot now be accurately estimated.

At Elgin, Ills., the storm blew away the tents of four smallpox patients just outside the city, and the afflicted people took refuge in a cabin near by.

At La Cygne, Kas., a sudden rise in the river caused great damage and several lines were washed out. Crops are obliterated.

A BRITISH OPINION.

San Francisco, May 26.—Sir Henry Deering, the English minster to the Mexican republic, arrived here last night from the City of Mexico. In discussing Mexican affairs he said: "Business conditions are good in Mexico. Copper is being exported more than any other minerals at present. Silver is the money of the country and the great premium on gold is tending to lessen imports and increase local production of cotton, jute and woolen goods. The latter are more or less crude, but are meeting the demand of the people.

Wheat Sold Down Again Today With Dull and Slow Trading.

The Receipts at the Northwestern Points Showed an Increase.

World's Shipments Were Large and Weather Conditions Favorable.

Opening prices for wheat were about yesterday's closing figures. Northwest receipts again showed an increase and the weather conditions were generally favorable. The world's shipments were very large. Traders were generally inclined to the bear side and with numerous selling orders the market became dull and weak and a gradual decline set in. There was a slight rally near the close. July opened unchanged at 61c, sold down to 60¾c, but reacted to 60⅝c at noon. During the last fifteen minutes, after ruling dull and steady it sold up to 60¾c. September opened ⅛c lower at 61⅛c and advanced ⅜c. The result of the day's trading was that September lost ⅝c of its spread over July. The mills bought 75,000 bus to arrive at the July price. Shippers bought 100,000 bus, paying ⅛c under July for car lots, ⅜c under for round lots to arrive and ⅝c under for round lots in store. The close was ½c lower all round than yesterday, except for September, which was ⅜c lower. Following were the closing prices:

Wheat—No. 1 hard, cash, 61¼c; May, 61¾@c; July, 62c. No. 1 northern, cash, 60c; May, 60c; June, 60¼c; July, 60½c asked; September, 60⅝c asked. No. 2 northern, cash, 57¼@57⅝c. No. 3, 55½@57½c. Rejected, 52½@53½c. No. 2 red, 61¼c. No. 3 hard, 61¼c. No. 1 northern, 60c. Rye, 32½c. No. 2 oats, 18¾@19c; No. 3 oats, 18¼@18½c. Flax, 86c.

Car inspection—Wheat, 390; oats, 50; rye, 10; barley, 28; flax, 10. Receipts—Wheat, 137,485 bus; oats, 17,500 bus; rye, 7131 bus; barley, 4117 bus; flax, 1955 bus. Shipments—Wheat, 256,156 bus; oats, 2811 bus; barley, 51,788 bus; flax, 37,908 bus.

GOSSIP.

Received over private wire of R. E. Baker, grain and stock broker, room 107 Chamber of Commerce and 207 Board of Trade, Chicago, May 26.—The weakness in wheat continues and a further decline was recorded today. The market appears demoralized and goes down in face of strong bullish news. Crop reports continue to come confirmatory of great damage in various localities, and the decline allowed about 250,000 bus to be taken for export at New York. The same good buying for investment was noted here by parties who still have in mind the fact that no great amount of money was ever yet lost in buying wheat under 60c. In the face of this the market closed weak and looks like a further decline. English cables are apt to indicate lower markets tomorrow, when the holidays there are over and operators come back and note our decline and the large world's shipments. The crop situation may be serious and may tell later on, but at present it is overshadowed by the rapidly increasing seaboard stocks and the unfavorable business situation.

Corn and oats easier on country selling but local shorts were good buyers.

Provisions weak but decline arrested by heavy purchases to cover short sales by local operators.

and intoned the verses, "Domine, salvum fac imperatorem" and "Domine, Halvam fac imperatricem," followed by the "Admultos Annos," which the choir repeated three times.

After the chanting the bells of the cathedral, and of all other sacred edifices throughout Moscow were rung, and a salute of 101 cannons was fired. The emperor then arose, handed the scepter and the globe to the attendants, and knelt down to recite from the book presented him by the metropolitan of St. Petersburg, the prayer prescribed for the occasion. The prayer terminated, the metropolitan and all present knelt and, in the name of the nation, offered up prayers to the Almighty.

After the prayer, the metropolitan of St. Petersburg read a short allocution. During this ceremony the czar stood with bared head. The reading the holy gospel followed and two of the archbishops presented the holy book to their majesties to kiss.

The anthem terminated and the officiating clergy, having been notified that the holy door was open, two archbishops, assisted by archdeacons, advanced from the altar towards his majesty to announce to the latter that the holy ceremony of the anointment was to begin. Thereupon his majesty, having handed his sword to one of his august assistants descended from the throne and preceded by the scepter, the globe and the crown, went towards the holy door followed by the Empress Alexandra Feodorovna.

The metropolitan of St. Petersburg bearing the precious amphora with the holy chrism, dipped it in the golden bowl prepared for the purpose, and anointed the forehead, eyelids, nostrils, lips, ears, chest and hands of the emperor announcing the words: "Impressio Deni spiritus sancti." The ringing of bells and the firing of the salute of 101 cannons notified the populace of the conclusion of the ceremony.

After the holy unction, his majesty placed himself on the right, in front of the image of the Savior, and the empress approached the holy door where the metropolitan of St. Petersburg anointed her on the forehead, pronouncing the words of the ritual. The metropolitan of St. Petersburg afterwards introduced the emperor into the sanctuary by the private door, the other prelates officiating, holding up the imperial mantle from the moment he passed the door. Subsequently the emperor received holy communion as it is administered to priests—that is separately—by virtue of his sovereignty. Leaving the sanctuary his majesty again took up his place before the image of the Savior, while the empress received holy communion according to the usual rite. Their majesties returned to their thrones where the post communion ceremonies were performed, and at the end of the mass the archdeacon intoned the verses: "Domine, salilum, fac imperatoriem," and "Domine salvum fac imperatricem," the choir repeating three times "Ad Multos Annos." At the end of the service the clergy presented the cross to the emperor to kiss. The emperor placed the crown on his head, again took the scepter, and the clergy and all those present bowed. The procession then moved back to the place in the same order and with the same ceremony, as upon the occasion of entering it, preceded by the cortege of the ex-Empress Marie Feodorovna.

After leaving the cathedral, the emperor and empress repaired to the Cathedral of the Archangel Michael, where they were received by the bishop of Kostroma, who presented them with the cross and holy water and preceded them into the cathedral.

NEW YORK STOCKS.

A Quiet and Lower Opening Was Recorded.

New York, May 26.—The stock market opened quiet and lower, with Sugar leading trade. The market was unfavorably influenced by lower quotations for Americans in London, but the concessions in prices were only fractional. The share speculation became firmer in tone after 10:15, with the dealings, however, very much contracted. Sugar and Western Union gained ⅞ per cent, but the improvements in the railway list were trivial. Consolidated Gas was a notable exception to the general trend of prices, and sold down 1½ per cent. The market at 11 o'clock was steady at the gains noted.

Further fractional gains were made in the general list and Sugar touched 123. Near midday, however, a general selling movement started with Leather conspicuous in the declines owing to the failure to secure a quorum to act upon the dividend question. The losses in Sugar and the Grangers were confined to small fractions. The sales to noon were 63,800 shares.

THEY KISS EACH OTHER.

Ottawa, Kan., May 26.—Special trains from all directions have been bringing in Dunlarads to their annual meeting at Forest Park. Fully 10,000 people are in attendance. The men, dressed in their old-fashioned costumes of the quaker, greet each other with a holy kiss. Special trains arriving daily are steadily increasing the attendance. The business sessions begin today.

HOT IN ST. LOUIS.

St. Louis, Mo., May 26.—Yesterday was the warmest day of the already unprecedented hot season, the weather bureau registering 91 degrees in the shade. On the pavement the thermometer was several degrees higher, and but for a breeze from the south, suffering would have been intense. Thomas Coonan, a brass molder, was overcome by the heat and sent to the city hospital. Three girls employed in the laundry of the Planters hotel were prostrated, and it is feared two of them will die.

DEADLY GRADE CROSSING.

THE OFFICIAL NEWSPAPER.

The Herald's bond for the performance of the city printing during the ensuing year was approved by the common council last night, and The Herald is now the official newspaper of the city. Hereafter the official proceedings of the council, and all the legal notices of the city, notices of assessments, calls for bids for improvements, etc., will appear in the advertising columns of The Herald. It will therefore be to the interest of every citizen, in order to keep thoroughly posted on these matters, to become regular subscribers of The Herald.

MR. TOWNE WILL SPEAK.

The assumption of the News Tribune that The Herald has undertaken to "brow-beat" Mr. Towne into declaring himself upon the governorship fight is entirely unwarranted. The Herald has simply voiced the sentiments of many of his friends here that he should no longer leave them in the dark as to his preference. The great majority of them are in favor of Mr. Lee's candidacy, because he is the candidate of the western portion of the Sixth district, and because they desire to work in harmony with the rest of the district, and believe that by so doing they would be paving the way for Mr. Towne's renomination by acclamation upon a platform that would be satisfactory to all Republicans in the district.

Mr. Towne is very busy at Washington. In the closing days of the session the duties of a congressman are multiplied greatly, and for this reason Mr. Towne has been unable to give proper attention to the gubernatorial fight, but The Herald has received assurances that he will soon have something to say in regard to the matter. This will be in line with what The Herald has urged—to let his friends know which candidate he prefers for governor. The Herald is quite sure that Mr. Towne will declare for Mr. Lee, because his own political interests as well as the interests of the rank and file of the Republican party will be benefited by the nomination of Mr. Lee or some other candidate who is opposed to the Merriam-Bixby-Clough combine.

WILL STAND ON THE PLATFORM.

Some of the Eastern papers, acting undoubtedly at the instance of Thomas C. Platt, the New York political boss, are still making war upon Mr. McKinley because he has refused to take any notice of their loudly expressed desire to learn how he stands on the money question. These papers, which really oppose his nomination, are apparently very anxious to know if he is a free silver advocate or a "goldbug." Unless he is in favor of the gold standard, they assert that they will defeat him at St. Louis in spite of the fact that a majority of the delegates elected favor his nomination.

The Cleveland World, which has always been a strong supporter of Mr. McKinley and has been close to him and his managers during the campaign for delegates, thus replies to the papers that have been making these threats: "Mr. McKinley, the Republican candidate, will—as Mr. Reed, or Mr. Morton or Mr. Cullom, or Mr. Quay would have done had any of them been nominated—accept the platform of the Republican party adopted at St. Louis. That is the proper thing to do. It is what any of the other candidates for the nomination would have had to do and would have done. That is what Mr. McKinley will do."

THE REAL ISSUE.

The opponents of Mr. Lee in this county are very anxious to avoid discussion of the real issue in the pending gubernatorial fight. The great issue in the state at large is Merriamism. The question is, shall the Merriam machine be permitted to longer dictate the Republican politics of this state, to name the candidates for governor and other state offices, to write the platforms, to control the legislature and, finally, to place William R. Merriam, the chief exponent of corrupt politics in Minnesota, in the United States senate to succeed Senator Cushman K. Davis? This is the important question to be decided by the Republican party in convention at St. Paul on July 1. It is the question which confronts the Republicans of St. Louis county. Are they ready to bow the knee to Merriamism and to send to St. Paul a delegation that will be controlled by the Merriam machine and vote for Dave Clough and all the other Merriam candidates?

The Herald is confident that the Republicans of St. Louis county will not form any "unholy alliance" of this kind—that Mr. Towne and his friends will not join hands with the machine to aid its purpose of sending to the senate the man who has worked unceasingly, and so far in vain, to bring about the political downfall of Mr. Towne. There is nothing in common between the stand which Mr. Towne has already taken and that corrupt system of politics which is expressed by the term Merriamism. Mr. Towne and his friends cannot afford to join hands for a single moment with the Merriam machine, and this is what they would be doing should they send a Clough delegation to St. Paul.

Mr. Clough represents the Merriam machine in this fight, while Mr. Lee stands as the candidate of the people who are endeavoring to overthrow that obnoxious organization which now has its hand upon the throat of the Republican party in this state. Behind Mr. Clough stands William R. Merriam, pulling all the strings at his command to achieve the ambition of his life—a seat in the United States senate. In fighting for this result he will employ all the disreputable tactics which he has used in former campaigns. The corrupting touch of Merriamism is already visible throughout the state. All the power of the state government is being used to carry out the plans which Mr. Merriam has laid out. State patronage is being dispensed where it will do the most good; state officeholders have been notified that their heads will drop in the basket if they do not support the machine's candidates; county officials have been threatened with political death if they do not aid the machine. This is true as to St. Louis county as well as other counties. The corrupting influence is at work. The machine is cajoling and threatening, and all along the line the Republicans who have the courage to defy the political octopus are meeting with denunciation from the Merriam bosses and their ward-heelers.

In view of these facts, who can doubt for one moment what is the duty of the Republicans of this county? Two years ago they crushed the local Merriam machine. The time has arrived to wipe it out of existence altogether, and this can be done and must be done by electing a delegation that will stand by William E. Lee, the chief opponent of the Merriam machine in this fight.

Bicyclists who oppose the new bicycle ordinance in this city should carefully consider the following statement by President Elliott, of the League of American Wheelmen: "The wheelmen of a certain Western town have refused to obey the ordinance to compel them to carry lamps and bells. They refuse obedience on the ground that other vehicles are exempt from these rules. We doubt the advisability of such a course and have so written them. In the absence of a state law, as we have it in Massachusetts, cities have a right to make such regulations as they please in regard to the carrying of lamps and bells. Proper laws, while they are in force, should be obeyed by all good wheelmen."

According to a Washington dispatch, Minnesota is very liable to have a candidate for the presidency this year. Quite a boom has been started for Ignatius Donnelly, and such men as Senators Kyle and Allen predict his nomination. Last Saturday three county conventions in Alabama endorsed Donnelly, and he is strong in Kansas, Nebraska and the far Western states. Certainly the People's party cannot find an abler or more brilliant candidate than Ignatius Donnelly.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Evening Post, after remarking that complaints of the quality of postal cards, though rare, still come in occasionally, claims that the contractor employed under the last administration furnished better cards than the government required. "By the time," he says, "the Daggett contract had expired the whole country had become so accustomed to the extra fine and strong card, with its metal-like finish, that any successor was bound to suffer by contrast."

Justice Goetting, of Williamsburg, N. Y., has fined a woman $5 for beating her husband. The husband created amusement by asking the judge if he ever had "a lady go for him with a stove lid." The court replied that it never remembered being the object of such endearments. Justice Goetting's decision, says the Boston Transcript, may be deemed an arbitrary boundary line of the advancement of women.

The News Tribune reproduces an article from The Herald of Sept. 24 last, complimenting Governor Clough upon the speech which he delivered at the opening of the St. Louis county fair and claims that, because it does not now support him, it is guilty of treachery. The Herald did not, by expressing these few kindly words, debar itself from supporting, in opposition to Mr. Clough, the candidate of the Sixth district. The News Tribune is welcome to all the capital which it can make out of the article in question.

The morning paper says: "The News Tribune makes no promise to deliver to Mr. Towne any votes whatever in the congressional convention." Well, supposing it did make a promise of that character, what good would it be? The News Tribune could not be relied upon to keep a promise, and it certainly could not influence a single vote in favor of Hr. Towne.

The Colorado mining stock hustlers who arrived in New York in January to show that staid city how to run a mining exchange have started for home while the walking is good. They found New York knew something about the game, too.

It is reported that Congressman Joel Heatwole may become a dark horse candidate for governor in the event of a prolonged contest among the other aspirants. If a pulchritudinous governor is desired, Joel would fill the bill.

Some person must be lying about the battles in Cuba. If the stories of mortality had been true, there would not be a man, woman or child alive on the island today.

Up to the hour of going to press, Attorney General Childs has not started injunction proceedings to prevent the sale of the Northern Pacific road.

The morning paper is still ignorant of the fact that Sir Charles Tupper and Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper are two separate and distinct persons.

Cleveland now claims 345,000 inhabitants and threatens to pass Cincinnati soon.

THE ROUNDER.

The other day, one of the few days when it was comfortable to have the window open, a family sat at dinner near an open window. As they sat there the family cat perched itself in the window, and the man of the house threw some butter in her face from his glass, which stood half full by his plate. Pussy retired in disorder, which aroused the ire of a little 5-year-old lady who sat at the table. She earnestly beseeched her mother to let her throw a glass of water in papa's face as a retaliatory measure but this was not allowed.

The next day at the same time and under the same circumstances, pussy again made her appearance in the window. Instead of water papa's glass was half filled with beer, which induced the young lady aforesaid to remark scathingly:

"Kitty's safs today, isn't she, mamma? Papa would never throw his beer away that way."

Which was perfectly true and which indicated a perception beyond the child's years.

One evening not very long ago a number of young people at a little social gathering were discussing various topics and the conversation quite naturally drifted around to the matrimonial question. In the company was a young married man and he volunteered the statement that his courtship was a rather one-sided affair. Of course all wanted to hear about it and so he told of it.

"I was living in New York at that time," he said, "I went to a dance one night and met the young lady who is now my wife. I had not a thought of getting married when I went there but before that dance was over I came very near proposing. I thought, however, that maybe I was too precipitate. I called the next day and again on the following and then proposed."

One young lady seemed lost in thought for a moment and then asked quickly and in all seriousness:

"Are there any more men like that down in New York?"

And then she could not understand why everybody laughed so.

LEE THE BEST MAN.

Big Stone County Journal: The only source of clamor for the nomination of Clough for governor seems clearly to be that of the machine of which he has control. It is therefore a manufactured attempt at a boom, coming from interested parties and is no expression of the sentiment of the people. On the other hand Hon. William E. Lee springs up and is being pushed forward by the people despite the efforts of the ring. The people recognize in him an able, honorable gentleman, a man with a clean record as a public servant, untrammeled with political intrigue and whose nomination would meet with the approval of his party as a whole. A better man than Hon. William E. Lee is hard to find.

MUCH LARGER CIRCULATION.

Cloquet Pine Knot: In Duluth the city council awarded the city printing to The Evening Herald at 75 cents per folio when the News Tribune offered to do it for 65 cents per folio. The printing was given the paper making the highest bid on the grounds that that paper had a much larger circulation and accordingly cheaper than the paper with the low bid and small circulation. The day has come when the paper which reaches the people gets the business.

BY ACCLAMATION.

Royalton Banner: The Sixth district Republican convention to nominate candidate for congress will be held at St. Cloud July 16. We predict that C. A. Towne will receive the nomination by acclamation.

WILL SMASH THE MACHINE.

Minneapolis Times: The defeat of Clough means the smashing of the machine, which first became a power in Minnesota politics when W. R. Merriam was nominated for his first term for governor, and which has been a most corrupting and demoralizing force in every state campaign since. . . . If Clough is beaten, W. R. Merriam will bid a long farewell to all his dreams of greatness, to all his hopes of a seat in the United States senate.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

The Enlightenment of Mrs. McManus.

Malachi McManus' conversations with his wife were frequently very instructive, for he drove a truck, and thus was thrown much in the current of the world, says the New York Journal. He pulled his chair back from the table, and, after blowing on his glasses, rubbing them on the tablecloth, and jamming them on his nose, read the evening paper, beginning with the headlines in the first column and pursuing his researches to the little liver pills in the bottom of the last column. Mr. McManus' evening adventure into the news of the day was a solemn function, more by token than it was a strenuous pleasure for Mr. McManus himself. Mrs. McManus never interrupted it, but beguiled the time reading fortunes in the bottom of the teacup. "A long journey. There's that da-ark-haired stranger again; glory be, there's a death. Who'ud it be, I dinnaw. Maybe ol' Hinnissy. He's been ailin' these five year. 'Tis that long ago he had th' first sthroke, an' called in th' wife to give her directions f'r th' wake. 'Have Dochney,' says he; 'he has th' bist way widim, not to be nailin' ye into a crate like a ol' hedtick,' he says. 'An',' he says, 'in all things, Jarlath, don't wake me in dhraught beer,' he says, f'r he was a proud man in his day. He's been a long time dyin', but this must be th' call f'r him. Dear, oh dear, there's th' dark-haired sthranger again, an' th' long journey. Lave me see; who can it be?"

At this moment Mr. McManus thrust the paper out at arm's length and uttered an explosive "What's that? What's that?" which was the regular evening signal for the enlightenment of Mrs. McManus.

"Well, now," said Mr. McManus, "that's too bad, at all."

"An' what's too bad at all?" Asked Mrs. McManus.

"Why, this here pa-aper says th' man Platt is not goin' ter be 'lowed f'r to pick out a pres'dent f'r us."

"An' who's Platt?" Mrs. McManus asked.

"He's an expressman that lives up th' river. I dinnaw th' man, but he must be a power in th' union be th' way he goes on."

"An' why sh'd th' lolkes iv him be pickin' out prisidints f'r th' likes iv us? Why don't he attind to his own business? I niver heerd iv O'Grady's lad namin' prisidints. He thried to be an alternative at th' disthric' convention, an' his poor mother sat up all night puttin' poultices on his jaw where a policeman hit him. Politics is a bad business."

"'Tis no business for a woman to thry to understand," said Mr. McManus. "Ye'd best keep out iv it, An' I'll thank ye not to bring up th' O'Gradys. I niver cared f'r thim, or thim f'r me. I've knowed all counties, but I niver see a man come out iv Kilkenny. White stockin's an' no money, an' whin Cromwell come they wet th' barl in their guns so's they'd not have to stand up an' be kilt be th' murdhrers."

"I've knowed some good people fr'm Kilkenny," said Mrs. McManus, smartly. "I'm fr'm Kilkenny, an' th' story in yir gum ye'er throwin' in me face is a lie got up be th' Queens county coclauns that 'ud not dare come widin a mile iv th' line on a fair day. Dan'l O'Connell was idycated in Kilkenny."

"Well," said Mr. McManus, finally, "th' man Platt niver came fr'm that county. Where he came fr'm th' Lard only knows, or whether he's a Swede or a Germon or a Rooshian or a Eyetalian. Wherever it was, he was bor-rn away fr'm home. An' he's a sp-ecial man. I'll oncerd that, I'll think iv him. He has no job. No man iver sees him. If he was to walk into this room this minyet, I'd not know him fr'm Rid Hugh that was dead before I was bor-rn. But if ye want a dhrink ye have to ax permission fr'm Platt. If ye have a friend that's been handin' a punch in th' nose to a fellow citizen, Platt can get him out. Ye pay yeer taxes to Platt an' he splinds them f'r ye. He's ivrything an' iverybody. Ye can't throw a brick in th' sthreet be way of pliasthure without hittin' Platt. He closes th' saloons, but he'd as lave close th' churches. If he had his way they'd niver let live a man in th' White House beyant that didn't wear on his back blown in red letters, 'T. C. Platt, Cohoes, N. Y. Use no hooks.'

"That's th' kind iv a lad he is. An' why ain't they some way iv gittin' rid iv him, is it? Well, I'm minded iv a man fr'm me own county be the name iv Aloyslus Rooney, he was a charackter. He dhruv a car in th' city of Dublin an' he had an ol' gray mare that'd kicked th' dashboard out iv th' cars before an' kilt two dacint min an' wan fr'm th' county Ar-magh. Rooney expiriminted wid th' mare, feedin' her cakes an' goom dhraps till wan day, afther he'd give her a pound iv sugar out iv his own hand she put her hind hoof into th' stomach iv him an' bruk three iv his siats. Whin he got out iv bed th' first thing he done wid her was to tie her to a stall an' pound her wid a burlin' shtick. Thin he dhruv her into th' country till he was so tired he near dhropped fr'm his seat. Afther he'd risted he wint into th' stall an' jumped on her head. Naw matther how gintle she became Rooney niver lift her alone. 'Tis th' same way, Malachi,' he says, 'with beasts as with min. If ye threat thim kindly they're as likely as not to turn on ye whin ye're laste expictin' it,' he says. 'But if ye wallop thim iv'ry time ye see thim they'll like ye none th' more, but they'll threat ye with more respict.' His idee was sound, but wan day he was standin' with his back tur-rned, convarsin' with a fri'nd, whin th' mare jolted him in th' head an' he had a fun'ral a mile long."

"Mebbe th' same'll happen to What's-his-name," said Mrs. McManus, who has a poor memory.

"It might," said Mr. McManus, "If th' people was horses. Bein, min"— And he resumed his reading.

Heavy Wind Yesterday Afternoon--Sailboat Capsized.

The wind rose to a gale yesterday afternoon with startling suddenness and for fifteen or twenty minutes blew at a lively rate. Thirty-six miles an hour was the maximum velocity Several sailboats on the bay and lake had a hard time of it, and one capsized on the lake about two miles from the shore. It was occupied by four Finlanders, and they went over the instant the squall struck them The life saving crew was on the lookout, and when the accident was seen they immediately ran the boat out. The four men were thoroughly chilled and badly frightened when rescued, but were none the worse for their ducking. The boat was also recovered and brought to shore.

Signs and bulletins were knocked around at a dizzy pace. Scrap paper was carried through the air, and several runaways nearly resulted. A dummy carpet roll in front of Panton & White's started down Second avenue west toward Michigan street, making direct for a horse and frightening the animal badly. Fortunately it swerved and ran up against a telegraph pole or there might have been a runaway

A police patrol box at the corner of Lake avenue and Third street blew over while Officer Murray was inside of it. He was rescued unhurt.

Line Boats Favor Export Trade Against the Mills.

The mills at the head of the lakes have a grievance against the regular boat lines running from Duluth to Buffalo in connection with Eastern railroad lines. The wheat rate is nominally 3 cents, but a number of the liners are taking it at 2¾ cents. Figured down to a flour basis, this means that they are carrying export wheat on a basis of 15 cents per 100 for flour landed at New York, when the rate at and east of Buffalo and the handling charges, etc., are all taken into account. These liners, however, are charging the mills 20 cents per flour to New York, which makes a discrimination of 5 cents against the mills in favor of Eastern and foreign mills, a nice profit when it is considered that this means about 10 cents a barrel. The mills have always had more or less complaint against the liners for discriminating against them, but this is a little stronger than they care to put up with.

It is provided that of the issue there shall be delivered and paid for $200,000 each on the first days of August, October and December, 1896; $100,000 on the first days of January, March and May, and $206,000 on the first day of July, 1897. The measure was referred to the committee on ordinance and judiciary.

Alderman Coventry introduced an ordinance prohibiting the running of trains at a faster speed than twelve miles per hour inside the city limits, except east of Sixty-second avenue east, and an ordinance providing for an increased number of lights at excavations and on obstructions in the streets, both of which were read and referred in the regular order.

The serenity of the session was disturbed momentarily by the coming to the surface of the Duluth-Superior bridge toll question. It was raised by a resolution introduced by Alderman Crandall, to the effect that the action of the council declaring for free tolls for foot passengers be rescinded and that all opposition be withdrawn, provided the counties of St. Louis and Douglas be authorized to charge such tolls as shall seem fit when they purchase the bridge. The sponsor for the measure bespoke its favorable consideration on the ground that the question seemed to have been reduced to the proposition of tolls or no bridge.

Alderman Richardson jumped to his feet and announced that he saw the colored citizen's head sticking out of the wood pile. He said that the $300 or so a year that the bridge company would receive for foot tolls would not influence bond buyers. There was something back of that contention, and, he said, he would watch with interest for the rest of the darky's corporosity to emerge from the wood.

Alderman Krumsieg next took a shy at the resolution. He could not see how the foot toll privilege would be an object to the purchasers of bonds. It was the street railways that wanted the bridge, and it was they that were interested in the tolls. Buyers of bonds would take them on the basis of future earnings, and the street railways would have to guarantee the interest. He alluded to the interest in the matter taken by the jobbers' union, and said its attitude is due to the fact that Mr. Mendenhall is a leading member of that body.

Aldermen Olafson and Stevens also left the imprints of their boot heels on the measure. The former said that if the street railway companies had their way the result would be a 15-cent fare to Superior, and the latter urged that the people ought to receive something for the rights they were asked to confer.

TABLED THE MOTION.

By this time Alderman Crandall's measure had been pounded into a moribund condition, with no friend to plead for mercy, and Alderman Olafson provided for its interment by a motion to table, which went through without a dissenting voice.

By the report of Comptroller TenBrook on the matter of rentals paid to the West Duluth Light and Water company, which was submitted in pursuance of a resolution passed by the council at the previous meeting, it appears that the company has been collecting for hydrants galore over and above the number of 156, which is the limit allowed by the terms of its franchise. The comptroller reported that there was no means of knowing the number of miles of mains in West Duluth at any time, and that the system of bookkeeping adopted by the village recorder seemed calculated to disclose as little as possible of transactions. The only dates on which the number of hydrants paid for were designated were April 4 and July 18, 1892, the number being 189. The amounts of these payments were $3643.75 and $3634.75 respectively. For the last quarter of 1892 and up to and including a payment made Nov. 20, 1893, the amounts ranged from $3756.25 to $4326.25. Up to and including the quarter ending Sept. 30, 1895, there were 224 hydrants paid for, and for the last two quarters preceding the report 164 and 166 respectively. The report states that the bills in 1894 seem to have been cut down very much, and that in 1895 the amount deducted seems to have been allowed under a settlement made by the city attorney.

According to the report of payments made and outstanding obligations of the work at Lakewood, submitted by the board of public works, it appears that thus far there has been expended much less than called for by the engineer's estimates and somewhat below the lowest bids. The cost of excavating for the main trench has been $3.45 per cubic yard, the estimate being $4. For rock work in the well, the cost has been $1.88 per yard; estimate, $4, and lowest bid, $2. For rock dredging, cost per cubic yard, $4.44; estimate, $6; lowest bid, $11.30.

RECOMMENDATION MADE.

It is recommended that the rock dredging and laying intake pipe from the shore line, also making sand filling be let by contract, as the city has not the necessary apparatus. The summary is as follows: Contracts for intake pipe, pump house foundation and gate valve, $25,739.75; amount paid, $2963.40; balance, $19,776.35. Expenditure for day labor, estimated to date, $7223.63. Expense of material, estimated to May 25, including that for which bills not received, $6618.81.

It was finally resolved to appropriate $450 for the entertainment of delegates to the state firemen's convention, after the defeat of a motion fixing the amount at $500, and an amendment thereto making it $300.

A measure for augmenting the navy was passed, in the shape of a resolution authorizing a contract with L. A. Steen for the construction of an unarmored scow at a cost of $227, to be used at the ferry. The board of public works was instructed to get the cost of a ferry insurance policy in the Guaranton, of Philadelphia.

A resolution fixing the running time of cars on the Lakeside line was passed. The time is the same as that of the present schedule, with a provision for a 20-minute service on pleasant Sundays.

On motion of Alderman Krumsieg, the city attorney was directed to collect of the Duluth Street Railway company, by suit or otherwise, the license fee as provided by section 11, ordinance 38, of the village of West Duluth, and also to bring suit against A. W. Hartman, O. C. Hartman and C. E. Van Bergen on their bond to secure the purchase of $750,000 worth of water bonds.

The claim of Capt. J. C. Hamilton for $5 for services in connection with the capture of Minnesota Point sand thieves, and the bill of costs, amounting to $86.45, incurred in the assessorship litigation, were allowed and ordered paid. The claim of H. C. Hanford for damages caused by flooding his basement at Eleventh avenue east and Third street, was referred to the city attorney.

A claim of Isaacson & Kauppi for $36.15, for damage caused by flooding the basement of their store on May 10, was referred to the committee on claims and accounts. That portion of Forty-third avenue east, between London road and Lake Superior, was placed under the control of the park board.

The sum of $50 was allowed for expenses of City Engineer Patton as a delegate to the waterworks convention at Indianapolis, on May 26.

The bond of the Duluth Printing and Publishing company was accepted and approved, and The Herald declared the official paper of the city.

The remedy is known as the Pyramid Pile Cure and is recommended on account of its absolute safety, ease of application and instant relief from pain.

The Pyramid Pile Cure contains no opium or other poison and does not interfere with daily occupation while using. People who believed nothing but a surgical operation would cure them have been astonished at the results from a single 50-cent package of the Pyramid.

Mrs. Mary C. Tyler, of Heppner, Ore., writes: "One package of Pyramid Pile Cure entirely cured me of piles from which I have suffered for years, and I have never had the slightest return of them since.

Mr. E. O'Brien, Rock Bluff, Neb., says: The package of Pyramid Pile Cure entirely removed every trace of itching piles. I cannot thank you enough for it.

Patriotic Teachers.

To the Editor of The Herald:

I crave a portion of your columns to inform your readers of what some of our teachers are doing in the way of making patriotic men and women of the rising generation.

At Mountain Iron the two departments are in charge of the Misses Grady and O'Neil. In the primary department the pupils repeated quotations from various authors and recited several simple poems. It was astonishing as well as gratifying to see how well those little people appreciated and understood the poems recited. In the higher department the students recited a portion of the exercises which they were preparing for next Friday in commemoration of Memorial day.

Lincoln's speech at Gettysburg was well spoken, and in conclusion the whole school joined in singing that grand production, "The Battle Hymn of the Republic." As a rule the lady teachers take more interest in this subject than the gentlemen, but an exception should be noted in the case of T. F. Thomas, of Gnesen. On every fair day, the stars and stripes, floating from the flagstaff before his school house, shows the travelers far and near where his temple of learning is located. On entering his room you will find the American flag festooning the windows and displayed from every coign of vantage. Every morning the little ones salute the flag as reverently as any seaman on board a man-of-war. When it is remembered that the children whom Mr. Thomas has in charge are entirely of foreign parentage, the good work which he is doing in cultivating a proper spirit of Americanism will be appreciated.

Rather Tame Deer.

On Sunday afternoon as one of the Woodland cars was running along about three miles out from the city, two fine deer were discovered browsing on the track. There was evidently some salt left on the track from last winter for they were licking up something with evident relish, in fact, so pleased were they with what they were getting that they did not notice the car until it was rather close. The motorman rang the gong and they bobbed their tails and scampered off in the woods.

LET US REASON TOGETHER.

It needs "no ghost to come and tell us" that the sooner dyspepsia is remedied, the sooner we shall enjoy that right to which our ancestors laid claim in the Declaration of Independence—"the pursuit of happiness. A man blessed with a good digestion—provided he has enough to eat—is happy. There are hosts of people with ample means to whom the sole consolation of a healthy pauper is denied. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a certain, prompt and thorough medicinal agent through the use of which sound digestion, and the nerve tranquility which its disturbance causes, can be recovered. Biliousness, malarial and kidney trouble, constipation and rheumatism are also remedied by this fine corrective of a disordered condition of the system. Appetite and sleep are greatly improved by it.

THE ONLY CURE

For the Tobacco Habit Is Baco-Curo.

"Don't Stop Tobacco Suddenly. Baco-Curo Will Notify You When to Stop." These Are the Words of a Cure Not a Substitute.

Baco-Curo is recognized by the medical profession as the only scientific, vegetable and harmless cure. It is not guilty of the absurdity of insisting that the user of tobacco stop of his own will and then take the remedy. If he can stop why bother with a remedy at all?

Baco-Curo was the first to give an iron-clad written guarantee to cure the tobacco habit, in any form, or to refund the money with 10 per cent interest.

A free booklet and a large sheet of testimonials, the genuine character of which is attested by disinterested and prominent bankers, will be sent to anyone who asks. From thousands of grateful endorsements the following is chosen: USED TOBACCO FORTY YEARS CURED BY BACO-CURO AND GAINED THIRTY POUNDS.

From hundreds of testimonials, the originals of which are on file and open to inspection, the following is presented:

Clayton, Nevada Co., Ark., Jan. 28.
Eureka Chemical and Manufacturing company, La Crosse, Wis.—Gentlemen: For forty years I used tobacco in all its forms. For twenty-five years of that time I was a great sufferer from general debility and heart disease. For fifteen years I tried to quit, but couldn't. I took various remedies, among others "No-To-Bac," "The Indian Tobacco Antidote," "Double Chloride of Gold," etc., etc., but none of them did me the least bit of good. Finally, however, I purchased a box of your "Baco-Curo" and it has entirely cured me of the habit in all its forms, and I have increased thirty pounds in weight and am relieved from all the numerous aches and pains of body and mind. I could write a quire of paper upon my changed feelings and condition. Yours respectfully,

THEY WANT BIMETALLISM.

The English People Urging Remonetization of Silver.

To the Editor of The Herald:

As, aside from our lake commerce, all the sustaining and maintaining interests of this Sixth congressional district, as well as of this state generally, are from our fertile soil, among which are grain, cattle, lumber, iron and steel ores, all being equally injuriously affected by our present primary money system, i. e. the so-called "gold standard," and all these great interests being really agricultural or earth products, will you kindly give space to the following leaflet, received this morning from the English Bimetallic (Gold and Silver) league in London.

The attention of The Herald's many readers is not asked to this simply because, "'tis English, you know," but as evidencing the voice of the true, strong desire of the English people to rid themselves of the crushing, impoverishing influences of the "gold standard" upon themselves. And, still, the American "high mighty gold bugs" and their thoughtless echoes, say, "the United States cannot control its own financial interests without the consent of England," and that England is rock bottomed to the "gold standard." The real truth is restoration of bimetallism is the cry and demand of the English people universally, save her money loaners (a very small per cent of the population) over and above "home rule" or any other political demand. And this demand is aggravated by their fear that the United States will add her great influence to, and join with, and partake of, the general prosperity that is now prevalent over all silver standard countries, great and small, civilized or semi-civilized, by making her money standard silver alone.

For it is a certain fact that among the people of no civilized nation is the demand for the remonetization of silver stronger than in England, the so-called American bankers' assertion to the contrary notwithstanding. It is a reasonable probability that the English ministry or cabinet will bear to and grant their people's universal (save money loaners) demand, to remonetize silver even before the United States, no matter how quick we act, if for nothing more than to "head off" the beneficial (leadership) effect before the world, the United States so first, long would survive this country. These are not idle but truthful facts. Very respectfully,

Thomas Dowse.

SOCRATES AND THE AGRICULTURAL DEPRESSION.

"And the persons thus impoverished lurk, I should suppose, in the city, harnessed and armed with stings—some owing debts and others disfranchised, and others laboring under both misfortunes—hating and plotting against the new owners of their property, and against all who are beteer off than themselves, and enamoured with revolution.

Republic of Plato, book viii. (B. C. 400.)

When Socrates and comfortably disposed himself within the porch of the temple of the Old Lady of Threadneedle street, and had gathered about him the chief men of the various commissions of royal appointment, looking to the relief of certain distressed laborers and artisans, he, turning to Agriculor, said:

"If it is thy misslon to afford sustenance to man, then the more freely thou givest such sustenance, the more blessed thou art."

"Nay," answered Agriculor; "such food as I provide hath become so cheap that I starve while I furnish it."

"How can that be," asked Socrates, "that he who supplies the food starves in its furnishing?"

"For the reason," he replied, "that what I raise I keep not, but with it pay my debts."

"Then," said Socrates, "from the fruits of the soil must all debts be paid."

And Americanus and Australasius and Indicus groaned in concert, "Yea, in the sweat of our brows, and the fruit of the soil, must our debts be paid."

Socrates looked curiously at these men; for they were outside barbarians, each bearing into the temple a load upon his back. And divers were the contents of their loads; but all were from the soil: corn, and cotton, and wool, and all things that a husbandman hath gotten from his work.

"What do you here with these burdens upon you?" said Socrates.

And they all answered: "We be here to pay our debts."

"And are these taken for debts?" asked Socrates; "is there not in this land brought forth food and raiment? Then why do ye bring more?"

And they answered: "It is to buy gold, for in gold are our debts payable."

Then these outside barbarians took up their burdens and went within to the men who held the gold, who were also the men to whom they were in debt. And Americanus saith: "Hear ye; for a gulnea of the gold thou hast, which I must buy only to pack back to thee, give I seven bushels of wheat."

But Indicus pressed forward and said: "Nay, I must have the gold to pay thee, and will give eight bushels for a gulnea."

And Australasius likewise offered more of his substance than both the others; for he too had debts whereby he was bound to buy the gold to pay it back again. For the debt was owed to him who had the gold.

And the chief men of the commissions of royal appointment, looking to the relief of the distressed laborers and artisans, said, turning to Socrates: "Let us get hence to a quieter spot. Truly, these outside barbarians do disturb our meditations by their cries, and we must go forth to find the cause for which we are appointed."

And they arose, and went forth, and inspected the lands.

And one saith, "Fertilizers are costly things."

And another saith, "Our laborers desire too much for their wives and daughters."

And another saith, "It is the tithes."

But none sought wisdom; each went on, unheeding the end.

Then Socrates, reviewing the scrolls of time, read therein that hopeless toil breeds despair; and despair breeds hate; and hate breeds revolution, wherein all values meet destruction.

And he said: "These capitalists do not see their enemies; since by their demand for gold alone, only the drone and the beggar multiply in the state!"

Do not be hoodwinked. Use no "just as good." Salvation Oil is what you want when in need of a good liniment.

MURPHY'S OPENING.

Large Crowd Present But the Boxing Was Tame.

In spite of an ineffectual attempt to stop Jimmy Murphy's entertainment at Howard's hall last night it took place in the presence of a large crowd. The scare induced by the attempt had its effect, however, for the participants could put little spirit into their contests under the circumstances for fear that in the eyes of the officers their work would degenerate into prize fighting. Several of those on the bills did not appear at all for this reason. The performance as it was was satisfactory, however, and several interesting bouts took place.

Charles Wren and Charles Gullickson, and Billy Heffernon and one "Scotty," of Chicago, gave a couple of interesting bouts, and Murphy and Patterson went on for six rounds. There was a musical program which was well received, and altogether the affair was satisfactory all around.

Chief Ellenson and Lieut. McLean were present, accompanied by Under Sheriff Shephard, to se that the law against prize fighting was observed.

Mayor Truelsen is much put out at Governor Clough's action in the matter. After receiving a letter from R. A. Benson he telegraphed to Sheriff Butchart asking him to see to it that there was no prize fighting, and the mayor feels that in acting thus without consulting the mayor of Duluth or asking any explanation he has cast discredit on the city government. He wrote to the governor today to ask an explanation and to tell him what he thought of it. The telegram to Sheriff Butchart was as follows:

"If [illegible] is to be announced in our local from Robert A. Benson which I transmit to you for your information. See to it that no prize fight occurs in Duluth: pugilists who were arrested for fighting papers that there is to be a sparring exhibition given by the notorious James Murphy and William Patterson, the two pubilists who were arrested for fighting in Carlton county, Minnesota, in the month of March, and it does seem to me that it is time such vagrants as these are compelled to go to work and earn a living. I have interested myself to the extent that I have ascertained that this is going to be a genuine slugging match. Not only is Murphy and Patterson going to fight, but there are several young fellows who are going to have, as they term it, a friendly go, but which I have positive information will be for blood, and of course they may be able to dupe the police and the sheriff department of this city, by giving it out that the fight is only to be for points, but as a matter of fact, I am absolutely sure the fight is on its merits and should not be allowed. I take this opportunity of earnestly protesting against this so-called exhibition, or friendly contest taking place, as both men have been in actual training here in the city. I know this by personal observation.'"

PECULIAR

Mrs. Peffer Wants to Annul a Divorce Granted Her Husband.

He Was a Resident of Minneapolis and Died Several Months Ago.

She Claims He Died Intestate and Left No Property.

A peculiar suit was filed in district court this morning in which Ilona A. Pepper is plaintiff, and Ashbel H. Pepper, T. M. Pepper, Lizzie K. Gultz, Nellie M. Carpenter and Mollie Hallowell are defendants. The defendant Ashbel H. Pepper is plaintiff's deceased husband, and the other defendants Ashbel their children, all of whom are well along in years and married. Mrs. Pepper seeks to annul a divorce obtained in this county in 1889 on the ground that it was obtained by fraud.

In her complaint Mrs. Pepper alleges that she and her husband were married July 4, 1854, in Poltenj, Vt. In 1886, thirty-two years after, her husband deserted her, and after that they lived separately, he in Minneapolis and she in St. Paul. She alleges that in 1889 Pepper came to Duluth and began divorce proceedings against her on the ground of desertion. He represented that he had lived in St. Louis county a year as the law prescribed, and that she had deserted him. He said that she had left his home, but he did not know where she was, though he had diligently made inquiries in Boston where her friends and relatives lived.

On this showing he was allowed to serve his summons by publication and in due time his divorce was granted, in August, 1895, he died intestate in Minneapolis, having no property, and no administrator of his affairs has been appointed.

Mrs. Pepper now alleges that the divorce was obtained through fraud upon herself and upon the court, because he was not a resident of St. Louis county at all, and because when he swore he did not know where she lived he well knew that she as living in St. Paul. On this ground of fraud she asks that the decree of divorce be annulled.

She claims that she never knew of the divorce or of her late husband's death until some time last February.

RECORD OF THE DIVORCE.

John M. McClintock is Mrs. Pepper's attorney. The records of the court here show the divorce obtained by Ashbel H. Pepper from Ilona A. Pepper. The publication of the summons in the case was made in the Industrial Age. McGindley & Cotton were Pepper's attorneys and Judge Stearns granted the divorce.

H. H. Hoyt has brought two suits against the C. N. Nelson Lumber company to clear title to ore and timber lands. One suit is on land located in 58-17, and the company's defense is that it secured the land from Dan McIntosh, who bought it of Fred Decker, who got it from the government. Hoyt admits all but the transfer from McIntosh to the company, which he claims never took place. The other suit is on land in 55-19, and it is similar, except that another man takes the place of Fred Decker. The suits seem to be similar to the Crowley case, in which Dan McIntosh took the same place in these cases, and on the trial of which he swore that what purported to be his signature was never made by him.

Mary Klinert has begun divorce proceedings against Edward Klinert. They were married in Bay City, Mich, in 1876, and have five children, whose ages run from 10 to 18. She accuses him of drunkenness, cruelty and non-support. They live in a small log house on the Pike Lake road, five blocks from Duluth Heights, and in an affidavit accompanying her complaint Mrs. Klinert asserts that her husband during her absence stole from their house furniture and personal property which she had purchased from her own earnings. She believes that he will exchange it for drink, and she wants him restrained from doing so. D. M. DeVore is her attorney.

The Farmers' Loan and Trust company has filed a third transcript of judgment from the United States circuit court against the Northern Pacific railroad. The amount is $1,385,637.84.

Judge Moor has filed an order allowing C. F. Todd, doing business as the Duluth Butter and Egg company, the tools of his trade of butter mixer, as exempt.

IS AGAIN VIOLENT.

Mrs. Ricks Must Be Returned to the Asylum.

Mrs. Ricks, the "window smasher," who has been staying at the Woman's home for several weeks, became so unruly last evening that the matron was forced to turn her over to the police. Poor Commissioner Cook took her in charge today and she will be returned to the asylum at Fergus Falls, from which she has been absent on furlough.

Mrs. Ricks is somewhat noted on account of her penchant for breaking windows, her insane desire to engage in that amusement rendering her liable at any moment to smash all the lights within reach. Since her release from the asylum on parole about a month ago she had been allowed to stay at the Woman's home, but of late another attack of acute mania has manifested its approach in sullen fits, interspersed with threats of violence to those about her. Yesterday she stood around with a pair of shears in her belt, and announced her intention of cutting up several people who had fallen under her displeasure.

Browns Will Come.

The ball team which will play Duluth at the West End grounds on Saturday and Sunday next is the Minneapolis Browns. It is a very strong team, being composed largely of professionals. Bert Walker, of the University team is catcher. Hugh Fleetham, of the Minneapolis league team and Will McCarty, who pitched for Mankato last year, will be the pitcher. The bases will be held down by John Hernstock of last year's Brainerd team at first, Joe Werrick, of the Minneapolis league team at second, and "Reddy" Hill, an ex-professional at third. Larry Townsend, of last year's St. Peter team, will be short stop, and the fielders will be "Cyclone" Gibbs, of the Minneapolis league team, at left, John Patterson, of last year's Chaska team at right, and Ted Corbett, of the Minneapolis league team, at center.

ANOTHER REALTY DEAL.

Markell Dock Property on Fifth Avenue Sold.

The sale of the property and building occupied by the Wells-Stone Mercantile company has been consummated by Mendenhall & Hoopes. The owner was Clinton Markell and a wealthy estate in Boston made the purchase. This estate already has large holdings in Duluth. The building on the property is three and a half stories in height and the Wells-Stone company has a lease to run two years more. The sale is considered a good one.

This makes more than $160,000 worth of Duluth property which has been sold within a month to Eastern capitalists and goes to show that Duluth real estate is worth all that is asked.

The Diver Reports the Intake as Intact.

Capt. Singer's diver today completed an examination of the Duluth Gas and Water company's intake pipe and claims everything is intact, with absolutely no sign of a break. The work of examination did not take long, but it was hard work to get the right kind of weather. A few hours were used on Saturday, and yesterday good progress was made up to the time of the blow in the afternoon. This morning the job was entirely completed.

The diver is prepared to make an affidavit that he examined the pipe from the place where it leaves the well clear out to the end, a distance of 678 feet, and found it in first class shape. The strainer at the end is in the same shape as when put on last winter.

MISSIONS

Presbyterians Listen to the Report of the Home Board Today.

Report Showed a Great Saving in Maintaining the Board.

Probability That it Will Be Out of Debt in Two Years.

Saratoga, May 26.—The opening of the Presbyterian general assembly in session today was characterized by a struggle over the approval of minutes. These showed that the resolutions in regard to the Presbyterian house in New York were referred to the finance committee and made an exclusive order for the morning. Elder McDougal contended that the record was wrong. All of the clerks united in maintaining its correctness, and their latter view prevailed. The order was subject to an understanding that in case the resolutions called for serious discussion they should go over.

Elder McDougall moved that they be referred to the joint committee on home and foreign missions, and that their report be a special order for Thursday afternoon. The assembly gave unanimous consent to the course. The committee on bills and overtures reported papers from the presbyteries of New York and Long Island, stating their intention to exercise their constitutional rights in the reception and license of theology students. These papers were called forth by the injunction placed on the presbytery of New York a year ago against receiving the students of Union seminary. The papers were referred to the judicial committee.

The regular order was then taken up, being the report on home missions. The present debt was almost $230,000; receipts amounted to $729,433, and expenditures reached $858,985. From the pension fund, receipts reached $191,230. The cost of administration aggregated $81,922. Under the board is a total membership of 1,541,000 and nearly 18,000 churches. During the year 9179 new members have been added. The report of the committee made recommendations as to methods of administration and provided for a committee of nine to investigate the affairs of the board in order to secure an improved efficiency and make any possible retrenchments.

During the discussion of the report the platform was occupied by the home board. Secretary McMillan showed that the cost of the board had been reduced at least $100,000, in spite of the reduction of $129,000 in receipts, and an interest charge of $43,000. With an income equal to that of 1892 he said the board would be clear of debt in less than two years. Dr. John Hall spoke in commendation of the members and officers of the board.

Elder McDougall followed in a long speech in which he said that he was there to show, by his vote, whether he approved of the methods of those who have administered the funds of the board. He began to discuss the resources of the board and was understood to be talking on investment of funds in the Presbyterian building, when he was called to order by Dr. Davies, of New York, on the ground that he was transgressing the agreement made earlier in the day, in which this matter was deferred to Thursday afternoon. He was followed by Dr. Ramsay, of New York, a clerical member of the board; Elder Franklin Sheppard, of Philadelphia, and several others.

LI HUNG CHANG.

Will Cause Hari Kari of Old Chinese Modes.

San Francisco, May 26.—Louis Spitzel, of Shanghai, a friend of Li Hung Chang, arrived hereon the last steamer on his way to meet the viceroy and escort him over to England and through this country on his return home. "When L. comes back he is going to reform China," Mr. Spitzel said. "He is now stronger by far than ever he was with the emperor and the other people in power. It is his intention to build railroads all over China, build a good navy, organize a splendid army, improve coast defenses and, above all, bring about a stronger centralized government.

It is probable that the other viceroys will become simply governors of their provinces and subject to the central power. One thing that shows his present prestige and power is the fact that while he is away everything is at a standstill and officials—even viceroys—postpone important matters until his return."

REV. ROBERT FORBES.

Duluth Man Leads in the Methodist Devotions.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 26.—The Methodist Episcopal conference opened promptly on time today with Bishop W. X. Ninde in the chair. Rev. Robert Forbes, of Duluth, conducted the devotional exercises, and after several minor reports had been received the book committee made its report. The chief item of interest in the report was the criticism of the Voice editors. At present Editor Kelley, of New York, and Editor Moore, of Cincinnati, act in this capacity, but the committee decided that the work should be taken out of their hands. The conference did not take kindly to the proposition and for an hour it was discussed pro and con. George C. Sturgiss made the report for the book committee and defended it against the objections of the opposition. After an extended debate the report was adopted.

The conference spent the next half hour debating whether or not a session should be held this evening in spite of the temperance anniversary. Frequent flights of oratory and parliamentary tangle was the result, and then a recess was taken without anything definite being done.

The call to prayer after recess was by Bishop Ninde, and prayer was offered by Bishop Fitzgerald. A very impressive service was the formal examination of the candidates and ordination and divine grace upon the event by Bishop Andrews. After prayer by Bishop Fowler came the important movement of the laying on of hands and presentation of the Bible, indicative to consecration as bishops of Christ's chosen flock of pastors. For Candidate McCabe there officiated Bishops Foster, Bowman and Hurst; for Candidate Cranston, Bishops Merrell, Bowman and Walden; for Candidate Harizell, Bishops Warren, Bowman and Foss, and the presenters in each instance.

Bishop Joyce offered prayer when the consecration had been effected, and then Bishop Newman announced the hymn, "The Minister's Only Business," which was sung standing. On a motion it was decided to transact no further business of the conference in open session until afternoon. The meeting was brought to a conclusion with the benediction pronounced by Bishop Foster.

The storm of Monday was limited to the northeastern part of the state.

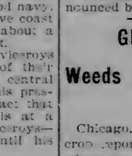
A DYING SPARK

Stop Right Now! Don't Light Another! You're Burning Your Brains.

Wrecks Along the Street-Side.



Ofttimes tobacco's victims look at the dying spark in the cigar stump, or at the big masticated "chaw" of tobacco just expectorated, and with nerves neutralized with tobacco, mentally resolve. "Now, that is my last. I will never use it again. It is injuring me physically and financially and my nerves are so irritated that I can't stand the least annoyance." What is the result? These good resolutions are made while the effect of tobacco paralyzes the cravings of millions of irritated nerve centers and when the effects pass away the good resolutions weaken, showing that the use of tobacco is not a habit but a disease of the nervous system caused by the education of the nerves to crave for the nicotine poisoning. As an instance, here is the case of a North Carolina clergyman, who writes:

Hillsboro, N. C.

Gentlemen—Two weeks ago I began to use No-To-Bac, and I am now prepared to give it my unqualified endorsement as accomplishing precisely what is claimed for it. I have been an inveterate chewer of the weed for years and had made some half dozen or more efforts to overcome the habit without success. On Jan. 19 I began to use No-To-Bac, and by the time I had used three boxes my desire for tobacco was gone and I feel like a new man. Your remedy is indeed wonderful and it will enable any man to get rid of the tobacco habit, no matter what hold it may have taken of him, if he desires to give it up and will carry out your directions.

Allow me to thank you most heartily today, and it gives me great pleasure to give this testimonial. Very truly yours,

(Rev.) E. S. MCKENZIE.

Does it not suggest itself that the natural thing to do is to take a remedy that is specially prepared to overcome the nerve craving effects and restore the tobacco irritated nerves to a normal and healthy condition? You will find it in No-To-Bac. If No-To-Bac fails to cure, The Sterling Remedy company, of New York, Montreal and Chicago have so much faith that they positively guarantee to refund the money. Get their famous booklet "Don't Tobacco Spit and Smoke Your Life Away." Written guarantee and free sample mailed for the asking.

SACRED CONFIDENCE.

NO WOMAN'S LETTER PUBLISHED EXCEPT BY REQUEST.

Mrs. Pinkham's Tender Relations With the Suffering of Her Sex—Women Who Cannot Hide Their Happiness.

There is a class of women who, from their own experience, sympathize with their suffering sisters, and in order that such suffering may be lessened, nobly put aside false modesty and in heartfelt gratitude publish to the world what every woman should know. Mrs. W. L. Elliott, Liscomb, Iowa, is one of those women, and has requested us to publish the facts in her case, otherwise it would not be done, as all such evidence is treated in sacred confidence, unless publication is requested by the writer.

She says to Mrs. Pinkham:—"I wish you would publish the circumstances of my case, in order that other women may be benefited by my experience.

"I doctored nearly all the time for two years. I spent several hundred dollars without receiving much benefit. Last June I wrote to you and described all my aches and pains. Such a long list as there was: headache, backache, bearing-down pains, terrible soreness, constipation, dizziness, feeling of extreme lassitude, irregularity and nausea; but you answered my letter and told me just what to do. I followed your advice.

"After taking eight bottles of the Vegetable Compound and three bottles of Blood Purifier, I am glad to write you that I have not enjoyed such good health for years, and I am able to do all my own work. WILL STAY HOME.

Railroad Rates Are Too High For Excursions.

St. Louis, May 26.—At a meeting at which were present representatives of the fifteen large German societies of St. Louis it was decided not to take part in the national saengerfest of the North American Saengerbund to be held in Pittsburg on June 8. This action was the result of the refusal of various railroads to make better rates than $14.75 for the round trip, and as a result, at least 1000 singers will not attend the fest who would otherwise have done so.

In comparison with a rate of $8 to Cleveland and return in 1893, and of $7 to New Orleans and return in 1890, the singers think the present rate too high and refuse to pay it, and the railroads who have been asked to lower it will not do so.

Then beginning again in the state of Minnesota at a point on the boundary line between the states of Minnesota and Wisconsin at a point on said boundary on the western border of township number forty-eight (48), north range fifteen (15) west found to be most feasible for crossing said boundary, and where said line of railway will meet and coincide with a line of railway to be built through the northwest corner of the state of Wisconsin as aforesaid, thence extending in a general westerly course, by the most practical route through and across the north central portion of the state of Minnesota; passing near the southern boundary of Hubbard county, thence westerly to a point near the southwestern corner of White Earth Indian reservation, thence in a northwesterly direction to a point on the western boundary line of Minnesota on the Red River of the North at or near Caledonia where said river can be most easily crossed; thence westerly through the state of North Dakota to the Missouri river by the most practical route to be more specifically determined and located. Also beginning at the point in the already described near the southwest corner of the White Earth Indian reservation, thence extending in a southwesterly direction by the most practical route to a point on the boundary line between Minnesota and North Dakota at or near Moorhead to be specifically determined and located, together with the construction, maintenance and operation of all necessary branches, side tracks, switches, turnouts, car houses, depots, machine shops, bridges, warehouses and all other necessary buildings, structures and erections necessary for the proper maintenance and operation of said railway, and to acquire and hold property and do all things necessary and proper for or incidental to the conduct of said business; and further, to construct, maintain and operate a line, lines, of telegraph on or over its line of railway and branches and to charge a reasonable compensation for the transmission of messages over and by means of the same. The more definite location and selection of said line of railway, spur tracks, side tracks, depots, machine shops and other necessary erections shall hereafter made, determined and established by the board of directors of this corporation, and it shall be legal and within the purpose of these articles for the said board of directors to cause the work of construction to commence at any point, upon any of the lines established by them in pursuance of these articles, and, if necessary, to obtain for a reasonable hire the right to run the locomotives and cars of this corporation on other railroads in the conduct of its business, and if necessary to reach for the time being its own terminal over lines so leased, or to procure any of the facilities for the transportation therein contemplated either by purchase, lease or consolidation. The principal place of transacting the business of this corporation shall be, and the same is hereby located to be, in the city of Duluth, county of St. Louis and state of Minnesota, wherein the general office of this corporation shall be kept.

This is the Appearance our Store Presented at 10 o'clock this Morning.

There Are No Strings on this Crowd!

THEY BUY WHERE THEY PLEASE; WHERE THEY GET VALUES—THAT'S HERE!

They Say! Who Says?

Well, pessimists say—some of them—that Duluth is lacking in enterprise, and that business generally is going to the bow-wows! They are forever looking backward, and the perspective they should have is wrapped in a mist of uncertainty. For the sake of Duluth we hope such people are not taken seriously. This is becoming more and more the distributing point of the West; with its mighty wholesaling institutions, its great commerce, and the progressive and enterprising spirit of its citizens. The magnitude of this particular business now and then dazes folks, who feel obliged to publicly doubt and lovingly scratch at us, but that's the OLD DULUTH way, which we will all gradually grow out of. We have every reason to believe, judging from the mighty crowds we are handling today, that this is the store of the people and for the people. Evidence of greater activity is all around, and the magnetism of brighter days will thrill the community as nothing else can. For ourselves, we mind our own business, and the people mind what we are about. We never scold anybody and we never forget the possibilities of a city fine as this.

Follow the Leaders!

The success we have won is not copyrighted, and any merchant with grit and wit enough can make a name and fame for himself under proper conditions. With preciseness we present each day facts relating to our store-life and what anyone can see without a searchlight. But that's too provincial for some people, so we have loud exaggeration in every-day advertising, discounting the intelligence of the community at every point. But no matter, suppose you listen to all anyone has to say and see all anyone has to offer, then bring your judgment to bear on the grand special values we are giving the people in Men's Suits, Men's Overcoats, Men's Trousers, Boys' and Children's Clothing, Hats, Shoes and Furnishings in this GREAT MANUFACTURERS' UNLOADING SALE. SPECIAL VALUES FOR TOMORROW.

SCRAMBLED FOR CLOTHES.

Burrows & Co. Threw Suits at the Crowd.

The old peanut vendor in front of M. S. Burrows & Co.'s store had the liveliest morning of his life today. Mr. Burrows provided amusement for half the town this morning, and the peanut vendor was right in the middle of it. He moved before the fun reached its climax, however, and Mr. Burrows paid him twice over for his damages, so he is still happy. The advertisements that the Great Eastern would give away six suits of clothes, one each to the first three men and one each to the first three boys who entered the store at 10 o'clock, were far-reaching, and the entrance was jammed at 7:30 o'clock this morning. At 8 o'clock a window was broken and the crowd was still growing. Up to the opening the door way was filled with a struggling mass of humanity, and one boy fell under the mass and had to be passed out over the heads of the crowd.

Six suits would never go around in that crowd, however, so a new plan in addition to the old one was resolved upon. A hundred suits and spring overcoats were piled up in the second story windows, to be thrown out and scrambled for by the crowd, and as soon as the assemblage saw what was coming a yell went up. M. S. Burrows got out and made a speech, and the crowd yelled itself hoarse.

"We wish to show," said he, "that the Great Eastern always lives up to its promises. We always do all that we advertise and more. Somebody must be disappointed if our original program is carried out, so in addition we are going to throw away a large amount of clothing."

Then the fun began. A pair of trousers was thrown out in the midst of the sea of upturned faces which stretched across the street. The whole crowd surged toward the descending apparel, and as it fell on the outskirts a black hand grabbed it and held it fast. Then a coat and vest went, and they were not so lucky. A dozen hands grasped it and there was a scrimmage that would make the Yale and Harvard elevens turn green with envy. As 10 o'clock drew near the suits and overcoats were keeping the crowd busy, and the scuffles were laughable enough.

Then the door was opened. Six clerks stood by to grasp the first men and boys in, but they had their hands full. It was extremely difficult to pick the winners, the finish being so close, and three besides the lucky ones claimed to have been in first. They were all three given consolation prizes in the shape of suits of clothes, and everybody was happy.

Meanwhile the fun outside was still going on. The crowd had increased until it packed the street, and suits and overcoats were still flying out of the window into the "push." The tall man had the advantage, but he had to fight for his prize, as each article that fell had a dozen claimants. Four men got hold of one pair of trousers, and they struggled all over the street for fully twenty minutes before they mixed in with the crowd again.

Two young fellows lost their tempers over a suit and got to fighting. As the patrol wagon carried them off one of them with a grin sat down on the suit. At the police station M. S. Burrows bailed them out, and after making them shake hands took them back to the store and presented each with a suit of clothes.

It was a great morning, and many a needy individual was supplied with clothing, which was evidently a very welcome addition to his wardrobe.

THE MAYOR IS ANGRY.

He Writes Governor Clough a Sharp Letter.

The mayor is incensed at the action taken by Governor Clough in ignoring him and calling on Sheriff Butchart to see that the law prohibiting sparring contests was not violated at Jimmy Murphy's athletic exhibition last evening. And the mayor does not mind telling the governor how he feels about him either, and the governor will tomorrow morning open a letter from the mayor that will contain some peppery remarks.

The missive in question will express the mayor's surprise that his excellency should overlook the city's chief executive and call on the sheriff to preserve order in Duluth. Such a course, Mayor Truelsen feels, indicates that the governor must have taken it for granted that the former has totally forgotten his oath and his duty to the people.

Ex-Detective Benson, the author of the letter calling on the governor to interfere, comes in for a few lines that will make the paper on which they are written smoke. That the governor should act on such information without investigation, the mayor assures the governor is a source of surprise to him and to many of the best citizens, and the governor is assured that if he knew Mr. Benson as well as does the mayor, the letter would have gone into the waste basket. The mayor states that Mr. Benson is animated by a desire for revenge on account of his discharge from the services of the city.

"The entertainment last night, I am informed by Chief Hansen, who was present, justified my course in allowing it to proceed," said the mayor today. "Representatives of the best element of our people were there, and there were none of the features that render prize fighting odious.

"I do not consider that the governor's course was justified by either the character of the information he received or the facts in the case."

In the false imprisonment case of Axel Hendrickson against Oscar Peterson the attorneys were closing to the jury at noon.

Judge Morris was still at work on the case of Andrew Swordling against the Security bank, and Judge Ensign this morning gave the suit of Hare against the Eastern Railway company to the jury. At noon he was hearing the case of Culver Brothers against B. F. Howard, to recover about $500 on a bill for goods which the defendant claims is more than offset by a note for $5000.

AWFUL BUTCHERY.

Five Campbell People Were Cruelly Murdered.

San Jose, Cal., May 27.—Col. R. P. McGlincy and wife, their daughter, Mrs. James Dunham, James Wells, a son of Mrs. McGlincy; a hired man named James Bigson, were killed at Campbell by James Dunham, a son-in-law of Col. McGlincy, who made his escape.

About midnight a neighbor named Page heard the report of shots in the direction of the McGlincy home. Almost immediatly thereafter, there came galloping hoofs on the country road. Hurriedly dressing, Page proceeded to the home of the McGlincy and was horrified to find in the reception room the body of Mr. Wells. Evidently an awful struggle had taken place between Wells and the assassin.

In the reception room adjoining no bodies were found, but the furniture was literally smashed into fragments, showing that a fearful fight had taken place. Adjoining the dining room was the apartment occupied by Mrs. McGlincy. There she was found literally slashed to pieces with a hatchet. Blood was everywhere and there was evidence of a terrible struggle having taken place between the poor woman and her son-in-law. The other victims were found in other apartments.

The last seen of Dunham he was riding rapidly toward San Jose on horseback. Family troubles are said to have caused the murder.

The only one in the house who escaped alive was a baby one month old, the child of Mrs. Dunham and the alleged murderer. Col. McGlincy was one of the California commissioners to the World's fair at Chicago.

A CREE ROUND-UP.

Cavalry Sent Out After the Redskins.

Minneapolis, May 27.—A Great Falls, Mont., special to the Journal says that two troops of cavalry have been ordered from Ft. Custer to round up the Cree Indians, so that they may be deported to Canada in accordance with recent federal legislation. The Cree say they will not go unless Canada proclaims amnesty for their participation in the Riel rebellion. They fear death sentences if returned to Canada, and prefer the alternative of fleeing to the mountains and becoming "bad Indians."

REFORMED CHURCH.

Dayton in Line With a Church Convention.

Dayton, Ohio, May 27.—The twelfth synod of the Reformed Church of America is holding its triennial session here. The general synod convenes every three years. Thirty years ago the synod met here. There are quite a number of changes to be suggested at this meeting. The presidents and secretary of the foreign and home missions will report; the Sunday school, ministerial and other committees will submit their reports, and the synod will be very busy for seven or eight days.

Tonight the president of the general synod is to be selected. It is thought that Dr. J. A. Peters, of Heidelberg college, Tiffin, Ohio, will be the chosen president, and Rev. J. H. Bomberger will be elected stated clerk. Dr. John Sechler, pastor of the First Reformed church, Philadelphia, will deliver the opening address.

There are about 300 visitors present. The session promises to be one of the most interesting that has been held for years.

WRANGLE

National Phohibition Convention Commences Its Session at Pittsburg Today.

And Gold and Silver Elements Clash at the Outset.

An Advantage, But Only Temporary, Gained By Goldbugs.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 27.—There was no lagging on the part of the delegations to the national Prohibition convention today. They were all astir bright and early, and long before the hour for calling the convention to order had come, the delegates had all assembled in Music hall, at the Exposition building, and there were thousands of Prohibitionists from all parts of the country who had come to watch the proceedings. The galleries were crowded and so was the main floor. All were intensely interested. It was the seventh national convention of the party, and, according to those old war horses of Prohibition, who have taken part in every national convention the party has ever held, it was the most exciting.

Never before has the party had a question to settle which caused so much contention as has been developed here during the last few days over the money plank of the platform. A part of the delegates are strongly in favor of adopting a plank to the effect of such platform declaring in favor of the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1. This wing also desires to declare for the government ownership of railways and telegraph lines, for woman suffrage, for the abolition of trusts and monopolies, for restricted immigration and, as one of the leaders put it, for "everything that anybody wants."

The opposing faction believes that the Prohibition party should confine its declarations to the one issue of Prohibition, and ever since the delegates began to assemble, the factions have been increasing in bitterness. The gold standard faction scored the first victory last night in the national committee when it elected A. A. Stevens, of this state, to act as temporary chairman for the convention. By this defeat the broad guage or free silver wing was only intensified in its desire to dominate. The leaders of each side had met before the hour for calling the convention to order for the purpose of making a few final preparations.

It was long after 10 o'clock when Samuel Dickie, chairman of the national committee stepped upon the platform and called the convention to order. When he had done this he called upon the Rev. Louis Banks, of Brooklyn, to invoke the blessing of God. The call was then read, after which L. H. Castle, of this city, made an address of welcome.

In the course of his address Mr. Castle said, "Six months ago, through your executive committee, you were invited to come to Pittsburg. You accepted our invitation and now I have the honor of welcoming you to our city as the representatives of an army of thousands of the most loyal and single-hearted patriots and of thousands of as devoted, consecrated women as ever gathered under any banner, or made warfare against any enemy. You have come from all sections of this vast country. From East, from West, from North, from South, you have come to our splendid city of Pittsburg; the city whose natural boundaries include the spot where Washington first demonstrated his abilities to be a leader of men; the city where the Republican party, in purity and truthfulness, was born for the saving of the country.

"Pittsburg asked the privilege of entertaining the Republican convention, but St. Louis opened a free bar and the modern Republicans could not resist the temptation of free drink. We did not ask for the Democratic party. Pittsburg has a horror of dead things. There is a great fitness in Democracy going to that city of the plains, where there is such splendid chance for a burying ground, beyond the possibility of contamination of air and water. I feel sure I speak the heart of Pittsburg when I welcome you to our city, and bid you, by its industry and surroundings, that has made this city great, learn the road to greatness."

Then, after reviewing the history, progress and growth of the Prohibition movement, he concluded as follows: "And may God Almighty bless your coming, and may an Almighty God, through you, curse and blight and wither and destroy the legalized liquor traffic, the greatest foe to God and humanity ever invented in hell or patented on earth."

Chairman Dickie made a brief reply, in which he thanked Mr. Castle and the citizens of Pittsburg for the cordial treatment the representatives of the Prohibition party had received. He had attended many conventions of the party. He had attended it when it was a party of minor importance in the eyes of the older political bodies, but he thanked God that he had lived to see it become of such proportions that it was now recognized throughout the nations. Both speakers were frequently interrupted by applause.

When he had finished his response to the address he said he had the honor to introduce the gentleman chosen to act as temporary chairman by the national committee, A. A. Stevens, of Pennsylvania. When he had said this, Chauncey M. Dunn, of California, arose and said he had a minority report to offer. He presented the name of E. J. Wheeler and moved it be substituted for that of Mr. Stevens. He was told to sit down by M. Dickie, but refused. An uproar followed, but amid cries of "Sit down" Mr. Stevens took the chair.

Mr. Dunn refused to sit down and appealed from the decision of the chair. "I am asking Mr. Dickie to rule upon my appeal," yelled Mr. Dunn. "We won't submit to this gag rule."

There were cries from all parts of the house for Mr. Dickie to come forward and make a ruling on the appeal. He came out at length, and amid hisses and howls said that there could be no appeal taken in an unorganized body. Finally, for harmony's sake, Mr. Wheeler withdrew his name, after the police had been called to eject unruly delegates. Mr. Wheeler was loudly cheered and there were denunciatory cries against what the broad guagers termed outrageous gag rule.

It was the first clash between the free silver and gold standard delegates on the convention floor, and the single issue crowd won. Mr. Stevens, the temporary chairman, finally succeeded in restoring order, and then proceeded to address the convention. He briefly reviewed the history of the Prohibition party, telling the causes which led up to its organization. He told of the different conventions the party had held, and paid a eulogistic tribute to each presidential candidate who in turn had borne the standard of the party.

In conclusion he said the Republicans at their convention would declare for tariff reform, the Democrats for sound money and the Populists for free silver. Each had a dominant issue to advocate. The Prohibition party should now come forward with its dominant issue. It should have prohibition and none other. He was loudly applauded when he had finished.

At this point Mr. Dickie said he had neglected to name a temporary secretary in behalf of the national committee. The gentleman chosen was A. B. Wilson, of Illinois.

There were no objections, and the chairman directed the secretary to call the roll by states for the announcemen. of committees and members, after which a recess was taken until 3 o'clock to give the committees opportunity to act.

THE NELSON-TOWNE BILL.

Relief Extended to About Two Hundred Families.

Washington, May 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The house today agreed to the conference report upon the Nelson-Towne bill for the relief of the settlers on the second indemnity belt of the Northern Pacific railroad in Minnesota and the measure will now go to the president. It provides in effect that all those settlers, who, at the time the Northern Pacific second indemnity belt lands were held by the interior department to be opened to homestead settlement went upon the lands, made settlement and improvement and final entry of the lands, and also those settlers who went upon lands for the purpose of entering them, and were denied the privilege, and who resided six months thereon, may within the next two years be entitled to take other homesteads anywhere on the public domain in place of those to which they would have been entitled under their first settlement, and enter and commute the same under the terms of the law of 1889.

This extends relief to about 200 families, mostly in the Sixth district. The bill was introduced early in the session by Mr. Towne in the house and a somewhat similar bill by Senator Nelson in the senate. His bill passed the senate and Mr. Towne's passed the house. The matter went to the conference committee and they reported a substitute, practically combining the merits of both bills. There is no doubt that the president will sign it as Mr. Towne has already received an assurance by the interior department that that department will recommend it favorably when inquired about by the president, as is his custom.

HIS MISSION SUCCESSFUL.

Washington, May 27.—(Special to the Herald.)—Frank E. Searle, of Duluth, who has been in Providence, New York, Baltimore and other Eastern cities in the interests of a committee which is attempting to reorganize the street railway company of St. Cloud, arrived here today. He is said to have been successful in his efforts and will now return to Minnesota.

WOMEN

The General Federation of Women's Clubs in Session at Louisville.

President Henrotin Delivers Her Address to Seven Hundred Listeners.

Growth of the Women's Club Movement Shown By Figures.

Louisville, Ky., May 27.—The third biennial of the General Federation of Women's clubs was formally inaugurated this morning at 9:30. It is estimated that 700 visitors are in attendance. The meeting was called to order by Mrs. C. P. Barnes, president of the Louisville Woman's club, and after a short invocation by Rev. Garland Spencer, of Providence, an address of welcome was delivered by Mrs. Patti Semple, the first vice-president of the Louisville club. Mrs. Henrotin, president of the General Federation of Women's clubs, after a few words of thanks, in lieu of a set speech, referred the delegates to her printed address, which in part was as follows:

One of the forces powerfully affecting the civilization of the twentieth century is the "woman" question, for of necessity the emancipation of one-half the citizens of a country, that half of the community pledged by tradition and instinct to maintain the cause of law and order, to promote the peaceful arts and to protect childhood, must ultimately influence all social questions; all countries and all causes will feel its effects.

It has been reserved to the twentieth century to witness the birth and development of organizations similar to the General Federation of Women's clubs, pledged through organization and by educational methods to raise the moral, social and economic standard of life of the average woman. This educational movement among women was inaugurated about the middle of the century, for then women began to realize how illy fitted they were either in mind or body to cope successfully with new industrial conditions. It affected the women in the home as powerfully as it did women who were forced by economic conditions into the competitive labor market.

The Woman's club movement has been one of the educational factors of the century, and it has been valuable, as it enabled women who could leave home to proceed with their education through classes and in the department club to transmit into action the knowledge they had acquired. The club calendars now embrace civics, household economies, education, sociology, literature, art and science. Many clubs are chartered organizations with large incomes. Many have formed stock companies and built club houses.

Six years ago the General Federation was organized, having as its object the union of the clubs of the country to promote their efficiency by a comparison of methods of work, to enlarge and quicken the intellectual and social life of women. The federation is today an organization of vast dimensions, numbering over 478 clubs and 20 state federations with 947 clubs. The membership of these clubs includes the large city clubs, numbering many hundreds, to the small club whose membership does not exceed thirty or forty. The membership of the General Federation by states is as follows:

Alabama, 2; Arkansas, 4; California, 17; Colorado, 12; Connecticut, 7; Delaware, 1; Washington (D. C.), 3; Florida, 1; Georgia, 4; Idaho, 5; Illinois, 74; Indiana, 22; Iowa, 35; Kansas, 2; Kentucky, 16; Louisiana, 2; Maine, 4; Maryland, 3; Massachusetts, 59; Missouri, 8; Montana, 1; Mississippi, 1; Nebraska, 1; New Hampshire, 1; New Jersey, 16; New Mexico, 1; New York, 56; Dakota, 1; Ohio, 56; Oregon, 3; Pennsylvania, 21; Rhode Island, 5; South Carolina, 1; South Dakota, 2; Tennessee, 6; Texas, 4; Utah, 2; Vermont, 1; Washington, 7; Wisconsin, 8; India, 3; England, 1; Australia, 1.

In 1894 three states were federated auxiliary to the general, Iowa, Maine, Massachusetts. In May, 1896, the state federations are New Hampshire, Rhode Island, New York and New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Minnesota, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee, Kansas, Colorado, Missouri, Utah, Nebraska and the District of Columbia, making twenty states now federated.

Two states have federated which have not yet joined the general, Alabama and Florida. The membership of all is growing rapidly.

Reports were received from chairmen of committees on credentials, rules and regulations, reciprocity and correspondence, and on badges. Reports were made also by the treasurer, Mrs. Cooper, of San Francisco; the auditor, Miss Anna Laws, of Cincinnati; the recording secretary, Mrs. C. P. Barnes, of Louisville, and the corresponding secretary, Mrs. Phillip N. Moore, of St. Louis.

The regular department meetings were opened at 11 o'clock. That at Macauley's theater was devoted to literature, Chairman, Mrs. F. Howe Hall, of Plainfield. The ladies at Liederkranz hall gave their attention to financial questions, Mrs. Longstreth, of Philadelphia, being chairman.

RECEIVERS APPOINTED.

Omaha, Neb., May 27.—As a result of the death of D. M. Searle, of St. Joe, the federal court today appointed Dudley Smith, president of the Steele Smith Grocery company, of Omaha, and S. C. Woodson, of St. Joe, receivers for that company. The action is no wise due to inability to liquidate, as it is a very strong concern. The company will be reorganized at once. Several hundred thousand dollars is involved.

WALLING TRIAL PROGRESS.

Newport, Ky., May 27.—In the Walling trial today sixty-seven men out of a venire of seventy-five responded. Only five jurors were obtained out of this list, and three of them were peremptorily challenged by the defense. This left only eleven jurors. Another venire was ordered and court adjourned until tomorrow.

Bridge Calamity at Victoria Probably Caused One Hundred Deaths.

Frightful Battles For Life Amid the Ruin and Debris.

A Festal Day Turned Into One of Death and Sorrow.

Seattle, Wash., May 27.—The Post Intelligencer from Victoria, B. C., says that from the brightness and glory of holiday festivities, Victoria was yesterday plunged into the darkness and horror of a terrible accident which sent a thrill of unutterable sadness through the thousands of guests and filled the city with mourning. An electric tram car on its way from the city to the scene of the military parade and sham battle crashed through the Ellice Point bridge, and without a moment's warning sixty-one souls were plunged into eternity. The list of the identified dead are as follows:

Mrs. J. A. Trout, of Seattle.
Sophie and Alice Smith.
James Thompson, of Patterson.
Grace Elford, daughter of P. Elford.
Mrs. Fred Adams.
Fred Adams.
Mrs. William Heathernbell, of Spring Ridge.
Mrs. G. H. Woodhouse, of Seattle.
Mrs. D. L. Ballard, of Providence, R. I.
J. A. VanBokkeelen, of Port Townsend.
J. K. Leveridge, of Spring Ridge.
Gabrielle Marratta, of Seattle.
Mrs. Thomas, of Seattle.
Guiseppe Mauro, of Seattle.
Mrs. Thomas I. Physic, wife of Thomas Physic, of Vancouver.
Mr. and Mrs. S. Pearson.
B. W. Murphy, son of Foreman Murphy, of Victoria waterworks.
A. J. Cromwell.
Mrs. Seriestly, of Minneapolis.
—— Marratta, an Italian harpist, of Seattle.
Mrs. Dr. Prevost, of Seattle.
Mrs. Edward Hoosen.
—— Edmunds.
W. A. Fuller.
Mrs. G. I. Post and her son.
Frank Orestavaiss.
Minnie Robertson.
The two Misses Bownes.
Mrs. Florence Goodacre, of Tacoma.
Mrs. Frost.

The carnival was just closing, but the management had planned to make the day the climax of the celebration. A military parade had been arranged to take place at Point Macaulay, the rugged promontory that half girdles the harbor to the west of the city and afterwards a sham battle was to be given.

Early in the afternoon the crowd began making its way toward the parade ground. The main route from the city is by the electric line which crosses Victoria arm on a bridge at Ellice Point. The first car got over Point Ellice bridge safely, but when the second, which was heavily laden, was half way across, an ominous sound was heard, that told of something giving ay. The next instant the middle span of the bridge, about 150 feet in length, swerved northward toward the gorge and the car went down with a terrific crash. The tide was high at the time and the car was completely submerged, going down into fully twenty-five feet of water.

The people who were packed on the platforms were in the most fortunate position. The majority of them that escaped injury from falling timbers succeeded in saving themselves, as there was sufficient debris floating about to enable them to make their way to shore. Soon boats and carriages came from every direction, loaded with men, who at once began the work of rescuing those who were struggling in the water, and the unfortunates who were submerged in the car. The fire department also turned out and assisted in the work of rescue. Capt. Grant's grounds and house were thrown open to receive those apparently drowned. As soon as the bodies were taken from the water volunteers, acting under the direction of physicians, arrived on the scene and began the ork or resuscitation. In many cases their efforts were crowned with success. While many Victorians were on the fatal car the majority were visitors and the work of identification was difficult. Fifty-seven bodies were identified. There are others whose names could not be ascertained, and still more undoubtedly, whose bodies have not yet been recovered from the water.

SCENES OF HORROR.

Eye Witnesses at Victoria Relate Their Stories.

Victoria, B. C., May 27.—Thousands of sorrowing friends and relatives crowded around the approaches to the bridge eagerly scanning each body as it was brought to land. Mothers crazed by the loss of husbands or children, attempted to jump in the water in their eagerness to rescue their loved ones.

As body after body was brought to the shore the crowd rushed forward to search each mangled face, dreading the possibility that it might be that of some one whom they hoped had escaped from the death-trap. Twenty persons, known to have been on the bridge at the time of the accident, are missing, and it is probable they perished. The car register show ninety fares. On the surface of the water struggling people fought to gain shore. Strong men and frail women battled for their lives. Husbands emerged from the wreckage only to find their wives had gone down to death. Children were carried down by those who were stronger, and fathers, also, who had struggled from beneath the debris of the bridge and carriages, returned to their doom in vain endeavors to rescue their babies.

The waters of the arm for yards around were dyed red with blood and floating out to sea went corpse after corpse, borne on by the tide. The shrieks of men, the screams of women and children, filled the air and nerved the crowds of rescuers on to efforts that endangered life and limb.

It is claimed by many that fully 200 people went down with the span, and that more than half of them perished. The rescue of the victims, under the circumstances, was almost miraculous.

Among those saved were Mr. and Mrs. Foster, of Seattle. Mr. Foster stood on the outside of the electric car and his wife was seated within. When the car went down, he jumped and dived, coming up and catching a bridge timber, he saw a lady rise near him. She was a Victoria woman, who had accompanied himself and wife. He then saw his wife's cloak appear upon the water. He called to a man to save her and not in vain, for the man swam to Mrs. Foster's rescue and bore her to the land.

Superintendent Wilson, of the Canadian Pacific Railway telegraph, was driving a carriage, containing his wife and five children, behind the ill-fated car. His vehicle was swept down, and in a moment the entire family were struggling in the water. With rare presence of mind Mr. Wilson succeeded in saving his wife and four of the children. The fifth child, a little boy, was wedged beneath some wreckage and drowned.

MEXICAN MIRACLES.

Mexico City, May 27.—A grand ecclesiastical function occurred here yesterday at the Professa church in commemoration of Saint Felipe Neri, patron saint of Mexico. The apostolic delegate, arrayed in full pontifical robes, presided, representing the pope. A sensation has been caused in the state of Tobasco by the appearance of a young Indian prophetess, who predicts a general conflagration, to be preceded by signs and wonders, among them the falling of edifices and the premature speaking of infants.

SOUTHWESTERN STORMS.

Kansas City, Mo., May 27.—Severe storms, which at some points almost assumed proportions of a cyclone, prevailed in Central Kansas and Southern Missouri Monday night and Tuesday morning, doing more or less damage. No reports of casualties are reported. Heavy rains were experienced at Great Bend and Wichita, Kan. In Missouri they were more severe. At Springfield a terrific wind prevailed. The First Baptist church, Metropolitan hotel, Arlington hotel and the Springfield Furniture company's factory had been partly blown off and fruit trees in that neighborhood were stripped.

AFTER AFRICAN ANIMALS.

Washington, May 27. — Professor Daniel G. Elliott, of the Field Columbia museum, of Chicago, with C. H. Akeley and Mr. Dodsen, who accompanied Dr. Donaldson Smith on his recent expedition to Lake Rudolph, in Central Africa, arrived at Aden, at the mouth of the Red sea, on April 24, and, after a stay at that point of a week, securing camels and stores, proceeded on a scientific exploration of Central Africa, their main purpose being to collect specimens of the animals of the country, which are reported to be rapidly disappearing. Ten months will be consumed in the exploration.

A HUNDRED YEARS OLD.

Some Sound Scientific Suggestions to Men and Women Who Are Looking Into the Future.

"How can I live a hundred years?"

Very happy most of us would be if we only knew the secret of the centenarian's life and now that secret has at last been discovered. A well-known scientist who made this discovery, has for years past been investigating the habits of men and women who have reached advanced years. He has found that in nearly every case the people who enjoy the healthiest and happiest old age are those who make regular use of some pure stimulant.

"After middle life," he says, "the energies droop and nature requires stimulating and assisting. For this reason, old people who wish to be strong and well should never let a day pass without taking some pure stimulant which can be depended upon."

This is an interesting fact and it clearly shows that scientific men are correct when they tell us that nothing compares with a pure stimulant for building up the system. They also tell us that the safest and best stimulant is pure malt whisky, because it is not only a tonic but a food for the nerves and tissues. There is, in fact, only one pure whisky in existence, entirely free from adulteration. It is known as Duffy's pure malt whisky and thousands of aged men and women have testified to its remarkable strengthening effects.

Elderly people who suffer from stomach ailments or any form of weakness will find great relief from taking Duffy's pure malt. It is not an ordinary whisky but a pure stimulant which contains all the properties that contribute to health and none that can injure. For this reason, in purchasing from grocers or druggists, beware of inferior imitations and insist on getting exactly what you ask for.

WEDDING

The Approaching Nuptials of a Daughter of the Vice-President.

Miss Julia Stevenson to Wed Rev. M. D. Hardin, of Kentucky.

The Young Man Famous For Oratory and as an Athlete.

Washington, May 27.—Capital society is on the qui vive over the approaching nuptials of Miss Julia Stevenson, daughter of Vice President Stevenson, and the Rev. Martin D. Hardin, of Danville, Ky. The ceremony will take place in the New York Avenue Presbyterian church, and will be followed by a reception at the Normandie hotel, where the Stevensons have made their home.

Mr. Hardin is the eldest son of Hon. Parker Watkins Hardin, for twelve years attorney general of Kentucky. "Wat" Hardin is the best-known politician in the state, and is an old friend of Mr. Stevenson. Both were educated at Center college, Danville. Mr. Hardin is a wealthy man, and his son Martin has brilliant prospects. Martin graduated from Center college two years ago, then read law with his father. He prepared to go to Louisville to open an office, when he became impressed with the idea that he must enter the ministry. Without hesitation he gave up his brilliant prospects, and, returning to Danville, matriculated as a student of the Presbyterian theological seminary. The ex-attorney general is not inferior to Senator Blackburn as a stump speaker, and his son has inherited his oratorical talents. While a student at Center college two years ago he won the medal for oratory and then won the intercollegiate medal for the state. He was selected as the representative of Kentucky in the Interstate collegiate oratorical contest at Charleston two years ago. There were contestants from nine Southern states, but young Hardin was an easy winner again. He taught elocution in Center college.

But the young man is famous in quite another direction. He is one of the best athletes in the state or in the South, and made a great reputation as a football player two years ago. At that time the Center college team was under the direction of G. G. Berry, a physical director from Yale. Mr. Hardin was a plucky member of the team, and his bold and skillful playing won him more popular favor than his abilities as a debater.

Miss Julia is the oldest of the Stevenson sisters. She has her father's charm of manner, and is handsome, bright and popular. She is a brunette, and, like her father, is tall and slim. She is just a little bit taller than Mr. Hardin, who comes of a stalwart family, but is himself under medium size. She first met him two years ago on a visit here with her parents, and they have been sweethearts for over a year.

The following will be the bridesmaids: Miss Letitia Stevenson, Misses Jane and Julia Hardin, sisters of the bridegroom, and the Misses Scott, cousins of the bride. The groomsmen will be Francis Douglas, of Danville, Ky.; W. W. Longmoor, of Frankfort, Ky.; William Vrooman and Charles Hardin, Harrodsburg, Ky., and John Fox, Jr., of Big Stone Gap, Va. After a short wedding tour Mr. Hardin will take charge of a church at Bowling Green, Ky., for the summer, and in the winter will go to Edinburgh, Scotland, to complete his theological studies.

ARRESTED AGAIN.

Grand Rapids, Minn., May 27.—Peter McKenna, alias "One Eyed Pete," who supposed that the charge of murder against him was dropped, has been again lodged in jail. He was before the district court last January for killing John Bacon, who was burned to death at Russell's ranch last September, but was allowed to go. Since that time new evidence has been discovered.

The Wailing trial is in progress at Newport, Ky., and much difficulty is experienced in getting a jury.

John Bjorgo, ex-state senator from Grand Forks county, and postmaster at Thompson, N. D., died while eating his supper in Beattie's restaurant at Crookston yesterday. He was en route home from a visit to his father and brothers at McIntosh. Heart failure is supposed to be the cause of death.

At New York, more than two weeks having been spent in securing a jury, the trial of Mary Alice Livingstone Fleming, charged with causing the death of her mother, Mrs. Bliss, by poisoning, was gotten fairly under way yesterday. The case for the prosecution was set forth in an address to the jury by Assistant District Attorney Miller, and then the hearing of evidence was begun.

The anticipated rise in the Red Lake river at Crookston is slow in coming and the water now lacks two feet of reaching the highest point attained two weeks ago. It is, however, rising steadily and will continue to do so for another day. The houses are many of them inundated.

There will be no strike of the street car employes in Toledo, Ohio, at present. This decision was reached at a conference at midnight last night between President Long, of the Toledo Traction company, and a committee from the Street Railway union. The men do not desire to press their claims, pending the organization of the street railway systems of that city under one management which will be completed within two weeks.

TENNESSEE JUBILEE.

State's Centennial Will Commence Next Monday.

Nashville, Tenn., May 27.—Great preparations are in progress for the centennial celebration of Tennessee, which will occur on June 1 and 2. The city is being decorated handsomely and everybody is looking forth to one of the most notable demonstrations in the history of the state. There will be a grand parade and pageant on June 1, the Tennessee Centennial day, and the ceremonies at the exposition grounds will be imposing and impressive. There will be a sunrise salute of sixteen guns, Tennessee being the sixteenth state admitted to the Union, and after the parade a flag raising with a salute of one gun for every state in the Union.

The principal speaker for the occasion will be Hon. J. M. Dickinson, assistant United States solicitor general. The other speakers will be Hon. A. A. Taylor and Hon. E. W. Carmack. The different societies will participate and the exercises for the two days will be most elaborate and interesting. The diplomatic corps, governors of states, and many dignitaries have been invited. An important feature of the exercises will be the formal inauguration of the Tennessee centennial exposition, which will not be opened, however, until May 1, 1897. The exposition while a celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the state will be of national and international importance and of vast proportions. The buildings, several of which are already erected, will be of exceptional beauty and dimensions, and the grounds will be rich with displays of flowers. Applications for space for exhibits are coming in from all quarters of the globe.

It was originally intended to open the exposition this year, but for better preparation the opening was postponed until May 1, next year, which will not be a political year.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. Nowadays when women are trying to do everything it is not strange that many things are over-done. It is not strange that there are all kinds of physical and mental disturbances. If the woman who is a doctor, or a lawyer, or a journalist, or in business would not try to be a society woman too it might be different; but the woman who knows when she has done a day's work has yet to be born. Usually a woman's way is to keep doing until she drops. Working in this way has manifold evils. The most common trouble resulting from over-exertion, either mentally or physically, is constipation of the bowels, with all its attendant horrors.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the most effectual remedy in the market. They work upon the system easily, naturally. There is no unpleasant nausea after taking them. No griping—no pain—no discomfort. They are composed of materials that go through the system gradually, collecting all impurities and, like the good little servants that they are, disposing of them effectually. Sold by druggists.

THE PRODUCE MARKET.

Market today was well supplied, except in strawberries which were rather scarce but fine in quality and flavor. Some nice lamb was seen in the cooling rooms and veal was in fine condition. Poultry has evidently given the Duluth market the go-by, as there isn't a feather on the tables. Green stuff looked fresh and appetizing, and buying was brisk.

DULUTH QUOTATIONS.

DECLARED FOR SILVER.

Cook County Democrats Instruct For Silver Coinage.

Chicago, May 27.—Cook's county Democratic convention yesterday afternoon elected 362 delegates to the state convention at Peoria, adopted a platform prepared by Governor Altgeld, A. S. Trude, Thomas Gahan, chairman of the county central committee, and other silver leaders, and instructed the delegates to vote for Dr. Julia Holmes Smith for trustee of the state university. The platform contained no allusion to Governor Altgeld's administration, this reticence being due no doubt to the fact that it was known that the document was largely of the governor's composition. The financial plank was as follows:

"We declare in favor of the immediate repeal of all that Republican unpatriotic revolutionary legislation of 1873, demonetizing silver, and we demand the immediate restoration of the Democratic system of free and unlimited coinage of both gold and silver without waiting for any other nation."

A. S. Trude was temporary and permanent chairman. In his address he spoke of "the favorite son of Illinois," John P. Altgeld, who "towered cloud-high above all that had been named yet for majestic independence of thought and principle." This brought out the ovation of the day. The speaker likened Governor Altgeld to Stephen A. Douglas, and the times in which he lived to the present days. Like Douglas, he had been abused by the press, the pulpit, and at one time the mob.

DECLINED

Wheat Market Was Weak Again Today and Prices Dropped.

Yet the News From Outside Was of a Bullish Character.

Receipts Were Lower and the Crop Damage Reports Were Confirmed.

The wheat market was weak for a moment at the start and then had a half hour's change of sentiment before it had a second relapse into despondency. Its recoveries from the weak spells were sometimes rather sharp during the forenoon. A more confident feeling was expressed by those who favored the bull side, and the recently heavy sellers at Chicago were rather inclined to buy back short wheat on every decline in preference to selling more on the bulges. The reports concerning the expected poor result of the winter wheat harvest, while still meeting with little more and seeming of their rank and file of the short sellers, were not being judged of so contemptuously by the recognized bear leaders. The general crop bull, however, was disposed to hold to its latter day conviction of the happy results of bearishness. Cables, though coming lower, were not as much as expected, Northwestern receipts were small and the government crop reports confirmed damage reports which have been circulating lately. Despite this bullish news, weakness prevailed during most of the session, with active trading.

July opened ¼c lower at 60¾c, sold up to 60¾c, reacted to 60¼c, again advanced to 60¾c and during the last half hour weakened once more and touched 59¾c, gaining ⅛c before the close, which was weak at 60c asked. September sold from 60⅝c down to 60¼c. The mills bought 50,000 bus to arrive at the July price and shippers took 75,000 bus at ¼c under July. The clearances were lower than yesterday for cash, unchanged for May and ½c lower for futures. Following were the closing prices:

Wheat—No. 1 hard, cash, 61c; May, 61¼c; July, 61¼c. No. 1 northern, cash, 59¾c; May, 60c asked; June, 60c asked; July, 60c asked; September, 60¼c asked. No. 2 northern, 57¾@57¾c. No. 3, 53¼@56¼c. GOSSIP.

Received over private wire of B. E. Baker, grain and stock broker, room 107 Chamber of Commerce and 307 Board of Trade, Chicago, May 27.—Wheat opened easy on lower cables but firmed up at once good local buying. A number of prominent traders appeared to think that wheat was low enough to buy but late cables came still lower and though a fair milling inquiry was noted here the tone of the market was weak and plenty of wheat came out on bulges. The Bradstreets report showed a much larger decrease than buyers expected, but its effect was contrary and St. Louis traders who had covered freely early seized the opportunity to raid forcing out a lot of stop orders and causing a quick decline to 59¾c. Northwestern receipts appear on line to increase and the outside speculators are conspicuous by their absence. The buying is by the bears who cover their short wheat only to put it on again. The market shows every indication of going to 58c or lower, notwithstanding the fact that each decline will bring export business. About 300,000 bus were taken for export at New York today.

Corn and oats supported by buying by shorts but followed wheat to some extent. Provisions well sustained by local shorts who covered freely.

Puts, July wheat, 58¾@¾c.

Calls, July wheat, 59¾c.

BOWERY BANKS.

Some Relics of the Old Cash Strongholds.

The Bowery Savings bank directors have preserved in their fine new building some relics of the days when the institution was struggling against heavy odds for existence sixty-two years ago. The stoop of the first bank building is built into the mammoth new vault, and a curious assortment of quaint business papers are zealously kept under lock and key in the trustees' room. The relic most prized is a little brass-studded leather trunk, not more than a cubic foot in size, which is preserved in a glass case upon the big table around which the director's discuss the bank's affairs. This trunk was the bank's first deposit vault, and held all the cash, securities, notes, checks, legal papers and business correspondence of the institution for several years. It was purchased shortly after the bank was chartered in 1834 by an economical secretary, who had been authorized to purchase "two trunks for the use of the bank," but who refused to buy more than one on the ground that only one was needed. The trunk was stored nightly in the vaults of the Butchers' and Drovers' bank, in whose old building the savings institution rented quarters.

The trunk has been a mute witness of many stages in the bank's history since that time. When it first did service the forty incorporators of the bank had so little working capital that they performed all the clerical duties themselves without pay. Since then the bank has been enlarged several times, and rebuilt twice.

A history of the Bowery bank, recently published for private circulation, records the fact that at one time the directors contemplated winding up the business. This was during the panic of 1837, when deposits sank to almost nothing, and only a timely loan of $40,000 of marketable city bonds from the Bank for Savings prevented dissolution. It is out of such a stormy period that the bank has grown to be one of the most prosperous in the city.

In contrast with the trunk that held the nucleus of the bank's wealth, which now taxes an immense vault, are the big trustees' table and the remarkable rug that deadens the sound of the trustees' feet. The table is said to be the largest and handsomest in the world, with the single exception of one in the drawing room of Windsor Castle, England. It is of highly polished rosewood, 30 feet long by 5 wide, and the top is so ingeniously devised as to appear to be made of one solid piece of wood. The rug is almost forty feet square, of costly pattern and fabric, and was made to order in Germany. It is said to have taken a year to make.

CLOUGH'S GAME OF BLUFF.

The Clough boomers are claiming everything, but no one should be deceived by their loose talk. The Merriam-Bixby machine has adopted this style of campaign, hoping to catch the votes of the men who always like to be with the winner. They are now engaged in the difficult task of convincing the people in this section of the state that Clough will win hands down in Hennepin county. In view of the fact that nearly all the leading Republicans in that county, the men who swept the primaries for Loren Fletcher the other day, are opposing Mr. Clough and are certain of electing an anti-Clough delegation, this claim is absurd. An extract from a Minneapolis paper on this subject is reproduced in another column. It shows that the Clough men are actually afraid to hold an early convention in Hennepin county, being fearful of the effect on the other counties. Equally absurd is the claim that Ramsey county will be carried by Clough. It is almost certain to choose a delegation favorable to Moses E. Clapp.

In this connection the following extract from the Winona Republican is interesting as further evidence of the hollowness of the claims made by the Clough boomers: "All this stuff about Governor Clough gaining ground throughout the state, while his opponents are dropping behind, that you hear about in certain newspapers is sheer nonsense," was the remark of a gentleman who within a few days visited the Twin Cities and the northern part of the state. "It is simply a game of bluff. The governor has strikers and blowers in every county, of course; men who hold office by his appointment, and as a rule they are very talkative, and make a great deal of noise as compared with the superficial size of their physical corporosity, but they don't speak for the people. The people, I tell you, are against a perpetuation of the existing state house ring, and they will support Van Sant or Lee, or even the forty-year office seeker Gibbs, before humbling themselves in the dust before Clough and his salaried satellites. Let us declare our independence once more, is the motto, and if I am not mistaken it will be heard from in a very emphatic way within the next two or three weeks."

The Winona paper supports Van Sant and therefore puts his name first, but the fact is that Lee is far in the lead at the present time, with Clapp second. Not only will Mr. Lee have the delegations from sixteen or seventeen of the Sixth district counties, but he will have delegates from nearly every other congressional district. In the Seventh district he has strong supporters, and in the Third several counties will give him their votes. A large section of the Second district will send Lee delegations to St. Paul. The Herald has received a letter from a prominent Republican of Renville county, in which he says: "This (Renville) county will no doubt send a Lee delegation to the state convention, and as near as I can learn he is very likely to hold Redwood, Yellow Medicine, Chippewa, Swift and Lac qui Parle counties, and stands a good chance of carrying Sibley county also." Rock county, in the First district, will be for Lee, and Senator Miller feels confident that all the counties in his senatorial district will be in line for Mr. Lee. These facts show that Mr. Lee is the most prominent candidate, and as the fact becomes generally known that the Merriam machine is fighting him at every point, his strength with the people is steadily increasing.

WHO ARE HIS FRIENDS?

"The supporters of Mr. Lee," says the Clough organ, "are the enemies of Mr. Towne." Nothing could be farther from the truth. There is not one of the supporters of Mr. Lee in St. Louis county who is an emeny of Mr. Towne or against whom the slightest suspicion of this character can be entertained. They are all friends of Mr. Towne—many of them tried and proven friends, who have done battle in his behalf and are ready to fight in his interest whenever the occasion demands it. On the other hand, the supporters of Mr. Clough now include every one of Mr. Towne's recognized political enemies. All those who are ready to knife him, if they thought they could succeed in killing him off, are enrolled under the Clough banner and are led by the head of the "old gang" here—the St. Louis county annex of the Merriam-Bixby machine—who was the chief opponent of Mr. Towne two years ago and has since devoted his time to denouncing and ridiculing Mr. Towne's position on the money question.

And this recalls the fact that some of the Clough boomers here have been trying to create the impression that Mr. Lee's friends who attended the last district convention at Aitkin tried to pass resolutions diametrically opposed to Mr. Towne's views. The fact is that resolutions on the money question, declaring for the single gold standard and opposing bimetallism, were introduced by Warren Potter, who is now the leader of the Clough forces in Aitkin county and is fighting Mr. Lee as far as his limited influence extends. Mr. Kinney, chairman of the St. Louis county delegation, who is now earnestly supporting M. Lee and is also doing all within his power to aid Mr. Towne's renomination, protested and argued against the adoption of any resolutions, perceiving that the temper of the convention was somewhat bitter on the money question. A. D. Davidson, of Little Falls, another of Mr. Lee's closest friends, went to Mr. Potter and begged him not to present the resolutions, but Mr. Potter refused to listen to any persuasion. He was there as the representative of the Merriam-Bixby-Clough machine to make trouble for Mr. Towne, if possible, and he carried out his instructions.

These are facts which cannot be gainsaid. They show how entirely false is the claim of the Clough organ that Mr. Lee's friends are the enemies of Mr. Towne, and they further demonstrate that the best friends Mr. Towne had at Aitkin and the truest friends he now has in Duluth and elsewhere in the district are found among Mr. Lee's supporters in the present campaign.

NEW CANADIAN MAP.

The Canadian government is preparing to issue a new official map, giving a name to every district in the Dominion up to the Arctic ocean. At present there are about 1,411,000 square miles of unnamed territory in Canada. The following are the names of the new districts: Ungava, which includes all the district between Hudson's bay and the Arctic ocean, with the exception of the narrow coast line of Labrador. Franklin, the great group of islands, small continents, some of them, north of Hudson's straits and lying between the sixtieth and 125th degree of west longitude. West of this again is Mackenzie, taking in the mainland country between the northern limit of Athabaska and the Arctic sea, and being between the 100th meridian of longitude and a line about five hundred miles west and parallel with the Mackenzie river. Yukon includes the district inclosed within the latter line and the northern boundary of British Columbia, the eastern boundary of Alaska and the Arctic ocean.

Several of these districts are of immense size. Ontario contains 222,000 square miles, Quebec 228,000 square miles and British Columbia 383,000 square miles, while the district of Ungava is estimated to contain 358,000, Franklin 300,000, Mackenzie 558,000 and Yukon 225,000 square miles.

Discussing the statement that the G. A. R. membership is declining, the Madison, Wis., Journal suggests "a brotherhood on a G. A. R. basis that should in time rank with even Odd Fellowship and Masonry. In this order the veterans should rank with honor, and, passing away, they would leave a body of remembrances and traditions that would speedily form a framework of a great brotherhood. It could be either secret or open, preferably the latter. Surely no order today could have a prouder past or grander relics than those with which the G. A. R. could endow some new fraternity cast on lines of patriotism and brotherhood that should meet the approval of the veterans now living."

William E. Curtis writes from Washington to the Chicago Record: "Major McKinley's managers believe that Mr. Reed will be nominated for vice president. Mr. Reed's friends assert that he would not accept the nomination, but they admit that if he refuses he must retire to private life. They say he is willing to do so; that he would prefer it to second place on the ticket."

Says the News Tribune: "Mr. Towne is as free to declare himself or not to declare himself as if he were a private citizen." Exactly. This is exactly in line with what The Herald has said. The fact that Mr. Towne is a member of congress should not and does not divest him of his duty as a Republican voter in this state. And when Mr. Towne's friends request that he shall inform them as to his preference for the governorship, they do not consider that they are asking anything unreasonable. Mr. Towne undoubtedly will take the same view of their request, which is prompted by friendship and entire devotion to his interests.

John Goodnow and Tim Byrnes, of Minneapolis, were hobnobbing with Maj. McKinley and Mark Hanna at Cleveland last Sunday, and this fact has set all the Minnesota politicians to talking about what it means. A Washington dispatch says: "It is believed that Goodnow has already challenged the coming administration for recognition as the original McKinley man of Minnesota, and that in assertion of his claim he will again cross swords with his ancient enemy, ex-Governor Merriam. This contest will be one full of fire from start to finish, and may affect to a greater or less degree the outcome of the Republican state convention July 1."

Mayor Truelsen is very properly indignant at the action of Governor Clough in directing the sheriff to prevent a prize fight in this city, without first calling upon the chief executive of the city for information in regard to the matter. The fact is that no prize fight was contemplated, and if one had been proposed the mayor would have attended to its prompt suppression. It was merely another grand stand play on the part of Governor Clough, whose suddenly acquired views against prize fighting are laughable to those who know him and his past record.

The News Tribune is always hinting about some diabolical plot to defeat Mr. Towne. Why does it not publish all the facts and thus put Mr. Towne's friends on their guard? If it loved Mr. Towne so dearly as it professes, it would do this. But every person in Duluth knows the full extent of the News Tribune's affection for Mr. Towne. If there is any plot on foot to defeat his renomination, the News Tribune, which is working now to revive the political fortunes of his worst enemies in this county, is one of the chief conspirators.

There are but three counties in the Sixth district that are likely to elect Clough delegates—Mille Lacs, Anoka and Wright. It is possible that he may also get Aitkin, but it is not by any means a certainty. But allowing him Aitkin, this will give Clough but four counties out of twenty and only about one-fifth of the delegates from the Sixth district. These are "the cold facts."

The Minneapolis Journal depicts the political situation thus:

The oil, boiler,
timber,
grain,
mine, factory,
dairy, land and
are for Clough, but THE PEOPLE are against him.

The New Hampshire Democratic convention this week straddled the tariff question.

Duluth is not in the cyclone belt, and for this fact we should be thankful.

CHOICE RECOLLECTIONS.

Detroit Tribune: In the meanwhile, there are being manufactured some choice articles of recollections for statesmen who may fall into the memoir habit.

WOULD STIMULATE PURCHASES.

Dubuque Telegraph: When the United States stood ready to stamp every ounce of silver as a legal tender for $1.29 and all Europe was bidding $1.33 and all Asia $1.38 per ounce of it, who would be likely to sell any ounce of silver for less than $1.29. This question was once asked in a railroad car and a sickly-looking youth spoke up and said he would. His mother sitting by his side waved her hand and said: "Never mind him. He is an idiot and I am taking him to the asylum." Some of the gold advocates are not only ready to agree with this young man, but also profess to believe that European and Asiatic nations will refuse to coin silver if its bullion price is advanced. They coined as freely and were just as well satisfied when silver was worth $1.33 per ounce as they do and are now. An advance in price would merely stimulate them to purchase.

Royal Baking Powder

CLOUGH IS AFRAID.

Opposes an Early Convention in Hennepin County.

Minneapolis Journal: The supporters of Clough are afraid to try the issue. They know that to submit the question to the vote of the people of Hennepin county means their defeat in this county, and they wish to put off that fatal result as long as possible. They know that the state is looking toward Hennepin county to see what Clough's neighbors are going to do on this question. They know that when Clough is defeated in Hennepin county his chances for nomination will be lost. They wish to hold as many other county conventions before that result is positively known as possible.

But their delay will avail them nothing. They have already confessed to the state by their action that they know that they cannot carry Hennepin county. They need not tell the people of the state why they oppose an early convention. If they could carry Hennepin county they would be eager and anxious to demonstrate it at the primaries.

The Republicans of the state have the evidence before them. They need not be deceived. Hennepin county's vote will be cast against the Merriam machine and the action of the leaders on the Clough side is abundant evidence of that fact.

A FEARFUL THOUGHT.

St. Paul Globe: Sir Edwin Arnold telegraphs from Moscow: "Why cannot one write in colors?" Heaven forbid, Sir Edwin! Suppose F. R. E. Woodward and the baseball editor of the Chicago Inter Ocean should have the power to write in colors!

CABINET SIZE.

Chicago Dispatch: Not a photograph of Mark Hanna can be found anywhere which isn't cabinet size.

DUNN'S OFFENSIVE PARTISANSHIP.

Little Falls Transcript: The Republican state committee met on May 20 and called the state convention for July 1. On May 21, the Princeton Union contained the call for the Republican county convention of Mille Lacs county, to be held on June 13. It has been conceded ever since State Auditor Dunn began his active work for Clough that Mille Lacs county would oppose William E. Lee for governor and support Governor Clough. Two years ago the counties that are now most loyal to Lee in the Sixth district, held early conventions and endorsed Mr. Dunn. It is at least interesting to view the haste shown by Mr. Dunn's home county to now go on record against the only candidate for state office that the Sixth district has. Because Lee's friends were energetic in Dunn's interests, our present state auditor is in a position to do effective work against Lee, and he is doing it wherever he can.

HE IS A STAYER.

Alexandria Republican: The St. Cloud Journal-Press says, "Lee is all right." The question is how long will he stay all right.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: He will stay all right all the time. He is a stayer from Stayerville, and he couldn't help being all right, as he was built that way.

WOULD MAKE THE FUR FLY.

St. Cloud Times: If Towne does enter the lists, how, like young Richmond, he will make the fur fly from the royal robes of Dick 2 d—Bill Merriam. But, will he? Has he the courage of Richmond? Ah, there's the rub!

LEE'S STRONG SUPPORT.

Ely Miner: Many of the old leaders in St. Louis county politics have turned their particular efforts towards the nomination of Lee for governor. Still there is a seemingly strong Clough faction which will not surrender. From all present appearances, Lee has much of the support of the Sixth district, and several others as well. Speaker Van Sant has also several hardy political friends in this district championing his cause; with apparently good effect much talk has already been set adrift.

IN THE BAD LANDS STILL.

Chicago Dispatch: Quay, Clarkson and Platt still refuse to leave the Bad Lands and return to the reservation.

THE DAKOTAS.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Richard Barrett, Jr., son of Richard Barrett, who resides on the Marais, about four miles from East Grand Forks, was drowned while bathing in the Marais. The boy was about 13 years of age and he and his brother, five years younger, were in a boat. The oldest boy undressed, got in the water and was hanging on the stern of the boat, while the little fellow rowed. In some way he lost his hold on the craft and drowned before assistance could reach him. The mother and two sisters stood on a bridge a short distance away and witnessed the drowning, but were unable to rescue the boy. Sam Ormiston reached the spot a short time after the accident and rescued the boy, but all efforts to resuscitate him were useless. The mother was almost crazed at the sight of her son drowning and it was with difficulty that she was kept from jumping from the high bridge into the water. The bridge was some distance from where the accident occurred, and the younger son was on his way to the bridge to take his mother and two sisters rowing.

The Red and Pembina rivers are still rising near Pembina point at the rate of fifteen inches in twenty-four hours. The Pembina in a few places overflowed its banks, covering some farms with water. The weather is still unsettled, raining almost every day. Many farmers have no crop sowed and don't expect to get any this season. At Neche the river is falling and is now inside its banks.

Yesterday morning the grain elevator belonging to the Consolidated Elevator company, of Duluth, leased by Andrews & Gage, caught fire and burned to the ground. The building was of 45,000 bushels capacity, and its value was probably about $40,000. About 1000 bushels of wheat were burned with it. The fire is believed to have started from burning soot in the flues.

Alabaugh's saloon, on Fremont street, Edgemont, was the scene of one of the hardest fights that has occurred in the history of this town. The contesting parties were Sheriff Blakey, of Hot Springs, and a fellow called "Big Jim." It is hard to get at the exact facts in the case, but as nearly as they can be ascertained Sheriff Blakey stepped into the saloon and became engaged in conversation with some parties who were present. "Big Jim" was engaged in a game of cards at a table but a few steps distant from where Blakey stood, and for some unknown reason addressed Blakey in an insulting manner. Hot words followed and "Big Jim" sprang up and struck the sheriff over the head with a chair. Then the fight commenced in earnest. Blakey struck Jim several heavy blows over the head with his revolver, each time inflicting a severe gash. The blood flowed from the wounds on both their heads nearly blinding them, but they kept on with the fight until "Big Jim" became so weak from loss of blood that he was compelled to give up.

Jim Rhinehart, of Vermilion, shot and probably fatally wounded George Larue at Meckling. Rhinehart accused Larue of stealing a horse from him some time ago, and during a heated altercation, Rhinehart drew a revolver and shot Larue. He then escaped and has not been caught.

COPELAND MEDICAL INSTITUTE.

A Well-Known Institution Where Catarrh and All Chronic Diseases Are Successfully Treated by the Latest Methods and at Nominal Cost.

Read the Experience of Engineer Mutch

The Copeland Medical Institute has been before the people of Duluth for nearly four years and has been subjected to the most critical investigation, both in treatment and business methods and proven to be thoroughly reliable and honorable in all its dealings and giving universal satisfaction to the multitudes that have been successfully treated by the well-known system. The treatment while given in a scientific manner is not harsh or painful and is easily tolerated by the weakest individual and gives speedy relief.

Catarrh and all chronic diseases are treated in a systematic manner, all medicines being furnished, each patient receiving the care and attention his individual case requires to secure the speediest relief from his trouble. While the Copeland system of treatment is world renowned, it is not expensive, but aims to give the best of service to those who suffer from the most prevalent diseases at a nominal cost.

AN ENGINEER'S EXPERIENCE.

James Mutch is a well known marine engineer in Duluth. He has worked at his trade at the head of the lakes for ten years. For several years he was with the Inman line. Last season he was on the tug Keystone and this year he is on the tug Mystic with the Stevens Towing company.

Some years ago Mr. Mutch began to be troubled with catarrh. About three (3) years ago his complaint became very serious and troublesome. The disagreeable disease gradually increased in severity until Mr. Mutch was in a very bad condition, but that can best be told in his own words:

"The middle of last March," said he, in narrating the history of his case, I was in such a condition from the effects of catarrh that I feared I should be compelled to give up my work as a tug engineer, which is quite profitable, of course. I had terrible headaches and the membranes of my nose and head were greatly affected. I could not stoop over without the most intense pains. At every attempt to do so, it seemed as if my forehead would burst. Prospects looked pretty dark, as a marine engineer is of no use if he cannot stoop over.

"At length I determined to take a course of treatment at the Copeland Medical Institute. There I found that all the trouble was due to nasal polypi or tumors, which had grown in my nose and sometimes swelling up and obstructing the nasal passages until I could not breathe through them. These polypi or nasal tumors were successfully removed, giving me relief from all my trouble. I expected to experience much pain during their removal, but the operation was done so skillfully that I hardly felt it.

"I am more than satisfied with the six weeks' treatment and the reasonable charges for it. The Copeland system is not severe in the least, and I want to particularly praise the careful and patient treatment of the physician in charge."

TALK OF ORGANIZING.

Opponents of Supt. Denfeld Getting Together.

The terms of four members of the board of education will expire in July. Those going out at that time are Messrs. Pryor, Crosby, Milne and Myers. Those who have become opposed to Superintendent Denfeld and the general administration of affairs claim that these four men have been supporters of the superintendent. In view of the opportunity thus offered the opponents of the present regime at the high school have been for some time discussing the means of making the most of it.

An informal meeting was held in the Chamber of Commerce building on Monday evening, at which about ten of the disaffected were gathered together. There was discussed the advisability of making an effort to secure the election to the board of persons hostile to the methods of the superintendent and who would show themselves somewhat more considerate of the desires of the people than it was considered that body as at present constituted has been. Among those present were Dr. Bowman, Bert Fesler and L. H. Whipple. No definite action was taken nor were there any candidates named, it being determined to sound public sentiment on the question before proceeding further.

Skin Came Off

I had an obstinate skin disease, called Eczema. My body, head, and arms were covered with spots like drops of mortar, which came off in layers of dry scales. I suffered for over a year without relief, consulted several doctors without aid, and had almost given up hope. I saw an advertisement about CUTICURA REMEDIES; took them, and in eight weeks I was as well as ever, for my skin is as nice and clear as a baby's. GEO. REABURN, Hanover, Ontario, Canada.

AT THEIR OWN FIGURES.

Williamson & Mendenhall Have Made Fine Purchases.

Williamson & Mendenhall, proprietors of the Big Duluth clothing house, usually have a keen eye to the interest of their trade, and the patrons of their establishment get the best goods and the best bargains the market affords. They accomplish this by closely watching trade conditions and letting no opportunity escape. Realizing that the manufacturers have, by over production, put themselves in a position where they must throw stocks overboard to get money, they arranged to take advantage of the situation. The result has endorsed their judgment. Men's suits, boys' clothing, hats and caps have come to them at their own figures, prices having tumbled to pieces along the whole line. The firm is giving its patrons a share in the advantage it has gained by buying judiciously, and clothing is offered at figures that make it cheaper than stealing it.

It Was Not Held.

According to the News Tribune there was "an interesting and well-attended meeting last night of the Men's society of the First Baptist church," and the subject of the Relation of the Church to Labor" was "very capably handled both from the ecclesiastical and labor standpoints."

As a description of something that did not occur, this is very vivid and circumstantial. The meeting which was to have been held was postponed to June 16, on account of the slight attendance owing to the weather.

List of Those Who Will Ride in the Road Race.

Bird and Mertens, the Fast St. Paul Men, Are Entered.

The Handicaps Will Be Announced Friday Evening---Eight-Minute Limit.

The entries for the Memorial day road race closed yesterday, and the list is the largest of any of the road races which have been held by the Duluth Cycle club since the event was made a permanent annual feature. Among those from outside are Thomas L. Bird and A. C. Mertens, of St. Paul. Bird won the time prize in 1894 in 28:27, and Mertens won the time prize in 1895 in 27:32, which is also the road record for Minnesota.

Among the more notable local entries are C. C. Evans, the winner of the place prize last year, and Frank S. Huse, who won the club's mile handicap in 1893. Walter Murphy, S. M. Linarder, Henry Grochau and David Kemp are among the younger and more promising Duluth entries. The entries in full are as follows:

Could Not Identify Him.

Frank Graham, who was arrested yesterday afternoon on complaint of A. W. Anderson, who charged Graham with having broken one of the windows of Anderson's saloon, at 210 Lake avenue south, was discharged in the municipal court this morning, the bartender failing to identify the accused as the man who threw the "dormick."

A DECEPTION EASILY PRACTISED

Is the offer of a reward for "any case of catarrh not cured" by certain "cures" or "blood medicines." Nothing is said regarding the number of bottles required, and therein lies the deception. The makers of Ely's Cream Balm have never resorted to such devices. Cream Balm is an elegant preparation, agreeable to use, and immediate in its beneficial results. It cures catarrh. You can rely upon the fact that it contains no mercury nor other injurious drug. Fifty cents.

to shake me up so that I could not possibly attend to my business as I should. In connection with this I had finer trouble, heaviness about the stomach, and pains in different parts of my body. I was also much reduced in flesh. I was persuaded to try

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine.

I first procured a trial bottle from a local druggist and good results quickly followed. I then procured a dollar bottle, and by the time I had used this up I was a different man. I am now on my third bottle and am able to sleep soundly and eat regularly, something I could not possibly do before taking your Nervine. I am now fully recovered, and do not hesitate to pronounce Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine the greatest nervine on earth."

WHOLESOME ADVICE

For People Whose Stomachs Are Weak and Digestion Poor.

Dr. Harlandson, whose opinion in diseases of the stomach is worthy of attention, says when a man or woman comes to me complaining of indigestion, loss of appetite, sour stomach, belching, sour watery-risings, headaches, sleeplessness, lack of ambition and a generally run down nervous condition I advise them to take after each meal one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, allowing the tablet to dissolve in the mouth, and thus mingle with the food eaten. The result is that the food is speedily digested before it has time to sour and ferment. These tablets will digest food anyway, whether the stomach wants to or not, because they contain harmless digestive principles, vegetable essences, pepsin and Golden Seal which supply just what the weak stomach lacks.

I have advised the tablets with great success, both in curing indigestion and to build up the tissues, increase flesh in thin, nervous patients, whose only real trouble was dyspepsia and as soon as the stomach was put to rights they did not know what sickness was.

A 50-cent package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets can be bought at any drug store, and as they are not a secret patent medicine, they can be used as often as desired with full assurance that they contain nothing harmful in the slightest degree; on the contrary, anyone whose stomach is at all deranged will find great benefit from the use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. They will cure any form of stomach weakness or disease except cancer of the stomach. Full sized package at druggists 50 cents and $1 or by mail from Stuart company, Marshall, Mich.

ENTERTAINING FIREMEN.

Preliminary Plans Were Made Yesterday Afternoon.

The committee of arrangements for the State Firemen's association, to be held here June 9, 10 and 11, held a meeting yesterday afternoon at fire department headquarters. Those present were Commissioners McGregor, Little and Randall, Alderman Christensen, P. S. Anneke and Secretary Buchanan, of the jobbers' union. Nothing definite was decided on as to program. As outlined by Chief Black to the council a week ago, the features will probably be a ball, an excursion on the lake and either a drive on the boulevard or a picnic. It was decided that the council chamber would be too small to accommodate the delegates, and the hall at headquarters will be used.

Several committees were appointed. Messrs. Little and P. S. Anneke will get hotel rates. Messrs. McGregor, Anneke and Christensen will look up the matter of having a ball on the second day. Messrs. Anneke, Buchanan and Black will see Capt. McDougall and endeavor to arrange for a whaleback excursion on the first day. Capt. Randall is to look up the matter of having a picnic at Zenith Park, the new summer resort at Spirit Lake.

A meeting to hear the report of committees will be held on Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Should Stock Others.

State Game Warden Fullerton's announcement that Pike lake will be stocked with black bass and walleyed pike has pleased the people who enjoy fishing greatly and they hope it is only the beginning. Pike lake, they say, will not begin to afford fishing for the entire city and they urge that Caribou, Grand and Rice lakes be stocked also. These are about the only good fishing lakes in this immediate vicinity and can be made very popular. This suggestion will undoubtedly be referred to Mr. Fullerton. He has done more for the territory around Duluth than has any game warden previously and undoubtedly will do all that lies in his power. Of course, his supply of young fish is limited and he must apportion them to the different portions of the state in a manner perfectly fair to all.

Struck a Rich Body.

C. T. Porter has received a copy of the Kootenaian, of Kaslo, B. C., containing a description of a big find in a farming property in which he and several of his brothers are interested. H. E. Porter is manager of the mine, the Black Fox. A few days ago the prospecting crew came upon a great ore body. The ore averages 100 ounces in silver and 78 per cent lead. At the surface, 70 feet directly above the strike, a trial shipment of ore showed 76 ounces of silver and 68 per cent of lead, which shows that the richness of the ore is increasing with the depth. The extent of the ore body is not yet known, but there are three feet of solid galena in the face of the drift where it was found, and great things are expected.

Are Very Tame.

The Woodland car that came in at 8 o'clock this morning passed two deer, probably the same that were seen on Sunday. They were very tame and the car approached to within about fifty feet of them before they ran away. This tamentsss speaks well for the strictness with which the game law is enforced.

Charles Strand Blown to Pieces By Dynamite.

Two Harbors, Minn., May 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—A terrible accident occurred this morning resulting in the death of Charles Strand, one of Elsbarg's powdermen. He was thawing dynamite when it ignited. He dropped an armful he was carrying, when he noticed his danger and ran, but before he had gone a dozen steps, the explosion occurred. His remains were torn to shreds, and were picked up one hundred feet away.

THE PORT ARTHUR ROAD.

Facts Which Show the Falsity of Recent Statements.

To the Editor of The Herald:

In your issue of April 30 you publish an article about the Port Arthur, Duluth & Western railway, copied from the Chicago Record, which is unique as an example of what can be written by a person entirely devoid of any idea of veracity. The writer ought to be looked after and put under restraint, for such vaporings are liable to involve unsuspecting publishers in libel suits, the damages for which might not compensate for the enhanced subscriptions such publications may cause.

Now as to facts. The Port Arthur, Duluth & Western railway was constructed from Port Arthur to the international boundary at Gunflint lake, thirty-five and a half miles, during the years 1889-1893, and since its completion has been continuously operated up to the present time. The railway is well located, graded and ballasted throughout, was laid with new steel of fifty-six pounds per yard, and ties of 7-inch face, 2640 of them per mile. In this and in other requirements the contracts with the provincial and Dominion governments were carried out in their entirety.

Each 10-mile section was inspected separately, on its completion, by engineers of each government, making altogether sixteen separate and careful inspections which were made during the summer and fall months between 1889 and 1893. It is hardly necessary to say that the interesting details of the picnic in sleighs mentioned in the aforesaid article are fictitious in every respect.

The two governments on the reports made by their engineers from time to time, paid subsidies as they were earned, and in 1893 paid the balance in full, which to any person conversant with Canadian railway subsidies is good evidence that the railway has been completed to the standard required by the minister of railways. Since the completion of the railway the road has been improved in a number of instances and is kept in good repair. It is stated that this is about the only railway in the world that neither owns nor leases rolling stock. The contracts with the Dominion government require a certain amount of rolling stock per mile and the equipment of this railway's motive power and rolling stock is above the average of most railways of the same length in either the United States or Canada, and is as follows: Engines, 4; box and flat cars, 91; passenger cars, 8; all of which are in first class condition. We have not found it necessary to borrow from the Canadian Pacific railway, but we have had the pleasure of being able to accommodate that company with both motive power and cars.

Besides the "pork and beans hauled for the inhabitants at Gunflint" the railway does a good business hauling logs, ties, cordwood and timber of different descriptions, fish, agricultural produce and minerals. The writer of your article has evidently visited the country on foot by walking over the ground between Grand Marais and Gunflint or he would not make the statement that the land contiguous to the railway is a barren wilderness. In the first forty miles there is good farming land every foot of the way, the black loam in the Whitefish valley being over four feet deep, with abundance of good water and plenty of timber, and were it not for the restrictions imposed by the provincial government in taking up mineral lands for farming purposes this valley would be under cultivation for its whole length. In the first fifty miles the railway runs near the rich silver mines of the district which only await an improvement in the price of that metal to start into life again. Development work is being done in some of them all the time. From the fiftieth mile to Gunflint the country is barren in an agricultural sense, but rich in minerals and timber. The iron deposits in the neighborhood of the railway in both Canada and Minnesota only await the advent of bona fide mining companies, and improved prices, both of which are within sight, when the traffic in iron ore alone will, I am satisfied, shortly rival that of our powerful neighbor, the Duluth & Iron Range railway.

The tourist business to the famous Kakabeka Falls and other points along the line of railway is in a much more healthy condition that your correspondent describes. Of this, as of other matters in connection with the railway, he is in blissful ignorance. In regard to the extension of the railway into Minnesota, this line, five and three-quarter miles in length, was built in 1892-1893 and was the result of a contract with several Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth gentlemen, the owners of the Gunflint lake iron, who, when the railway was completed to their mines, defaulted in their contract for shipping ore and closed their mines. This section has therefore remained unused since its completion. The damage caused by forest fires in 1894 to certain bridges have not been repaired and will not be until circumstances warrant a change.

It is hard to understand how any sane person could write the rubbish contained in the article you published. If the intention was to do harm—as no doubt it was—the details are so manifestly untrue to any person knowing anything about railways, that the shaft will fly wide of the mark. The only other explanation is that the writer while in the throes of composition has been imbibing too frequently of the strong Canadian whisky kept by "one of the three inhabitants of the commercial metropolis of Pigeon River," and it has been too much for his weak brain. Yours truly,

Ross Thompson, Secretary.

MURDERED

Suspicions in the Case of Two Women at West Superior.

Wife of Rev. Hermanns and Her Sister Were Possibly Murdered.

Hermanns is Now Charged With Murder at Salt Lake City.

It is claimed by members of the congregation of the Norwegian Methodist church of West Superior, of which Rev. Francis Hermanns, now at Salt Lake City for two murders, was formerly pastor, that there are circumstances attending the death of his wife here in January, 1892, and the subsequent mysterious disappearance of her sister, Miss Carrie Wangen, of St. James, Minn., which need investigating, in view of the recent charges made against Hermanns.

Rev. Hermanns came to Superior in 1891, assigned to that city by the annual conference. He had just married his second wife, Miss Bertha Wangen, of Minneapolis. In January, 1892, she was suddenly taken with a violent insanity, and a commission of doctors so reported. While preparations were being made to send her to the Oshkosh asylum, Mrs. Hermanns died. Traces of ammonia were seen on her lips after death, and it was said she had been allowed to smell the drug to quiet her. The explanation was accepted, and no investigation made, though it was alluded to as a very strange case at the time.

After the death and burial of Mrs. Hermanns No. 2, Rev. Hermanns ran around notoriously with her younger sister Carrie. Hermanns some months afterwards went away, and on coming back brought as his bride Miss Bertha Lommen, of Polk county, Minn. Afterwards Carrie Wangen gave out she was going home, but members of the congregation claim she was never heard from and never got to her home. In 1893 Rev. Hermanns went to Salt Lake City, and a year ago his third wife died there. The recent developments have revived the suspicious circumstances, and a full investigation will probably result.

HIS THIRD WIFE.

St. Paul, May 27.—A Crookston, Minn., special to the Dispatch says: Rev. Mr. Hermanns, the Salt Lake City preacher charged with murder, married Miss Martha Lommen as his third wife. She was a sister of Senator Lommen, of this city. The marriage took place in Minneapolis and the couple lived in Superior two years, removing thence to Salt Lake City, where, after giving birth to a child, the mother died. No thought of foul play has ever been connected with the case in the minds of any member of the family of the deceased. Hermanns spent the time from March 3 to 16 in this city, during which time he conducted a revival service in the Scandinavian Methodist church.

Total 27.

IN THE HOUSE.

Washington, May 27.—Mr. Kem, Populist, from Nebraska, who has been objecting to every request for the unanimous consent for ten days, was very neatly trapped in the house today. Mr. Mondell was recognized by the speaker to ask unanimous consent for the consideration of a resolution directing the secretary of the interior to resume work upon and issue patents to the Union Pacific Railroad company without delay to bona fide purchasers in Western Nebraska and Wyoming.

This is a bill in which Mr. Kem's constituents are vitally interested, and the situation presented to him was very embarrassing. He was obliged either to surrender or to object to a bill of interest to his constituents. He hesitated, but finally stood by his guns and objected.

Mr. Mondell then arose to a question of personal privilege, and increased Mr. Kem's embarrassment by pointing out that 25,000 people were interested in this resolution, and that 5000 of them resided in Mr. Kem's district.

Mr. Kem raised the point that Mr. Mondell's statement did not constitute a question of privilege, a point which the speaker sustained, but Mr. Mondell, despite the pounding of the gavel, succeeded in completing his statement. Mr. Kem finally sought to secure a ruling of the chair that would exclude from the Congressional Record Mr. Mondell's remarks. His anxiety on this point tickled the members immensely, and there was a loud laugh when Mr. Cannon observed to Mr. Kem it did not make any difference whether the remarks went into the Record or not, they would go in the newspapers. Mr. Mahon's motion, which came over from yesterday, concurring in senate amendments to the deficiency bill, appropriating about $2,000,000 for the payment of French spoliation claims, was then considered, and Mr. Cannon made vigorous opposition to concurring in these amendments.

A. L. Wooster, a prominent citizen of Osseo, Mich., after suffering excruitatingly from piles for twenty years, was cured in a short time by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, an absolute cure for all skin diseases. More of this preparation is used than all others combined. S. F. Boyce.

VERMONT DEMOCRATS.

Declare For Gold and Endorse Cleveland.

Montpelier, Vt., May 27.—The Democratic state convention for the election of delegates at large to the Chicago convention assembled here today. F. W. McGretty was chosen permanent chairman. The platform adopted declares as follows on the money question: We demand the maintenance of a gold standard of value, as being for the true interest of all our people, and especially of those who are obliged to labor for what they receive, and we are opposed to the free coinage of silver, except under international agreements.

Other planks commend the able, patriotic and statesmanlike administration of Grover Cleveland, and especially his brave and timely Venezuelan message; express sympathy with the Cubans; denounce the Republican theory and favor a tariff for revenue, not fostering trusts nor unnecessarily interfering with business interests, and denounced the Republican party for fostering the secret, un-American, cowardly and despicable A. P. A. organization.

Nominations for state officers were made as follows: Governor, Dr. Henry Jackson, Barre; lieutenant governor, Dr. Ralph Sherwood, St. Albans; treasurer, J. H. Williams, Bellows Falls; secretary of state, William W. Rider, Bristol; auditor, E. T. Seaver, North Troy.

The St. Louis Was the Boat That Collided With the Ketcham.

The Toltec Was Released After Lightering Part of Her Cargo.

A Vessel Reporting Station Has Been Established at Detour.

Detroit, Mich., May 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The steamer St. Louis passed down this morning with her stern badly damaged. One of the crew said the St. Louis had collided with the steamer V. H. Ketcham near Point aux Barques on Monday morning during a dense fog.

THE KETCHUM DAMAGED.

Mackinaw City, Mich., May 27.—The steamer V. H. Ketchum, towing the schooner Wadena, collided with an unknown barge in tow of a steamer near Point Aux Barques Sunday morning at 6 o'clock. A dense fog covered the lake at the time. The stern of the Ketchum was broken off, and her headway was stopped so that the Wadena, coming on, struck her amidships. IN A TINY CRAFT.

New Principles Involved in a Small Boat.

New York, May 27.—The frailest craft that ever essayed an ocean voyage will cast off at the Battery in a few days and turn her tiny prow toward Europe. Frank and Tony Charlsen of Brooklyn, are the adventurous skippers and also the builders of the boat. They claim the little vessel embodies several new principles that they hope successfully to test in an ocean trip. The brothers have designed her as a lifeboat, and the purpose of the trip across the ocean is to establish the seaworthiness of the boat to the satisfaction of the patent office, to which an application has been made from a patent. If that office is satisfied all sea going steamers will be compelled, the builders think, to carry one of these boats.

The chief distinction is that the boat will not sink and that in case it is capsized it will right itself within thirty seconds. The dimensions of the boat are:

The Boat in Which They Will Cross the Ocean.

Length over all, 20 feet; on the water line, 19 feet; draught, 26 inches; depth of keel, 14 inches. It has air-tight compartments fore and aft, and on the sides an open space in the center eleven feet long and four feet five inches in width. Beneath the flooring are tanks containing 136 gallons of water which act as ballast. Two pairs of oars are carried, and two sets of sails and extra rigging for use in case of accident. Her name is Two Brothers. If she gets across she will try the return trip from Queenstown.

Frank Charlsen was second mate last summer of John Jacob Astor's yacht Nourmahal. The cockpit of the boat is uncovered, and the men will have only rubber blankets to protect themselves. They expect to make the voyage in eighty days. The old salts along the Battery wall who can tell a 12s compass from a bobstay jackbolt claim she will surely meet the fate of the R. K. Fox, the 21-foot sloop that attempted the feat of crossing the Atlantic last year and met disaster.

CROOKED CLERKS.

Indicted For Appropriating the Bank Funds.

Hannibal, Mo., May 27.—In the United States court, the grand jury has returned an indictment against Crockett Ragsdale, formerly bookkeeper in the First National bank, of this city, for embezzlement. His plea was not guilty and a continuance was asked for. The total amount of Ragsdale's shortage is not known, but it is supposed to be about $15,000. The defendant is a young man, and prior to the discovery of the embezzlement was highly esteemed.

An indictment was also returned against Clarence Gray, of Macon City, who committed the same offense in the National bank of that city. Gray entered a plea of guilty and was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary.

The information filed against Brame contained eight specific charges of alleged unprofessional conduct. The case was referred to Richard A. Manbey as referee, to take testimony, and his report was a book of several hundred pages. The accuser in the case was George W. Turnbull, of Minneapolis.

PRESBYTERIAN WORK.

Saratoga Convention Discusses Seminary Relations.

Saratoga, N. Y., May 27.—The place where the next Presbyterian general assembly will meet will be decided tomorrow. The places under consideration are Petoskey, Mich.; San Francisco, Winona, Minn., and Saratoga.

At the opening of the morning session today, Judge Wiltson, of Pennsylvania, moved that the report of the committee on conference with theological seminaries, in order to bring them into closer relations at the assembly, be at once distributed to give an opportunity for more deliberation. Following is a summary of the report: As a result of the conferences and correspondence, Princeton, Omaha and Dubuque seminaries and Lincoln university, in Pennsylvania, have literally or substantially adopted in whole or in part the recommendation of the assembly looking to seminary control by the assembly, and have either taken steps to secure appropriate legislation, or expressed their willingness to do so. The Western Theological seminary, at Allegheny, has agreed to endeavor to obtain a general law which would accomplish the same end, and has appointed a committee for that purpose.

The other seminaries, McCormick, Lane, Auburn and San Francisco, have refused to consider the action taken last year. The plan of the committee has in view "an effective practical and constitutional method of safeguarding the teaching and property of the seminaries." The report says: "The plan is wise and legal and it in no manner directly or indirectly imperils existing trusts or involves any seminary in litigation, but commends itself as the best method devised to permanently secure the teaching and property of seminaries to the Presbyterian church."

In reply to the objections offered by the Auburn and San Francisco seminaries that the proposed action would involve a change in the tenure or management of their property, it is stated that such was not the intention of the assembly. In reply to those which say that the plan of the assembly is substantially contained in their present charters, it is said: "There can be no valid, legal, or other objections to expressly stating in each charter what is thus conceded to be there by implication, history or the spirit. The report continues: "The sole purpose of the plan, approved by the general assembly of 1895, was to settle for all time any question touching the denominational character of each of the seminaries of the church. The legislation to be asked for should be permissive and not mandatory, and should specifically define the honors and privileges to be granted to the general assembly, to the end that it may exercise the powers and privileges granted and declined, and no others."

Princeton seminary has presented drafts of two proposed laws to be submitted to the legislature of New Jersey, and the committee recommends the adoption of the shorter one, adding: "It is proper to say, however, that either of the bills may confer upon the assembly more power than it has asked from the seminaries." The report concludes thus: "The general assembly now exercises certain powers over all of the seminaries in ecclesiastical relationship with it. In view of the experience of the church with the compact of 1870, granting the assembly a veto power upon the appointment of seminary professors, and to the end that no question can be hereafter raised touching the legality of that compact and the right of the assembly to act thereunder, and to enforce the same, it is the judgment of your committee that until the said compact of 1870 shall be made legally effective, by charter provision, to the satisfaction of this assembly, it is inexpedient for the assembly to exercise any of the powers alleged to have been conferred on it by said compact."

The committee presented three resolutions for adoption: First—This general assembly reaffirms the action of the assembly of 1895, and, in view of the importance of the interests involved, declares that in its judgment the plan approved by the assembly of 1895 should be substantially adopted by all the seminaries. Second—Until the compact of 1870 shall be made legal and effective to the satisfaction of the assembly, by each seminary, the assembly deems it expedient to suspend the exercise of the powers alleged to have been conferred upon it by said compact over any seminary falling within reasonable time to make said compact legal and effective. Third—That the committee be discharged from further services.

The report is signed on behalf of the committee by Dr. S. A. Mutchmore, chairman. A minority report, signed by Dr. George D. Baker, of Philadelphia, recommended the compact of 1870, the concurrent resolution No. 9, of the assembly of 1869, in reference to synodical or assembly control of seminaries, and all acts of the assembly granting powers of self-control to seminaries be rescinded. It is also recommended that the legislation be formulated which shall put into effect the assembly constitutional and charter rights over Princeton, Western McCormick, Danville, Dubuque, Newark and Omaha.

The report of the majority contains an addendum in regard to the property of Union seminary in New York, which concludes as follows: "We deem it inexpedient to recommend the general assembly at the present time to enter into any contest in the matter of the endowment property of the seminary, choosing rather to leave the whole matter to the honor and stewardship of those now in charge of the seminary."

IOWA BANKERS.

Cash Handlers Meet in Annual Array.

Marshalltown, Iowa, May 27.—The tenth annual meeting of the State Bankers' association of Iowa, convened here this morning. One hundred and fifty delegates from all parts of the state were present, and as many more are expected.

Senator J. L. Carney, of this city, delivered an address of welcome. Hon. Calvin Manning, of Ottuwa, responded with a ringing speech. Alluding to the money question he said paper money would be worthless without the government stamp, and silver less than 50 cents on the dollar, but gold always was worth its face, even with the government inscription stricken off.

President Hensell, of Rock Rapids, made a lengthy address in which he deplored the failure of the Iowa legislature to tax express companies and require deposits in the counties where they operate.

The reports of the secretary and treasurer were read and discussed and committees appointed. The convention adjourned till 2 p. m.

STRIKERS WANT GOMPERS.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 27.—An important meeting of the managers of the street railway strike was held at the strikers' headquarters this morning, and when it was over President Mahon stated that a telegram would be sent to President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, urging that he come to Milwaukee without delay. As to further proceedings President Mahon would not talk, more than to say that there would probably be a meeting of the men tonight, when a vote would be taken as to future action. The members of the committee are confident that every man will stand firm, and in anticipation of this a telegram to President Gompers has been sent.

FILIBUSTERER ASHORE.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 27.—A report has reached Miami, but is not yet confirmed here, that the filibustering steamer Three Friends, which left here Saturday morning with a cargo of arms and ammunition, ostensibly for Key West, but really for Cuba, was chased by a revenue cutter and ran ashore on a reef off Upper Matteumbe, one of the Florida keys.

Verdict For $2500 Was Given Thomas Hare.

In Judge Ensign's division of district court yesterday afternoon the jury in the case of William Hare, as administrator of the estate of Thomas Hare, against the Eastern Minnesota railway, returned a verdict of $2500 for the plaintiff. The suit was to recover just twice the amount of the verdict for the death of Thomas Hare, a fireman on the Eastern Minnesota. It was alleged that he was looking out of the cab window when his head ran against a switch target, killing him instantly. On a former trial the jury disagreed.

The case of Culver Brothers against B. F. Howard was dismissed by the plaintiff yesterday afternoon, and the case of S. F. White against W. H. Singer, to recover $5000 for the life of Jacob Wasser, who was fireman of the tug Pathfinder when she sunk last fall, was tried. The jury returned a verdict in favor of the defendant. In a former trial of the case the plaintiff secured a verdict of $500. The case of August Fitger et al against C. M. Hill, to recover for putting in 1,200,000 feet of logs, was on trial at noon today.

In the case of Axel Hendrickson against Oscar Peterson, which was on trial before Judge Moer yesterday, the jury returned a verdict for the defendant yesterday afternoon. The case of S. F. Howard against F. A. Culver, to recover $500 on a note, was next taken up, and it was on trial at noon today.

Judge Morris is still occupied with the case of Andrew Swerdling, as assignee for Frodin & Wilson, against the Security bank.

Trees in Blossom.

The apple trees around the city are in full bloom and are very pretty. L. Mendenhall's premises on West Third street probably present a more beautiful appearance than any other in the city. Fifteen or more very large apple trees are almost a mass of blossoms, and the view as well as the fragrance which they give forth is worth going a long distance to enjoy.

Sent to Dayton.

The "window smasher," Mrs. Ricks, otherwise known as Mary Swenie, was sent to Dayton, O., last evening by Superintendent Cook. On investigation, it developed that Mrs. Ricks had been discharged from the asylum at Fergus Falls, instead of being released on furlough merely, and in accordance with her request, she was sent to Dayton, where an uncle and aunt live, and which she calls her home. Mrs. Ricks is a good talker and has a wonderful memory for dates.

AFTER THE BONDS.

Several Eastern Investors Are Looking Them Up.

A decision of the supreme court may be a handy thing to have in the house, also opinions of eminent counsel, but an appetite for Duluth water bonds has developed without the stimulating aid of such condiments.

There has been for some days a representative of an Eastern house in the city, who has stated that he is authorized by his principals to bid for $1,106,000 worth of thirty-year 5 per cents. In addition, N. J. Upham & Co., assert that they represent interests that are ready and anxious to take the same amount at the same price. Both parties, whose names are not disclosed, say they are satisfied with the legality of the issue on independent investigation, and will ask no delay to await the decision of any pending cases.

METHODIST DOINGS.

Routine Work Devoid of Any Excitement.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 27.—Bishop Fowler presided at the opening session of the Methodist Episcopal conference today. Surprise was created when Rev. Dr. Goucher, chairman of the committee on constitution, made a suggestion that the whole matter of constitution, which has engaged the conference in debate for over two days, be referred to a commission of fifteen, to consist of six ministers, six laymen and three bishops to report four years hence.

Lay Delegate Swarthout offered, as a substitute, that the question of constitution be referred to the people for a vote, in order that it might represent the people. The subject was promptly tabled after a speech from Dr. Chaffee. The motion was then adopted, and the matter was referred to the commission.

Lieutenant Governor Mansur, of Vermont, secured the privilege to make a report of the committee on arbitration, which authorized the secretary to communicate with the president and ask that the government of the United States enter into negotiations with the powers of Europe with a view of forever preventing the repetition of the Armenian outrages. It carried without a dissenting voice.

Dr. J. B. Young submitted the last report of the committee on Sunday school and tracts which was routine in nature. It was adopted without debate. Dr. Swindell made the report of the committee on insurance matters. After stating the great saving which could be made possible by a church insurance plan, it recommended that the general conference adopt the plan followed by the West Wisconsin conference for a mutual church insurance company, and that the business of the company should be transacted by a board of insurance, consisting of fifteen men, one from each general conference district, to be elected by the delegations, and five at large to be appointed by the bishops. The plan was advocated by Dr. Swindell in a prolonged argument, in which he said that if adopted it means the saving of millions of dollars by hundreds of churches. Gen. Rushling condemned the scheme as visionary and impracticable and said it would result in a scandal, as did the Asbury life insurance scheme. He denounced the idea of the church embarking in any business in the most emphatic manner.

When the session was resumed, Rev. Dr. Neely presented a protest, signed by seventy members of the conference, against the action of yesterday in admitting laymen as members of the missionary annual conference. The protest was spread upon the records after considerable opposition.

The committee on location of the next convention rected invitations from Chicago, Kansas City, Ocean Grove and Saratoga, and the committee reported it was unable to decide and asked that the committee be continued with an addition of two members.

The committee on Freedman's Aid society, which was more in the nature of a report than a recommendation, was adopted without reading. After the report of the committee on Epworth league, which recommends that the Epworth league, in extending the spirit of fraternal co-operation to the other young people's societies, should never loose its identity with the Methodist church, or never become affiliated in any manner with any other society, which was not distinctly Methodist, the conference adjourned until 3 o'clock.

THE CALL

The Republican County Committee Will Meet Next Monday.

County Convention Will Be Called For the Election of Delegates.

Nominating Convention For County Officers Will Probably Come Later.

Chairman William Getty has called the Republican county committee to meet on Monday next at his office in the Palladio building. The committee will then decide when to hold the county convention and whether it will be called for the purpose of only electing delegates to the state convention to be held on July 1, and the congressional convention to be held at St. Cloud on July 16, or for the nomination of county officers also remains for the committee to determine. There is said to be one or two members of the committee who wish to see the county, judicial and legislative officers nominated at the same time.

It is hardly probably, however, that the conventions will be held all in one. It is altogether more likely that there will be two. The convention for the nomination of county officers will probably be called to meet some time in July, for there is a general desire on the part of both the present incumbants and the aspirants to have an early convention. They wish to know where they are at as soon as possible.

It is safe to predict that the first convention will be only for the selection of forty-three delegates to the state convention and fifty-eight delegates to the congressional convention.

IS IT A SUICIDE?

Bob Benson Reports a Case of Self Destruction.

Who is "H. M. H.," has he or she sought in the waters of the St. Louis river that peace that had been forfeited by their own act or the injustice of others? According to ex-Detective Benson, the last chapter of a life tragedy has been brought to a close within a few miles of Duluth. Some one has suicided. Before taking the fatal step, the following message was pencilled:

"Have walked to here, that settles it, you will find me in the river, better there than this way. H. M. H."

According to Mr. Benson, the find that may unravel a mystery and explain the whereabouts of same lost one was made by H. H. Hanford, of the Bradley-Hanford Lumber company, some days ago at a place called Greely siding near the so-called "big ravine," on the St. Louis river. The message that is quoted was scribbled in lead pencil on a shipping tag tacked to a box that had contained electrical supplies. The box was lying near the bank of the river, and above the tag was a rough outline of a hand with index finger pointing toward the water.

The "big ravine" is a deep, rocky gorge, through which the St. Louis river at this time of the year, has been in a foaming torrent. Mr. Hanford and his companions were unable to prosecute a search, which would have required ropes and grappling hooks and were forced to leave the mystery unsolved. The matter has been turned over to Detective Benson and he is organizing a searching party.

NEW YORK STOCKS.

Firm Tone at the Opening But Very Quiet.

New York, May 27.—The stock market opened quiet but firm, with the exception of General Electric, which sold off 1¾ per cent to 34, on the announcement of the formation of a strong competitor in the electrical business.

Up to 11 o'clock speculation was largely confined to the industrial properties and slight fractional improvements were scored. The railway list was receiving some attention and displayed a sagging tend in common with the general list. Reading and Wheeling and Lake Erie were easier, the first mentioned on the unfavorable report of the operations for April. On the other hand Manhattan rose to 104¾.

The business was very limited. The sales to noon were only 35,800 shares or about 50 per cent below normal for some time past. Speculation was devoid of features at 1 o'clock.

WAS BURIED HERE.

The body of Fong Bo, the China man who died on Monday in Superior, was brought over to Duluth today and consigned to a grave in Forest hill cemetery. A few of his countrymen followed his remains to their resting place. The full ceremonial at the grave was not gone through with on account of the weather, and will probably take place on Sunday.

HUNDREDS WERE KILLED

St. Louis and East St. Louis Visited By a Terrific Tornado.

South St. Louis Littered With Dead and East St. Louis a Gigantic Cemetery.

The Property Destroyed Will Run Up In Value Into Millions.

St. Louis, Mo., May 28.—Two hundred lives snuffed out in this city, as many more in East St. Louis, property destroyed in value running up into millions, is the record made by May 27, 1896. This is a conservative estimate. No possible idea of the number killed in the tornado that swept this vicinity yesterday afternoon can be made at this time. South St. Louis is littered with the bodies of the dead. East St. Louis is a gigantic cemetery. Under the debris of the buildings of that city are scores buried whose bodies will not be brought to light for many days, perhaps never.

It was the most disastrous storm from every point of view in the history of the city. The storm did little damage in the business and northern portions of the city, save along the river front, where the damage cannot be estimated, nor will it ever be known just how many gave up their lives in the waters of the Mississippi river when the tornado came and tore all the boats in the harbor from their moorings. The channel is full of wreckage. In South St. Louis the storm spent its force.

All the way from Pappin street to Carondelet it put a stamp on the face of the city that will not be effaced for years. Big, strong buildings fell before the wind like houses made of cards. Where it entered the city, out in the southwestern suburbs, to where it left, somewhere near the Eads bridge, there is a wide path of ruins. Factory after factory went down and piles of bricks and timbers mark the spots on which they stood. Dwellings were picked up and thrown in every direction. Business houses were flattened and the ruins cover bruised and mangled bodies. Thousands of families in South St. Louis are homeless, practically, and the temporary hospitals shelter scores and hundreds.

GAS PLANT DESTROYED.

Early in the storm the plant of the Laclede Gas company, at Fourteenth and Poplar streets, was destroyed and a large portion of the central part of the city was cut off from its gas supply. This affected the newspaper offices severely. In the Republic office no gas could be obtained to heat the metal on the Linotype machines and the only typesetting done was by machines in which the metal was melted by blow lamps.

Wires are down all over the city. Liggett & Meyers' big factory in Compton Heights is a ruin and many were killed and injured in the wreck. Elevators were blown down, boats were sunk and churches and school houses were demolished.

After the wind and rain had done its work, fire added to the destruction. Heizel's mill was the first to become ignited, and it was totally destroyed at a loss of $150,000. Harris' barrel factory, nearly fifty loaded cars in the Terminal yards, Lynch's boarding house, Beard's feed store, Lee's blacksmith shop and other smaller places were burned.

The destruction of the waterworks early in the storm cut off the water supply and Chief Purdy and his men fought the fire with a bucket brigade as best they could. The whole central portion of the city was threatened by the burning mill, but all hands worked with such expedition that further spread was prevented.

Union station was crowded last night by persons awaiting the departure of the trains on which they intended to leave town. The St. Louis Refrigerator and Woodenware company and its entire plant at Main street and Park was destroyed. The plant consisted of a 4-story factory and several smaller buildings. When the storm struck the place there were at work between 400 and 450 men and women. The top stories of the warehouse and factory were blown off. Fortunately there were only a few people on the top floor, and all but two were thought to have escaped with slight injuries. Peter Hardy and brothers, who were at work in the warehouse, were hurt, but the nature of their injuries could not be learned. One of the employes was seen shortly after the crash and he was positive that at least two of his fellow-workmen had been buried in the ruins.

FIRE BREAKS OUT.

Fire broke out in the warehouse just after the top floor was destroyed. The panic-stricken employes rushed pell-mell from the buildings, leaving many disabled behind them. To add to their horror, hundreds of heavy pieces of lumber from an adjoining lumber yard came flying through the air and forced many back into the blazing buildings. Alarms were sent in from a fire alarm box, but wires were useless. Chief Swingley happened to be crossing the Fourteenth street bridge and saw the blaze. He drove to the nearest engine house and piloted the apparatus to the fire. By the time the engine arrived the warehouse was a mass of flames and the fire spread rapidly across the alley. The ground for blocks around was covered with lumber and bricks, and the fire plugs near the business building were under masses of debris. It was some time before water could be secured, but after some delay and another alarm, which was answered by several companies, the fire was finally put under control and at midnight was out.

Every street car line was tied up. The cross-town roads suffered the most damage, but the western lines came in for considerable loss. A midnight last night several of the western lines were running and two of the cross-town roads were operating parts of their lines. A fire added much to the loss account. To the enormous total fires added at least $500,000. Such another night of horror St. Louis never knew.

SOME OF THE DAMAGES.

The following are among the damaged buildings: The main office building, freight depot and five warehouses of the Iron Mountain railroad, completely demolished; Roof Elevator B, Standard Elevator company, blown away and building badly damaged; Southwestern Lead company, warehouse completely demolished; Plant Milling elevator wrecked; property of the Brown Lumber company scattered to the four winds; roof American Refining company scattered; roof St. Louis Refrigerator and Wooden Gutter company, Park avenue, demolished, latter took fire; Regina flour mill badly damaged, roof uplifted, smokestacks blown away; warehouse Nedderhut Bros. badly damaged; Campbell Bros. Paint company, totally destroyed; Bridge, Beach & Co., loss $250,000 damage to building; building of St. Louis Ice Manufacturing company, loss $200,000, almost completely demolished; St. Louis Cotton Compress company, badly damaged; vacant building formerly occupied by Brown Oil Mill company, completely wrecked. Six men who had sought refuge from the storm within it were buried in the ruins. John Wilson, rescued, badly hurt about legs and hips, dangerously injured.

The wind caught the armory building on Sixteenth and Pine streets, picked it up and scattered it around the neighborhood for blocks. I. G. Schoutenberg, president of the company estimated the loss last night at $200,000, fully covered by insurance. The top floor of the 4-story building at Second and Chestnut streets was blown off; the structure once occupied by Dan Gunn as a notion store at 212 Clark avenue was demolished. The Central Home of Rest was destroyed and one man killed, name unknown; two were injured. The copper roof of the Shields building on Seventh between Biddle and Carr streets was blown off. No one was reported injured. The front walls of the building at South Twelfth was blown down. Some of the occupants were slightly bruised. The house No. 1 Market street, the lower floor of which is occupied by Mr. Plummer, as a saloon, was unroofed and deluged with water throughout.

At the Globe Shoe and Clothing company the windows on the upper floors were blown in and damage was done to merchandise amounting to thousands of dollars. The roofs and skylights of the Merchants' Exchange building were blown off. The damage is extensive. The streets about the premises are blocked with the debris.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES.

Thomas Metcalf had his back broken. He is a switchman in the employ of the Iron Mountain company at Barton street. A watchman's shanty fell on him. The cigar store at bridge entrance on Third and Washington avenues was blown into the streets and the contents totally destroyed. No one injured. The storm tore off half the roof of the National Paper company's building, South Eighteenth street and demolished the shipping room on the first floor. Total damage about $40,000. Thomas Fry, a drummer for the C. H. Lehrmann Lumber company, was seriously injured in the groin by the falling walls of the company's office building at Main and Carroll streets. Mail Carrier John W. Magann and three other men sought shelter from the storm near a brick wall at the corner of Levee and Cass street. The wall fell on them and all were painfully injured. The roof of the Summer school for negroes situated on Eleventh, between Spruce and Poplar streets, was blown in and as far as known there were no occupants of the building in it at the time.

SUBURBAN TRAINS ARRIVE.

Several passenger trains from the east came in over the elevated tracks between 8 and 9 o'clock. A wrecking crew preceded the trains to remove rubbish that had been thrown from buildings. Survey of the Ruins When the New Daylight Came.

Formation of the Storm Graphically Described By the Witnesses.

Sudden Darkness Added to the Intense Fright Which Was General.

St. Louis, May 28.—When the sun rose on St. Louis and vicinity this morning, it showed a scene of terrible ruin and disaster. Wind, rain and fire had combined in a mission of destruction. Two hundred lives were lost in this city and as many more in East St. Louis, while as many more were injured so that they cannot recover. The number will not be known for many days, perhaps never, for the debris of the ruined buildings all over the city cover hundreds of human beings. The damage and destruction of property will aggregate many millions of dollars, but the exact amount cannot be estimated with any degree of certainty.

The terrible tornado which caused this destruction struck the city yesterday afternoon at 5:15, and all parts of this city and East St. Louis felt its effect. The greatest damage on this side of the river was inflicted within a three mile strip along the mighty stream. Many buildings totally collapsed from the force of the wind; others were unroofed, while very few in the city escaped some injury. Signs and cornices were torn off, shade trees and everything else suffered from the strength of the wind.

THE STORM FORMING.

For hours the currents shifted, the winds blew hot and cold and the storm center developed. The fury of the elements was born within the city's limits. In the west a thunder storm developed. The early mutterings indicated nothing more alarming than a downpour with the ordinary electrical accompaniments. This rain cloud came up slowly at first, from the west, beyond Forest Park. As the black rim mounted higher above the horizon its are embraced more territory to the north and south. A strong wind from the east began to blow right in the face of the storm. It was a lower current. It raised the cloud and brought it forward faster and faster. Suddenly the wind stopped blowing from the east, and there swept from the northwest a terrific gale, which made the best built structures tremble. With the hurricane, for that is the form the storm took when it broke over the western part of the city, came a deluge of rain.

For half an hour, from a few minutes before 5 until 5:30 this hurricane blew from the northeast. Then there came a lull. The current shifted. In the southwest there came into existence a storm cloud with essential features of the tornado—funnel shaped. This second storm burst upon the city from the southwest. It came from the south side of Lafayette park, struck the city hospital and from there took its way through the city to the river, by a northeasterly course. It wrought such havoc as will long leave traces in that part of the city, which lies east of Seventh street and north of Cerre street to the Eads bridge. The boats at the wharf were torn from their moorings and capsized or sent adrift.

SUDDEN DARKNESS COMES.

The cloud crossed the river and demolished the upper work at the east end of the bridge, and then it wreaked its fury on East St. Louis. Shortly after 6 o'clock, with the sun more than an hour above the western horizon, there settled upon the city clouds so dense that daylight quickly gave place to the darkness of midnight. That was the precursor of the tornado from the southwest. The hurricane from the northwest gave the western portion of the city a severe shaking up. The tornado from the southwest, which is responsible for the loss of life and untold destruction along the levee district in East St. Louis, followed the hurricane by about half an hour. What must be charged up to this double visitation only time can tell.

Health Commissioner Starkloff, two hours after the tornado had passed, feared that the dead would reach 200, and that not fewer than 1000 persons had sustained serious injuries. By midnight reporters had visited all of the stricken portions of the city and suburbs. The list of the dead discovered falls far below the first estimates, but it was long enough to be appalling. Crushed beneath falling walls, hurled against the sides of buildings, struck by flying timbers, cut by the shattered glass, shocked by the net work of down wires, humanity suffered in ways innumerable. The names of all the injured will never be known. Enough were recorded at the dispensaries last night to show how widespread were the tornado's effects.

The destruction of property cannot be satisfactorily estimated. The loss in extent and character is beyond conception. In the flashes of lightning last night the city hospital looked like a ruin. The new surgical ward was partially demolished. Portions of the other buildings were unroofed. Walls were cracked. Even in the darkness the physicians began the removal of patients to the temporary quarters, fearful that the strained structure would go down in a general collapse. There were 456 sick people in the hospital when the storm came. Some gathered strength in their fright and ran shrieking from the place, finding shelter on the outside. Thirteen were injured in one ward.

CONVENTION HALL DAMAGED.

Convention hall and the four courts were in the path of the cloud as it passed from the city hospital toward the river. Convention hall lost a part of the roof at the eastern end, and the east end was punctured in several places by flying missiles and sustained some derangement of the interior. Ten days' work and the expenditure of $5000 will make the hall good again.

ported that they had scarcely anything destroyed.

W. H. Williams, assistant superintendent of the St. Louis & East St. Louis Railway company, was very seriously injured internally and severely bruised about the body; his right arm broken and the cords of his left arm so seriously hurt that there is a possibility of his losing the use of it. Mr. Williams was eating supper at the Relay retreat and saw the storm coming, but like others, did not think there was any danger of the building caving in. Mr. Williams showed presence of mind by running a lath up through the debris, aiding the rescuers in their work.

The passengers on different boats related many acts of heroism performed by roustabouts. On the Libbie Conger which went to pieces on the Illinois shore, was Capt. Seaman, his wife and child, a boy 8 years old. When the storm first appeared, a negro, whose name is unknown, took up the child in his arms and plunged overboard, bearing the captain's boy safely through the boiling waters to the Illinois shore. Capt. Seaman rescued his wife. This morning John McDowell, a roustabout on the tug Reliance, which is performing great work among the boats which line the Illinois bank for miles down the river, returned to the city. He was burdened with messages to loving ones here from fathers and brothers, telling of their safety. They reported that the Madill had been blown to pieces and it was thought the crew escaped. He reported that the ferries at the foot of Anna street and at East Carondelet had been blown to pieces and gone to the bottom with their crews and passengers. This could not be verified, but the negro stated positively that such was the case.

STORM IN EAST ST. LOUIS.

In comparison to its size the fatalities and losses suffered in East St. Louis greatly exceeded those on this side of the river. The larger part of the central portion of the city is razed to the ground, while on the flats along the river, back to the north of the Eads bridge, not a house stands. In the latter portion the loss of life is terrible. Scarcely a family seems to have escaped without some member being killed, while in many instances whole households were wiped out of existence. A conservative estimate of the dead is placed at 150.

Rows of buildings at West St. Louis and the flat landscape offered a field for the storm that produced dire results. The force of the storm was felt here more than on this side, for the reason that it is more open and less compactly built. The property loss is great. There is scarcely a house standing in the path of the storm. Some of the largest buildings in the city were blown down, and many freight houses were demolished. As an illustration of its force as it was about to enter East St. Louis, the storm carried away 300 feet of the eastern approaches to the Eads bridge, delaying railroad traffic and almost entirely cutting off communication between the two cities.

Freight trains were picked up, blown off the track and landed capsized in the swamps. A train was picked up and blown almost bodily into the river. Some of the lighthouses, such as abound in East St. Louis, were blown bodily away. Fire also damaged property after the tornado had passed. No reliable estimate could be made as last night concerning the fatalities at East St. Louis. In the darkness and rain the rescuers were forced to work blindly.

THE TORNADO'S BIRTH.

The tornado proper was preceded by a fierce blow from the east. Strong and steadily the wind came and then it swelled to a hurricane and there were three distinct attacks which ripped up roofs and commenced the general destruction which followed. When this wind made one which was coming from the southwest, the tornado was born and returning, began its work of destruction. It struck St. Louis on the southwest; at a point just north of Tower Grove park, and traversed it in a northeasterly direction till it reached Grand avenue. From there it followed Mill Creek valley near to the river, veering slightly to the north, when it reached Tenth street. At the levee it swung around almost at a right angle, and swept straight up the river to beyond Venice and Madison, where it veered to the east again.

Judging from the report of the greatest damage done, the path of the storm was on an average of ten to twelve blocks in width. The worst damage was done in a path about six blocks in width extending eastward from Grand avenue to Tenth street, from Lafayette avenue on the south, to the railroad tracks on the north, about every other block the wind seemed to reach out and crush a few buildings and unroof residences outside of its main path.

Every wire along Chouteau avenue from Grand avenue east, to Twelfth street, was down and the poles and their heavy freight of cables were scattered along the streets. All streets from Park avenue to Chouteau were in a shillar condition. None of them were passable with a horse or vehicle and walking was a difficult and dangerous experiment. What few telegraph and telephone wires remained above ground were draped by battered tin roofs from neighboring residences and the tin seemed to have been blackened in token of the ruin that had been wrought. In the neighborhood of Jefferson avenue and the railroad tracks and for three blocks north including Eugenia, Adams and Randolph streets it was impossible to drive through and nearly every residence and building along either of them within three blocks of Jefferson avenue was more or less damaged.

The Laclede gas tank at Fourteenth and Gratiot was struck by lightning and exploded. Samuel Cupples Woodenware company's warehouse, at Seventh and Spruce was burned. Six unknown men were taken out of the ruins of the box factory at Ninth and Barry.

The foundling asylum at Hickory and Elm is a complete wreck. On South Jefferson avenue four fine residences were completely wrecked. Ganales' lumber yard was struck by lightning and destroyed, and Annunciation church at Sixth and LaSalle was blown down. A street car was overturned at Eighth and Park and crushed a man under it. Others were injured. Mrs. Sophie Demartina was killed by flying timbers on Clark and Twelfth streets. The St. Louis Cracker company's building at Eighteenth and Chouteau is a wreck.

Owing to the absence of any lights no progress can be made and work in searching the ruins for the dead is slow.

APPEAL FOR AID.

Chief of Police Harrigan has received the following appeal:

"East St. Louis, May 27.—To Chief Harrigan: We hereby notify you that a terrible calamity has befallen us in the way of water, storm and fire within the last two hours. Death and destruction has been followed by fire, and we ask for aid for the suffering and dead. Please send fire engines as soon as possible. J. T. Martine, Chief of Police."

The excursion steamers City of Vicksburg and City of Providence, lying at the foot of Olive street, were blown out and floated down the river, badly damaged. The steamer Diamond Joe, of Pittsburg, lying at the foot of Washington avenue, was washed out and floated down. The Eagle company's boat and ten river packets, with the wharf boat, were blown away and floated down. Another line packet, Capt. Monroe, broke from her moorings at the wharf at Chestnut street, and was blown across the river on the east side. The passengers were all saved. The steamer Belle, of Cairo, broke from her moorings and floated down the river.

A detail of officers have been sent along the banks of the river searching for some trace of the missing steamer Grand Republic, which had 500 excursionists on board. No reports of her whereaboutshave been received at police headquarters, and they fear she is lost. Rumors that the steamer Grand Republic was landed at Jefferson barracks and had sustained considerable damage are current, but no authentic report can be obtained.

The district between Clark avenue and Washington avenue, from Twelfth street to the river, suffered fearfully from the ravages of the wind storm. The brunt of the storm was borne by that portion of the district lying south and along the river bank, as comparatively light damage was done to the property farther north and west. The tornado exerted its greatest fury along the river front. The levee for miles up and down was devastated and laid waste. Great steamers were torn from their moorings at the first blast and blown down the river for miles.

The wires in the city are dangling from the poles, but every electric light circuit is cut off. The postal Telegraph and Cable company were the first to secure communication with the outer world, and now have seven wires working to Chicago.

The storm did not vent all its fury in St. Louis. After working its chaos of destruction in South St. Louis, it moved to westward and out in the country, leaving another trail of ruin in its wake. It is impossible to get the full list of killed or of casualties at this writing. At Clayton, the county seat, a new Presbyterian church was levelled to the ground, and another church was wrecked. Part of the court house at Clayton was torn away. Houses were unroofed or totally destroyed in the path of the storm.

Pat Carmody's presence of mind prevented a panic at the fair grounds. When the crowd appealed for protection from the tornado, Pat corralled the frightened people under the stand and forced them to remain there. He held a mob of about 3000 in check and was lucky for them that he did so. While Carmody was holding them back, the roof of the stand was blown out in all directions, and the debris fell just where the people wanted to go. Carmody's good judgment saved many lives. The roof of the stand was blown in all directions.

WEATHER OFFICER'S STORY.

H. W. Frankenfeld, local weather officer, was a busy man during and after the storm. He said: "For the past week the weather in the vicinity of St. Louis has been characterized by low pressure, high temperatures, excessive humidity and prevailing southerly winds. The pressure has also been low throughout the West. At the same time it is relatively high in the South, causing the warm, southerly winds, laden with moisture, to blow from the gulf of Mexico. This moisture has been held in suspense by the warm atmosphere, and the humidity consequently increased from day to day. The mean temperature averaged from 3 to 13 degrees above the normal each day, while the humidity ranged from 7 to 20 per cent each, for this season of the year. On Wednesday morning the weather map showed the low pressure still overlying the West with the center of depression extending in irregular oval from the Texas Panhandle through West Kansas and Nebraska. Throughout the state of Missouri high temperature and humidity has prevailed with south winds. The day would be popularly termed, 'warm, hazy, muggy.' Although reports are missing, owing to the widespread destruction, it is evident the storm area moved slowly east during the day. The barometer commenced to fall at noon and by noon it had fallen .12 of an inch. About this time the sky become covered with dark chickly cumulated stratas, which by 6 o'clock formed stratas clouded, which commenced to assume a green color in the northeast. This green color slowly advanced from the northeast, spread more to the west and north at the same temperature and commenced to fall. The normal cyclonic circulation thus brought winds of different temperatures and humidities into an upper position, with the results that a decided instability was produced in the atmosphere and a violent secondary storm center was created. The barometer continued to fall rapidly and by 5 p. m. it had fallen .25 inch since noon. The winds were becoming variable with a tendency toward a northerly direction until lightning and thunder had commenced at 4:30 p.m. At 5:04 p. m. the storm broke forth in all its fury, the wind changed suddenly to northwest with rapidly increasing velocity and the rain fell in torrents. The green cloud still remained in the west and north, but the storm moved toward the southeast with large angry detached masses of cumulous clouds crossing each other. At 4:15 p. m. the wind changed from the north, having the greatest velocity in the history of St. Louis. About 5 p. m. the wind had reached about sixty-two miles and later on it changed in its direction to the southeast. From 5:04 p. m. to 6:04 p. m. 1.33 inches of rain fell. When the rain ended at 9:05 p. m., 1.53 inches had fallen in all. The electrical storm was of unusual volume. The sky was almost one continuous blaze of light and the clouds extended far into the south."

THE DAKOTAS.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Mrs. W. W. Stehly, who resides at Lakota and whose pocketbook was found in the river at Grand Forks, states that the letter found therein is not in her handwriting and was not written by her. When shown the letter she stated that the handwriting resembled very much that of W. W. Stehly, her husband, who left her and who has not lived with her for the past two years. She says that she knows nothing of the matter and furthermore has no intention whatever of committing suicide, as the latter states. She says that her husband resides at Faribault, where she believes he is keeping a hotel and is trying to play some trick upon her, which does not work. He makes frequent visits to East Grand Forks, she understands, and took the occasion to deposit the pocketbook where it was almost certain to be found, as it was. They having separated, she knows of no reason why he should pursue this course.

Graduation exercises of the Grafton high school will occur next Friday evening in the Opera house. The following will receive diplomas: Cornelia B. Shumway, James H. Douglas, Christine Johnson, Oswald D. Foley, Bruce B. Jackson, Sarah Halldorson and Lorin D. Nelson. Next Tuesday an election will be held to decide whether the city shall reorganize under a new charter.—Grafton has the crack militia company of the state; ten men hold sharpshooters' badges. They have a large armory, in which they are now drilling twice a week.

The name of John M. Cochrane, a prominent attorney of Grand Forks, has of late been frequently mentioned as a candidate on the Republican ticket for attorney general of this state. His nomination for that office would meet with the strongest aproval throughout the entire state.

One of the most important cases set for the coming terms of court at Grand Forks is that of Esther M. Cameron against the Great Northern Railway company for $20,000 damages. It will be remembered that Edward J. Cameron was a conductor on the Great Northern and was killed a short distance from this city on the west main line. The accident that befell the conductor was not discovered until the train reached this city. A crew was sent back, and the body was found at the side of the track, and it was supposed that he fell from the train while in motion and was instantly killed. It is claimed that there was a broken step on one of the cars.

The nude corpse of a baby was found near the railroad track about one-half mile from McCanna yesterday morning by the section men. It is believed that it was thrown from the passenger train which went East last evening. There is no clue to its identity.

Sheriff Jacobson and an assistant went up from Grand Forks to Auborn yesterday afternoon to get an insane man who had strewn ties on the Great Northern tracks. He became very troublesome, and so violent that they had to bind him.

C. Plogeskoy, a traveling man whose home is in Fargo, had $200 worth of clothing stolen from his sample cases recently. The goods were found in a second-hand store, the proprietors of which allege that they secured them from another traveling man.

Chief of Police Best, of Fargo, took a 16-year-old girl back to her parents at Detroit, Minn. She came here with a man who claimed to be her husband. The girl then anounced her intention of entering a house of ill-fame.

This year is the first time that the state university has been successful in the state oratorical contest, and it has caused great rejoicing in university circles and in Vermillion particularly. A reception and celebration was held in honor of the victory and the winner, Miss Alyc Hyde, of this place, when Miss Hyde repeated her oration to a large audience. The annual commencement occurs at the university June 12. The senior class of the college of science, literature and arts numbers ten. The total enrollment for the year shown by the catalogue just issued, is 295. The year is counted as a very prosperous one in all lines.

George F. King, a prominent school teacher of Campbell county, was arrested at Aberdeen on the charge of seducing Miss Angie Fadness, a young lady of Mound City, and was taken there this morning for a hearing. He was found by the officers under the bed occupied by a woman in one of the hotels. Miss Fadness is only 16 years of age. Her father declares he will cut King's heart out. King was the Populist candidate for several years ago for superintendent of schools of Campbell county.

Fifty physicians from Southeastern South Dakota, Southwestern Minnesota and Northwestern Iowa met at Sioux Falls and organized the Sioux Valley Medical association. The following officers were elected: President, S. S. Brown, of Sioux Falls; vice presidents, J. A. Sherman, of Cherokee, Iowa, and C. C. May, of Adrian, Minn.; secretary, J. N. Warren, of Sioux City; treasurer, G. G. Cottam, Rock Rapids board of censors, S. Olney, of Sioux City, W. M. Richey, of Le Mars, and M. Sullivan, of Adrian. The association will hold annual meetings.

Commodore Coulson died at Yankton from the effects of a bite inflicted by Dr. Coney three weeks ago in a personal encounter. Coney bit Coulson's finger and blood poisoning followed. Coney is under $1000 ball, but will be rearrested for manslaughter.

Fire almost destroyed Malby's planing mill and scroll works at Vermillion. The roller mills and electric light plant were saved by a hard fight. Loss about $3000. Covered by insurance. The fire was of incendiary origin.

Whereas, default has been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage, made executed and delivered by Freeman Keen and Annie E. Keen, his wife, mortgagors, to Daniel W. Scott, mortgagee, dated the 25th day of September, 1894, and recorded in the register of deeds' office for St. Louis County, Minnesota, on the 12th day of October, 1894, at 9 o'clock a. m., in Book 93 of mortgages, on page 150;

Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby was duly assigned in writing by the said Daniel W. Scott to Henry T. Hillebrand, by written assignment, dated the 26th day of October, 1894, and recorded in said register of deeds' office, on the 27th day of October, 1894, at 9 o'clock a. m., in Book 108 of mortgages, on page 130;

Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby was duly assigned in writing by the said Henry T. Hillebrand to George L. And whereas, said default consists in the non-payment of the semi-annual installment of interest, amounting to twenty dollars, which became due and payable by the terms of said not and mortgage on the 1st day of April, 1896, by reason of which default, said George L. Crosby, has elected to exercise the option to him given by the terms of said note and mortgage, by declaring and he does hereby declare the whole principal sum secured by said mortgage with accrued interest thereon, to be due and payable.

And whereas, there is therefore claimed to be due and there is actually due, upon said mortgage debt at the date of this notice the sum of five hundred twenty-five and 55-100 dollars, principal and interest;

And whereas, said mortgage contains a power of sale in due form, which has become operative by reason of the default above mentioned, and no action or proceeding, at law or otherwise, has been instituted to recover said debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof;

Now therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of said power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described thereon, to-wit:

Republican Club Meeting Held Last Evening and Speeches Made.

Memorial Day Exercises Tomorrow Given By the Irving School.

Repairs to the Depot Have Been Begun---Other News.

The approach of the political conventions is stirring up the feeling somewhat in this portion of the city. Several political clubs have already been organized, and a good many are waiting impatiently for the band wagon to come along. The West Duluth Republican club held quite an enthusiastic meeting at the city hall last evening. Speeches were made by J. O. Hancock, D. M. De Vore and Judge Himebaugh. There were several other speakers present who would undoubtedly have pinched the eagle's tail had there been time, and who will be invited to address the club at future meetings. The sessions of the club promise to be interesting from now on, and all that is needed to awaken the old-time enthusiasm is a brass band and a crowded house.

IRON TRADE CONDITIONS.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 28.—The Iron Trade Review this week will say: The belief that the business now withheld will be crowded into later months of the year, mitigates present disappointments in the iron trade. Meantime there is a movement, in some quarters, for stopping iron production, accumulated stocks being ample to care for any demand likely to come up in the next two or three months.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Hall's Family Pills are the best.

When a man owns a blooded horse he is always careful of its health. He looks after its diet and is particular that the feeding shall be regular and right. While he is doing this it is likely as not that he is himself suffering from some disease or disorder.

When the trouble gets so bad that he cannot work, he will begin to give himself the care he gave the horse at the start. Good pure, rich, red blood is the best insurance against disease of any kind. Almost all diseases come from impure or impoverished blood. Keep the blood pure and strong and disease can find no foothold.

That is the principle on which Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery works. It cleauses, purifies and enriches the blood, puts and keeps the whole body in perfect order; makes appetite good, digestion strong, assimilation perfect. It brings ruddy, virile health. It builds up solid, wholesome flesh (not fat) when, from any cause, reduced below the healthy standard.

NEW YORK STOCKS.

A Fluctuating Day in Many Securities Noted.

New York, May 28.—Sugar declined with Northern Pacific. Other losses were unimportant. Further fractional concessions were made in the leading properties after 10:15 in which General Electric sagged to 33½. Business was in slightly better volume at 11 o'clock and centered in the prominent speculative stocks. Sugar was actively traded in during the second hour, and under a pressure of offerings, yielded 1¾ to 12¼. The decline was preceded by sharp reductions in foreign beet and domestic raw grades of the product, and reflected the liquidation of speculative holdings.

The reported destruction of a part of the plant of the Laclede Gas company, by the St. Louis storm induced the selling of the stock and a drop of 2¼ per cent to 22 resulted. Trading in the general list was increased, and a sharp recession occurred in the railway list on selling for foreign and some domestic account. The Burlington April statement, which showed an increase of $36,549 deficit, caused a break of a point in the stock to 77¾. The speculation continued weak at midday. The sales to noon were 95,800 shares.

PRESBYTERIAN DOINGS.

Routine Work Occupied the Saratoga Meeting.

Saratoga, N. Y., May 28.—In the devotional exercises at the opening of today's session of the Presbyterian general assembly there were frequent allusions to the disaster at St. Louis and East St. Louis. A proposal to change the name of Board of Missions of Freedmen, to Board of Colored Missions, was discussed, but no conclusion reached. The orders for the morning were reports on systematic benevolence and on church erection. The former was presented by Rev. Henry C. Smith, the newly elected professor at Lane seminary, Cincinnati. Rev. William H. Hubbard, of Auburn, N. Y., addressed the assembly on the same subject.

The second order, church erection, was presented by Dr. William F. Junkin, of Mount Clair, New Jersey. The report showed total expenditures on all accounts, including loans and grants, of $165,582. After remarks by Mr. Junkin, the assembly was addressed by Dr. Erskine E. White, the secretary of the board of church erection.

ENGLISH BLUNDER.

Papers There Reported Steamship St. Louis as Lost.

London, May 28.—The blundering of which the English newspaper man is capable was illustrated today. In some manner not explained, but which is being thoroughly investigated by those interested, the news was circulated here today on newspaper placards that "The steamer St. Louis was wrecked and a thousand lives lost."

This startling announcement, evidently an English contortion of the tornado disaster at St. Louis, Mo., spread throughout the city and caused much excitement on the stock exchange and elsewhere. The result was that the office of the American Steamship Co. in this city was besieged for hours by friends of passengers booked to cross the Atlantic on that steamer, and the excitement at the offices eventually became so great that the American line was compelled to send out a notice to the effect that their steamer St. Louis was safely moored at her dock in the port of New York, and that the story that she had been wrecked with a thousand lives was utterly untrue.

A notice to this effect was also posted outside the company's office and the excitement eventually subsided, but not without some very bitter comments on the stupidity or wires of those who issued the misleading news placard.

COL. STEVENS' HOME.

First House Built in Minneapolis Moved By Children.

Minneapolis, May 28.—Seven thousand school children today moved the first house that was built in Minneapolis from its place near the heart of the city to a spot selected for it by the park board near Minnehaha falls. The children were divided into seven relays of 1000 each, and the prearranged program moved off like clock work. The house had been purchased by Lucian Swift, manager of the Journal, and presented to the city. It was mounted on heavy wheels and dragged through the streets by the children, who were carried to various points along the route by the Street Railway company.

At the park Fred B. Snyder, president of the city council, who was born in the house, formally presented it. Responses were made by Mayor Pratt and President Folwell, of the park board. Col. J. H. Stevens, who built the house, and who is still living in this city, made a few remarks. A general holiday was proclaimed and the affair was participated in by great crowds.

Wheat Sold Down Again Today, With Short Spells of Firmness.

A Large Amount of Long Wheat Dumped on the Market.

Trading Was Active Here Both in Cash Stuff and Futures.

Wheat was weak again, the chief cause of the decline being the large amount of long wheat that was dumped on the market. The September future is a little weaker here, while the spread between this market and Chicago is practically unchanged. Trading was active and quite large, the sales on the Duluth board for future delivery reaching 3,000,000 bus. Business in cash stuff was also good. The mills bought 50,000 bus at the July price, and shippers took 50,000 bus at ¼c under July. The general news did not give much encouragement to the bulls. July opened unchanged at 69c, but soon weakened and declined during the first half hour to 59¼c. Then it had a sharp rally to 60¾c, but quickly dropped again and at noon was selling at 59c. Towards the close it firmed up and touched 59¾c. July opened at 60½c and sold down to 59¼c. The close was ¼c lower all round than yesterday. Following were the closing prices:

Wheat—No. 1 hard, cash, 60¾c; May, 61c; July, 61¼c. No. 1 northern, cash, 59¼c; May, 59¾c; June, 59¾c; July, 59¾c; September, 59¾c. No. 2 northern, cash, 56¾@57¾c. No. 3, 55@56c. Rejected, 52@53c. GOSSIP.

Chicago, May 28.—A period of strength early in wheat was caused by covering of shorts. When this was over, the market declined as it has the past few days of its own weight. Bears raided it under 58c for July but the market showing some strength at that price and the wheat being well absorbed caused an upturn to the opening price. The day was not prolific of news, the St. Louis calamity being the absorbing topic. Lower cables had some effect and advices from the Northwest were generally of a bearish nature, while there is a general sentiment that wheat will decline low down in the 50's. The market has reached a figure where it will stand close watching. There is not the slightest doubt but that our crop will be short in many localities and that foreign supplies are at a rather low point. Business depression may carry it lower, but we may reach the turning point any day. Exports from New York were nothing, but Boston and Baltimore sent out the equivalent of 500,000 bus.

Corn and oats featureless except that the promised increase in receipts appears to be at hand.

Provisions were strong all day with larger trade and important buying by shorts.

Puts, July wheat, 58¼c.
Calls, July wheat, 59¾c.

THE DISTRICT COURT.

A Number of Minor Matters Were Up Today.

In Judge Moer's court this morning the jury in the case of B. F. Howard against F. E. Culver returned a verdict of $620.22 in favor of the plaintiff.

Judge Moer yesterday afternoon took up the case of Mary Zoe Alward, as administratrix of the estate of Thomas Alward, against the receivers of the Northern Pacific railroad. Some time ago Alward was a passenger on a Northern Pacific freight when a smashup occurred at Luce, a small station near Staples, and Alward was killed. The suit is brought by his widow to recover $5000 for his death, and the defense is that he was a trespasser. His fare was accepted by the conductor of the train.

Judge Ensign at noon was still hearing the case of August Fitger et al against C. M. Hill, and Judge Morris was hearing the case of Andrew Swordling as assignee of Fredin & Wilson, against the Security bank, to set aside payments made before the assignment on the ground that it constituted a preferred payment.

At noon Judge Morris was hearing a motion on the part of the defense to direct a verdict for the defendant on the ground that there was no proof that at the time of the payments the bank knew that the firm was insolvent or that there was an intention to make it a preferred creditor.

GOVERNMENT LOSES.

Complaint Against Joint Traffic Association Dismissed.

New York, May 28.—Judge Hoyt W. Wheeler, in the United States district court, has handed down a decision dismissing the government's bill of complaint in the suit in equity of the United States against the Joint Traffic association.

Judge Wheeler holds that the Joint Traffic association does not come within the inhibition of the interstate commerce law against a common carrier entering into a pooling arrangement with competing railroads, nor within the scope of the law of 1890, which classes as conspiracy any combination for the restraint of trade or commerce between the several states.

On the latter point the court observes: "Railroads do not trade among the states, but they carry for those who do, and what would restrain their so carrying would seem to be a restraint on such commerce, as the case rests wholly upon the contract.

THE WORK OF RESCUE.

Will Not Be Completed For a Week.

St. Louis, May 28.—The work of rescue, which began after the storm and continued throughout the night, was kept up all of today and will not be completed for a week or more. Voluntary rescue parties, squads of police and companies of the fire department are scattered about the devastated district searching the ruins for bodies. Every few moments the sudden shifting of the crowds and signalling for a conveyance told of a gruesome find, and occasionally of the immediate identification of the mangled remains by wailing friends added horror to the scenes. In the eastern portion of the wrecked city are located a number of factories, and in the ruins of these it is believed that a large number of bodies will be found. The great piles of brick and broken timbers yield slowly to the attack of the searchers, and it is probable that all the victims of the storm will never be known. The work of handling the unidentified bodies was quickly reduced to a system by Coroner Waite. The dead were placed in rows, behind screens. Parties and the crowds of people who are searching for lost friends or morbidly curious, thronged about the morgue, were guided past the dead room at a rapid pace. By this means the bodies were identified rapidly, and as fast as identified were removed to make place for the constantly arriving corpses. The scenes along these bodies were pitiful. A corps of hospital nurses being constantly employed in caring for fainting women and shrieking children.

STOLE THE CLOTHES.

Peter Curry Appropriated Alexander Kinghorn's.

Peter Curry, who did not get around during the recent shower of clothes, and thinking they were given for the asking every day in Duluth, dropped in at room 8 of the Norris-McDougall block about noon today in search of wearing apparel. He found two suits of clothes and an overcoat belonging to Alexander Kinghorn which fitted. Although he had never been introduced to Mr. Kinghorn, Mr. Curry concluded that the latter would not object to an indefinite loan of the property and calmly strolled down Lake avenue south, wearing Mr. Kinghorn's overcoat and with the suits over his arm. The owner discovered his loss soon afterward and descried Curry making off with his plunder.

"Here, you; give me those clothes," yelled Kinghorn, coming up with Curry.

"Why, certainly," replied Curry as he handed over the suits, and passed on. Kinghorn not noticing that he had on his overcoat.

He discovered that his overcoat was gone on his return to his room, and then he was hot. Out he rushed again after Curry, Officer Smollett joining in the chase. The two pursued Curry down Lake avenue and east toward the lake, catching up with him at the water side. He was still wearing Kinghorn's overcoat when caught. A complaint was sworn out charging Curry with larceny and he will have a hearing this afternoon.

THE ST. LOUIS HORROR.

The awful loss of life and great destruction of property by a terrific tornado at St. Louis last evening create a feeling of horror through the whole country. Thousands of people all over the country have friends residing in St. Louis and the neighboring territory, and their anxiety for the safety of their friends must be intense. Language fails to properly describe the horrible features of the storm and the scene of devastation which has been left in the track of the destructive tornado. The sympathy of the whole United States, and of the whole world as well, will be extended to the people of the territory in which the tornado has wrought such fearful havoc.

The present month has been prolific of deadly electrical and wind storms and terrible accidents accompanied by heavy loss of life. The cyclones in Texas, Oklahoma and Iowa, succeeded by tornados in Michigan and Illinois, the awful bridge accident in British Columbia, are now succeeded by the St. Louis tornado, more destructive to life and property than all the others combined. The heart grows faint at the thought of the immense loss of life, the maiming and wounding of many people, and the utter destruction of millions of dollars worth of property. That this and other sections of the country may be spared from such fearful visitations by the angry elements will be the earnest prayer of everyone.

KEEP THEM IN CONGRESS.

Referring to The Herald's statement that the Hennipin county Republicans acted wisely in renominating Mr. Fletcher for congress, the St. Cloud Times, (Dem.) asks: "Will The Herald explain how its theory of coinage can be carried out by keeping such 'good men in congress?' Of course, we merely mention this to show the inconsistency of the Herald's views with its partisanship." There is no partisanship whatever in what The Herald said in regard to Mr. Fletcher. Had that gentleman been a Democrat or a Populist and had served his district faithfully, as he has done during the past two years, The Herald would have commended the Democrats for renominating him. His views on the currency question are not of sufficient moment to demand that he should be retired for that reason, any more than should Mr. Towne's views on that question defeat him for renomination. The Herald is not a crank on the money question. It believes that there are questions that are of equal importance with bimetallism, and some more important. For instance, there is a necessity for legislation that will provide more revenue for the purposes of the government.

The Herald has always contended that it is good policy to keep good men in congress. When a man serves his district well and shows that he has ability he should be kept in congress term after term, as is the custom in Maine and other Eastern states. It is in this way that congressmen obtain influence and are consequently able to do better service for their constituencies. By this method, congressmen are given that legislative experience and education in great national questions which produces statesmen.

Look at the commanding position which the senators and representatives from Maine have in both branches of congress. It is not due to the fact that they tower above their fellow members in ability. Mr. Reed, of course, is a man of exceptional ability, but the other members from Maine do not shine conspicuously except for the reason that they have been many years in congress and have obtained leading places on committees by right of seniority. The result is that the state of Maine has a powerful influence in shaping the country's legislation. Minnesota can reach a similar position of influence in congress by pursuing the same policy. The cry "pass the offices around," is very pleasing to the ears of the multitude of office seekers with which the country is cursed, but it is bad policy on the part of the people to listen to the cry. It is the best policy by far to keep good men in office as long as they are willing to remain there and serve the people faithfully.

THE SPOILS DOCTRINE.

The Little Falls Transcript says: "Governor Clough has appointed some Duluth men to state offices, and the fact is dwelt upon by the Duluth News Tribune as a reason why Duluth Republicans should favor Clough. That is the strength of the Clough campaign everywhere, and the machine shouters are astonished that the general public takes but little interest in the desires of the state appointees to continue in their jobs. The hardest work the state officers are doing now is to guarantee their respective counties for Clough."

This is one of the reasons that The Herald is opposed to the Merriam machine. It has maintained its power in Republican politics in this state by the corrupt use of the state patronage. Mr. Clough has no higher conception of the governor's duty in the exercise of the appointing power. He is a believer in the spoils doctrine which has built up and now supports the Merriam machine. The patronage of the governor's office since Mr. Clough accidentally became its occupant has been used to further the political interests of William R. Merriam and to obtain his own nomination this year. It is true that offices have been given to men in this county who were not supposed to be favorable to the Merriam machine, but this was a shrewd move worthy of the fine Italian hand of Banker Merriam and his faithful lieutenant, Dave Clough. They knew that sentiment in this county is strongly anti-Merriam, and it was with the object of overcoming this sentiment that the offices were thus doled out. That they calculated shrewdly is evident today, when these officeholders are shouting for Clough, who is the Merriam candidate, and calling upon friends to save them from losing their offices.

There is nothing that better illustrates the character of the men who compose the state house ring. They care nothing about Republican principles. It is the offices they are after, and the spoils doctrine is the chief corner stone of their political structure. But The Herald does not believe that the people of St. Louis county can be misled into giving their support to the candidate of this detestable and corrupt machine, particularly when the Sixth district has a candidate who is honest and able and has always been found, in and out of the legislature, battling for the interests of the people.

THE INNOCENT SUFFER.

The Sayer institute at Lexington, Ky., one of the leading institutions of learning in that state, has been closed. This is the school that Madeline Pollard attended and of which ex-Congressman W. C. P. Breckinridge was a trustee. As a result of the great scandal occasioned by the relations of these two people, the school has been ruined. Parents have refused to send their daughters to Sayer; the attendance at the school has fallen off within the past two years from about 100 to 11; the principal, Maj. H. B. McClelland, one of the leading educators of the state, has resigned, and the closing of the school is practically assured.

It is claimed that a rival concern has made a mean and disgraceful use of the Breckinridge-Pollard exposure, and has worked upon the feelings of Kentucky parents to bring about this, but it is nevertheless true that the Kentucky mothers are reluctant to send their daughters to such a place. Thus is the sin of Breckinridge visited upon the innocent.

Probably the institution might have lived down the scandal had not some of its most active supporters upheld the old sinner and by their attitude socially and politically condoned the offense by which he disgraced himself and his state. The fact that such an honored institution as Sayer has been compelled to close its doors shows how utterly hopeless must be the attempt which the malodorous Breckinridge is now making to get back into public life.

MERRIAM AND CLOUGH.

The general revolt of the people against Merriamism has alarmed the Clough managers and they are now engaged in the futile task of trying to prove that there is no alliance between Merriam and Clough. The people cannot be fooled in this way. They know better. The News Tribune has received orders from the capitol to deny the alliance.

The other day at St. Paul one of the Clough officeholders sang this song and confidentially stated that Merriam is not putting up a dollar for Dave Clough, and the paper which reports the conversation adds: "And all the time the distant but distinct thud of the bullion boxes being laden on drays for transportation from the bank to the capitol could palpably be heard where this confidential communication was made. And the healers and strikers of all shades of so-called political belief—an army of them—were at that moment hanging around the capitol corridors, and blockading ingress and egress to the executive offices."

THE REAL CONSPIRATORS.

The News Tribune says: "That there is a conspiracy among the men who are supporting Lee to throw down Mr. Towne is a fact which The Herald does not dispute." This is wholly false. The Herald does dispute it and has always disputed it. Furthermore, it enters an emphatic denial to the baseless charge. If there is any conspiracy to defeat Mr. Towne, the plotters will be found in the Clough camp, which is almost wholly made up of men who have been Mr. Towne's bitterest political foes. That they now profess friendship to him is not surprising to those who know their methods. They are political hypocrites as well as political cut-throats. On the other hand, the great majority of Mr. Towne's warmest supporters — and nearly all his closest political and personal friends in this county—are supporting Mr. Lee. The real conspirators against Mr. Towne's political future are those who are endeavoring to keep him from leading his influence in the fight between the people and the Merriam machine.

The proclamation issued by Mayor Truelsen, calling upon all citizens to observe Memorial day, is timely. The sentiments expressed by the mayor that the day should be devoted to the memory of the heroic dead and the solemn character of the festival preserved will be re-echoed by all patriotic citizens.

St. Louis county must work in harmony with the rest of the Sixth district. This is political wisdom, and it is also wise from a business standpoint. What have we to gain by supporting the Merriam-Bixby-Clough machine?

William M. Hahn, chairman of the Ohio Republican state committee, says that Speaker Thomas B. Reed will be McKinley's running mate. But it is possible that William McKinley Hahn is "talking through his hat."

Ex-Governor Campbell of Ohio says he wishes to restore silver to the position which it occupied prior to 1873. This is a sentiment to which everyone, except a radical goldbug, will subscribe.

There is general sympathy for the cyclone-swept portions of the country. It is one of those calamities against which there is no protection, and we can only tender our sympathy and aid.

The Chicago Southern states exposition has been indefinitely postponed. This is not surprising, because it was rather an absurd idea.

Senator Tillman is the only presidential candidate who wears his own badge. He is certainly honest in indicating his preference.

The Rev. Irl Hicks of St. Louis has made his name great as a cyclone predictor. By the way, he lives in St. Louis.

IT WAS A BARGAIN.

Chicago Post: "Dear," she said, and her sweetest and most engaging smile illumined her face, "if you had a handsome lap-robe could you use it?"

"Certainly not," he replied. "You know very well that we haven't a vehicle of any description."

"That's what I thought," she returned, "so I have packed it away. Later, when we are wealthy and keep horses we can—"

"Packed it away," he exclaimed, interrupting her. "Packed what away?"

"Why, the lap-robe," she answered sweetly.

"But we haven't a lap-robe," he protested.

"Oh, yes, we have," she returned. "I happened to stumble into that department of one of the big stores today, and they had marked them down so low that I felt I ought to get one before the opportunity slipped away."

"But we don't need—"

"Not now, but we may," she interrupted. "It's just as well to get these things when they can be had at a bargain, and this was a real bargain. You men are very thoughtless about such things. You would never have thought of buying this robe now; you wouldn't have had the foresight, but would have waited until you had a horse, and then very likely you would have to pay $1 more for it."

WOMEN FIREMEN.

Philadelphia Ledger: The little town of Nasso, in Sweden, has a feminine department, 150 strong, in its fire brigade. The waterworks of the village consist simply of four great tubs, and it is the duty of the women "firemen" to keep these full in case of fire. They stand in two continuous lines from the tubs to the lake, about three streets away, one line passing the full buckets and the other sending them back.

FRENCH ARMY BARBER.

The regimental Figaro is quite a character, says the Cleveland World. He is not always chosen for his skill in the tonsorial art. He may have been a butcher, a baker or a candle-stick maker before joining the corps. His good conduct has promoted him to the post and given him a most envious position, for he receives a slight remuneration monthly from the pay of each trooper. He also enjoys immunity from a certain number of drills, and has the right of remaining out of barracks until 10 o'clock every evening. He is responsible for the heads of his comrades. If a man's hair is found to be too long, or if a soldier is not shaved in the regulation manner, the barber has to suffer.

ABSURD CLOUGH CLAIMS.

The Efforts of the Office Holders Are Failing.

Little Falls Transcript: The Clough office holdersand shouters have such respect for the "band wagon" that they regard it as final to assure anyone that Clough will win. They regard the favor of the appointing power so valuable that they cannot appreciate how any Republican would oppose Clough in the face of their guarantee that Clough will win. The average Republican voter who favors some other candidate than Clough generally has some good reason for it, and all the bluffs that politicians can make that Clough will win doesn't affect his choice in the least. It is an argument that is effective with state office holders, and those who want state office—but the Republican voter deems it his right to support for nomination the man he favors, and disregards entirely the bluster and boasts of the supporters of any other candidate. For instance among the 2000 and more Republican voters in Morrison county, how many of them desire or expect any reward of position under the next governor of Minnesota? To those who prefer the nomination of Mr. Lee, of what force is an argument based on the claim of some aspirant for future favor from Clough that Clough will win? If Clough has such an eternal clinch, he doesn't need Morrison county, and there is no occasion for a fight against our old resident ad constant neighbor and friend Colonel William E. Lee. Lee and Clough the importance of the delegates from Morrison county is so great that Clough needs this county—then that condition itself breaks all the forces of the Clough argument, and will fully determine every friend of William E. Lee that his support is of especial value.

But the claim of the Clough men that he is certain of success is absurd, and the claim that he even has a fair chance of success is false. He will lose Hennepin county—which is one congressional district. He will lose Ramsey and Washington counties of the Fourth district. Lee will carry the bulk of the Sixth district, and Clough and Lee will have many more votes from the Seventh district than will Clough. In Southern Minnesota Clough is not strong, and Van Zant, Gibbs, Lee, Clapp and Eustis will have support there, as will also Clough, but the latter will have no more than his equal proportion of the six. The above is believed to be a fair statement of the condition as it exists. The efforts of the office holders to nominate Clough for governor have already failed. Those who prefer Clough for governor should not necessarily abandon him because his prospects are hopeless but they should abandon their reasoning that prospective success is the strongest argument to use in behalf of a candidate. Clough has not that prospective success, and the character of the campaign in the state is such that he has less hope of winning additional support than has any other candidate.

At present William E. Lee's chances for nomination are better than those of any other one candidate, and immeasurably better than Clough's. It should be, and will be a pleasure for the Republicans of Morrison county to give their loyal support to a candidate so worthy, popular and well known locally as Mr. Lee. It is not a scheme of politicians or office seekers to "carry" Morrison county for Lee, but the great mass of Republican voters in the various precincts know and admire the man, and they will not fail to see that their support of him finds emphatic expression in the primaries, the county convention and the state convention.

WHEN SUN AND CLOCK AGREE.

St. Louis Republic: A year or two ago we made the statement in "Notes for the Curious" that there are but four days in the year when the sun and clock exactly correspond; in other words, that there are but four days of the 365 in which the sun is directly south at noon. Recently we bought a copy of the rare old Boston Almanac of 1774, which contains the following:

The 15th of April and the 17th of June remember,
August 31 and 24th of December;
On these four days (and none else in the year)
The sun and clock both the same time declare.

Proclamation.

Memorial Day, May 30th, being a legal holiday under a provision of the General Laws of the State of Minnesota.

Now, therefore, pursuant to laws, I, Henry Truelsen, mayor of the city of Duluth, do hereby give notice and proclaim that the provisions of the law, to-wit:

No public business except in case of necessity shall be transacted on said day, will be strictly enforced.

In connection with the above I would most respectfully ask all good citizens to take part in the exercises and memorial services of said day, and strictly observe the law and add solemnity to the day in honoring the heroic and patriotic dead who died for a free and undivided republic. I can find no more fitting words to express my feeling than those expressed by the G. A. R. Commander-in-Chief, General John A. Logan:

"We should guard their graves with sacred vigilence. All that the consecrated wealth and taste of the nation can do their adornment and security is but a fitting tribute to the memory of her slain defenders. Let no wanton foot tread rudely on such hallowed grounds. Let pleasant paths invite the coming and going of reverend visitors and fond mourners. Let no vandalism of avarice or neglect, no ravages of time testify to the present or to the coming generations that we have forgotten as a people the cost of a free and undivided republic.

"If other eyes grow dull and other hands slack, and other hearts cold in the solemn trust, ours shall keep it well as long as the light and warmth of life remain to us.

"Let us then gather around their sacred remains and garland the passionless mounds above them with the choicest flowers of springtime; let us raise above them the dear old flag they saved from dishonor; let us in this solemn presence renew our pledges to aid and assist those whom they have left among us as a sacred charge upon a nation's gratitude—the soldiers' and sailors' widow and orphan."

Let us teach our children and the coming generation to duly observe Memorial Day not as a day of jollification, but as a day of mourning and weeping; let us do all we can to make this the greatest legal holiday of our country and thereby show our everlasting gratitude to those who died in defense of justice and their country, and let us not forget that a people honor themselves in honoring their dead.

Henry Truelsen, Mayor.

ON TRIAL

Case For Assault Against Miss Braithwaite Taken Up Today.

Jury Was Obtained Without Much Challenging or Trouble.

Young Grytdahl, Who Was Flogged, Placed on the Stand.

The trial of Miss Mary A. Braithwaite, principal of the Bryant school, for an assault alleged to have been committed on a pupil named Henry Grytdahl on May 6, attracted a large crowd to the municipal court this morning. When the case was called for trial, after the disposal of some minor matters, Miss Braithwaite went forward and took her seat beside her counsel, Attorney J. A. Hanks. She was accompanied by Miss Moffat, the teacher in whose room young Grytdahl was a pupil. Mrs. J. A. Watterworth and several teachers from the Bryant school, Superintendent Denfeld and President Pryor and several members of the board of education were present. The defendant was cool and collected, despite the fact that she was the focus of numerous pairs of eyes, expressive of resentment as well as sympathy or of merely idle curiosity.

The work of drawing a jury from the special venire summoned for the occasion was somewhat protracted, and it was nearly 11 o'clock before the panel was complete. The following comprises the jury: Wallace Wells, William Hicken, Arthur A. Darby, Paul Kritz, Emil Tessman, B. A. Ransberry, Charles D. Pattinson, Ernest O. Nelson, H. C. Osterhout, Henry Fee, William G. Starkey and Henry F. Rehbein.

Some comment was heard on the fact that Mr. Hicken, whose sister is a principal in one of the schools, was accepted as a juror by the prosecution. One juror stated in the course of his examination that he had read the account of the affair published in the morning paper, and that he knew nothing about the facts and had formed no opinion. He was accepted.

Henry Grytdahl, the pupil who was punished by the defendant and whose age is about 14 years, was placed on the stand and detailed the circumstances of the case substantially as heretofore outlined. During his direct examination he made the statement that the fence along the sidewalk was about a yard from the school fence.

"How far is a rod, Henry?" inquired Attorney Hanks, on cross-examination.

"Three and one-half yards," replied the witness promptly, at which evidence of good training Miss Moffatt, his teacher, smiled approvingly.

Henry testified that the hose with which the defendant whipped him was about three-quarters of an inch thick. He said she whipped until she got tired, when she rested and started in again. He said she rested several times. The witness was not driven from his statements by cross-examination. He was still on the stand when the noon recess was taken.

THE ROUNDER.

About 5 o'clock in the morning, not very long ago, a solitary jag might have been seen holding up the Superior street wall of a prominent hotel. It had evidently had about fourteen hours to develop, for it was one of the most able-bodied jags the Rounder ever saw, and Rounders are popularly supposed to see a good many. The possessor of the jag was well dressed up, so to speak. He was having a hard time to keep that wall up, but he was working hard at it with some show for success, apparently.

As he unsteadily braced his back against the wall a funny thing happened. The cook, in an upper window, held out a rat trap and shook it. A caged rat fell out, sprawled through the air, lighted on the wires and caromed to the foot of the jag, where it lay stunned for a moment. The jag braced up, looked at the rat and then kicked at it with a dangerous lurch which threatened to carry him off his feet. He missed the rat and hit the wall, which necessitated his taking a seat on the steps and nursing his foot for a short time. Then he got up unsteadily and started for the rat again. The rat had by this time revived, and it scrambled dazed to its feet. As the jag approached it crawled away, and the jag pursued. The latter was in better possession of his faculties than the rat, and after he had killed it he resumed his occupation of holding up the hotel, chuckling to himself at the fun he was having.

Just then the cook again shook the trap out of the window and two big rats fell at the feet of the jag. This was too much, and it was plain that he did not believe it to be true. He pretended not to see them, but his curiosity overcame him and he looked again. There they were, and he clapped his hands to his reeling head.

As he moved tipsily away the Rounder heard him remark in thick tones:

"E' gosh, shat's fasht drop 'll ever take, s' help me."

He Answers Vigorously.

The answer of Capt. C. S. Barker, owner of the tug Medina, which sank the Pathfinder last summer, in the libel brought against the tug by E. B. Inman for $4921.13 damages for the Pathfinder has been filed. The answer alleges that the accident was due to the carelessness of the crew of the Pathfinder, who are accused of being incompetent. It is claimed that she crossed the bow of the Medina and was therefore at fault. It is also claimed that the Pathfinder, instead of being tight and staunch, was old, weak and unseaworthy, her tackle being old and of little value; also, that the Pathfinder was not injured in the collision and could have been raised at a cost of no more than $250 had the work been properly done.

Making the Repairs.

The work of repairing the Pennsylvania and Ohio Fuel company's hoisting apparatus, which was so badly damaged by the wind about ten days ago, is progressing, but it will be three weeks before it is in shape so that boats can be unloaded at the dock. The dock is not idle, however, for the loading of coal for shipment is in progress. The damage to the apparatus was heavy. Both rolls are twisted, chains broken and the entire affair pretty generally damaged.

THERE ARE MORE WAYS OF SKINNING AN EEL

Than one. This, of course, is no news to veteran fishermen who clean their own fish. But there is always a best way in everything. The best way to overcome or prevent malaria, to conquer incipient rheumatism or kidney trouble, and to relieve dyspepsia, biliousness, constipation and nervousness, is to begin without delay, the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a standard medicine endorsed by medical men everywhere. It strengthens the system and improves the appetite and sleep of those who employ it as a restorative, and accomplishes health-giving results which fairly astonish those previously unacquainted with its efficacy. Invalids of all sorts testify in its behalf. It is the leading tonic of this era.

Program to Be Given at the Y. M. C. A. Friday.

All the graduates of the gymnasium, and there have been good ones, have been secured to take part, and the gymnastic program will be really excellent. In addition to the program given below there will be a piano selection by Mrs. W. J. Murphy. A squad of turners from the Duluth Turn Verein will take part in the bar work. The program is as follows:

TO CURE PILES.

A Remedy That Will Do It and Is Perfectly Safe.

We take pleasure in calling attention to a new pile cure which has been remarkably successful in curing every form of itching, bleeding or protruding piles. The remedy is known as the Pyramid Pile Cure and is recommended on account of its absolute safety, ease of application and instant relief from pain.

The Pyramid Pile Cure contains no opium or other poison and does not interfere with daily occupation while using. People who believed nothing but a surgical operation would cure them have been astonished at the results from a single 50-cent package of the Pyramid.

Mrs. Mary C. Tyler, of Heppner, Ore., writes: "One package of Pyramid Pile Cure entirely cured me of piles from which I have suffered for years, and I have never had the slightest return of them since.

Mr. E. O'Brien, Rock Bluff, Neb., says: The package of Pyramid Pile Cure entirely removed every trace of itching piles. I cannot thank you enough for it.

The Pyramid Pile Cure is sold by all druggists at 50 cents and $1 per package.

A TOBACCO HEART.

Thousands of Americans Can't Get Life Insurance Because Tobacco Has Destroyed the Heart Action and Wrecked the Nervous System.

Engineer Bates Discovers a Never-Failing and Easy Remedy.

Delanson, N. Y., May 27.—(Special.)—Engineer O. H. Bates stepped off engine No. 275 today, with a long oiler in one hand and a bunch of waste in the other. Not a bystander there could help remarking his youthful, healthy look, and active, vigorous movement, and contrasting his appearance with his condition of two months ago.

"Say, colonel, how well you look!"

"Yes, I am well—better than I have been for years."

"What have you been doing?"

"Oh, not much; No-To-Bac cured me of the tobacco habit, after using it forty-three years, braced me mentally and physically, and made me a new man in more ways than one. I had no appetite couldn't sleep; now I sleep like a baby and eat three times a day with a relish for the first time in years. My heart action is regular and no longer a bar to increased life insurance. You know throttle pulling requires a pretty steady nerve, and my nerves are O. K. now. One box and a quarter of No-To-Bac cured me completely in ten days. No-To-Bac is sold by all druggists, and made by the Sterling Remedy company, of New York and Chicago. Get their little book called Don't Tobacco Spit and Smoke Your Life Away; free to anyone that writes. It cost me $1 to get cured, and I spent three or four dollars a week for tobacco. If I had failed to get cured I would have gotten my money back, as the makers guarantee three boxes to cure any case. I have recommended the use of No-To-Bac to many of the boys on the line, and everyone of them who got the genuine article, has been cured. Look out, don't let some of the imitations be palmed off on you for No-To-Bac."

HOTTEST PLACE ON EARTH.

Science has made a place that can far surpass in its enormous heat the wonderful fiery furnace of Biblical times, and even Vesuvis and Etna when in full action. As might—or might not—be expected, this stupendous heat is due to the agency of electricity, and it is the Moisson electric furnace. In the interior of this carbon, lime, platinum and other substances which can withstand in their bulk the hottest blast furnace that ever sprang into being can be volatilized or made into intangible and floating vapors with little delay and with no other effort than that of being simply thrown within this furnace's vitals, says the New York Journal.

Exactly how hot this hottest place on earth is, neither science nor statistics have been able to determine. There is no way of estimating the degree of its awful heat in fact. It is only known that within the maw of this furnace metals that heat generated in other ways has no effect upon at once begin to lose their solidity and vanish, as it were, into thin air. Up to date no practical uses for this heat have appeared, but by its power some extraordinary and valuable chemical experiments have been performed.

Carbon, for example, intractable, a dingy lump in the rough, that has hitherto remained unaffected by the most terrible heat, in the Moisson furnace turns into a violent vapor, and while in that state can be blended with some of the metallic earths to form carbides, which science thinks can later on be turned into commercial use. Acetylene may or may not be valuable, and may or may not become a substitute for illuminating gas before long, but at all events it can only be produced satisfactorily and cheaply through this electric furnace. The furnace can give forth carbide of lime by tons. Dropped into water, carbide of lime becomes acetylene. Made red hot, or rather white hot, worked up to this extraordinary degree of heat, acetylene turns into bezol, useful for aniline dyes, formerly costly, but by this method made cheap.

This hottest furnace on earth has another strange power, that of making petroleum. There is a substance known as cargille of cerium. Cerium, fused with carbon in the furnace, is changed instanter into this product, and, decomposed by being put into water, it becomes nothing else than petroleum itself. It is probable that this will explain the chemical production of petroleum by nature.

went down and the prisoners were panic stricken.

In this district between Sixth street and the river, northward from Chouteau avenue, the tornado tore a diagonal path. The district comprises business houses, many of them of the older type. Every building within the path sustained damage. Smoke stacks and chimneys were topsled over, walls were levelled, roofs were lifted, thousands of windows were smashed, miles of telegraph wires were left in a network on the ground. Through the ruined districts the streets are impassable. They are covered with debris ten feet deep. Along the levee front the hawsers snapped and boats were sent adrift, some to go down, others to go ashore on the eastern bank. The loss of life which would have taken place at this point was averted by the hour at which the tornado came. A little later the excursion steamers would have been going out; none of them had left their wharves. Other boats gone an hour before, and although not heard from, probably had passed beyond the path of the storm. The death dealing cloud crossed the river at such an angle as to strike and wreck the upper works at the east of the Eads bridge, and to sweep a part of East St. Louis. The list of dead and injured on the east side of the river will not be complete until hours of daylight permit effective search of the ruins.

There were more pale faces and sinking hearts in more S. Louis homes than were ever known before in its history. In St. Louis the storm seems to have taken a course that lay chiefly between the railroad track and Lafayette avenue, though it swept the entire city, cutting a wide swath wherever it did any damage. The wharf was the scene of the worst devastation on this side of the river. Before the storm, along the river steamboats and wharfboats and barges were moored from Biddle street to Chouteau avenue. These were swept from their fastenings almost in a moment.

ST. LOUIS DEAD.

Anything like a complete list of the dead is not obtainable yet, as no systematized way of getting the lists has been evolved out of the confusion. Following, however, are a few which have been verified:

Watchman on board the Dolphin, name unknown, drowned; Benjamin De-silva, unknown man at Lohrums quarry; Alex Stringer, driver for Western Star Dairy company; James Dunn, Francisco Rodriguez, Fred Wells, 3 years old; Theresa Wells, 8 months old; Mrs. Carter and child, unknown man, Peter Diedrich, employed at bagging mill; Max Weiss, Malchay McDonald, superintendent Waters & Pierce Oil company; — Jones, engineer Acme Iron works; Frankie Fisher, Emma Cheny, Isabella Horn, Charles Landy, Sawyer Manufacturing company; — Zimerman, killed at Union Depot company's house; Kate Claypool.

EAST ST. LOUIS.

Illinois Town is a Huge Cemetery Today.

St. Louis, May 28.—Residents of East St. Louis gathered in little knots on the streets. They did not mind the drenching rain. Nothing except the wind, which left death in its path, possessed any terrors for them. They saw that the entire east approach to the Eads bridge had been carried away by the river as if it had been so much tissue paper. On every side ruin was to be seen. For a time chaos reigned. No one knew exactly what to do.

The court house and police headquarters had been blown away. Officers knew not where to find their chief, and while vaguely conscious that they ought to do something, were at a loss as to how to proceed. In the course of time, however, the police had headquarters established. Drays and wagons were pressed into service as ambulances, and the work of rescuing the dying and recovering the dead commenced. Several persons were found whose bodies had been transfixed by the sharp end of some huge timbers, others lay mangled and groaning under the weight of a ton of timbers. Every courier that arrived at police headquarters had fresh tidings of calamity, until those who received the reports became inured to tales of terror and received them as quietly as though they had been commonplace annals of every day happenings.

With the storm came a darkness that added to the terror. Residents of St. Louis fearful of the safety of friends and relatives or property, besieged the watchman, who had been stationed at the bridge, with requests to be allowed to cross. The passageway was filled with debris from the buildings overhead. The watchman had instructions to allow no one to pass. Two trains, which had been blown over by storms, blocked the way of pedestrians.

A HUGE MAUSOLEUM.

Those who did get over saw only a scene of wholesale destruction of life and property. East St. Louis and its environs are one huge mausoleum, covering so one knows how many dead. The scene here was frightful, but it was nothing compared with the scene along the levee, Broadway and the side streets of the island. Every house had relatives and friends among the dead and injured. Husbands, wives and brothers worked on the boats, on the cars, and, as they could not be found, the anguish of mothers, sisters and other relatives was heartrending. They would run from one morgue to another, in some instances pushing aside dead bodies in order to attempt to identify their relatives, and when found, the cries would melt a heart of stone.

Miss Dean sat speechless in the car while her dead father lay on some straw at her feet. Her mother was not far away, and her two younger brothers lay mangled upon a door near by. It was an awful sight, but it was duplicated over and over again. To add to the distress, there was no light of any kind to be had. Several men guarded a number of bodies in the roadway, near Broadway and Assis, and oftentimes the sole survivor of one family would be watching over the remains of the mutilated dead of some neighboring family in the darkness and alone. Mothers, sisters, fathers and brothers, some crying, others suppressing all emotion during hours of search through the debris at Vandalia for the depot and other places in a vain attempt to extricate some loved one buried there.

NARROW ESCAPES.

Hundreds of people worked about the yards south of the bridge, and many waded through water and slush in the ruins of the Marteli and Tremont hotels. While the rescuers were at work on a building on Missouri avenue, about 1 a. m., they came upon the bodies of two dead infants, and, upon removing them, they came upon a woman pinioned in such a position that it would take several hours to remove her. She told the rescuers, as near as could be made out, that her name was Warner, that her home was in Litchfield, Ill., and that the children were hers. She said that she wanted word sent to their father. It was impossible to get any facts either regarding her or how badly she was injured. It was the opinion of those at work that they would be able to get her out alive, as they were very near her at the time.

At 1 o'clock the rescuing party on the island came upon the body of W. H. McKenzie, clerk of the Vandalia house, who is seriously injured internally and badly bruised about the body. Mrs. McKenzie was carried to the hospital.

A message was sent to Belleville, Ills., as St. Louis cannot be reached, asking that they send a steamer to help check the fire raging in the ruins, and about 11 p. m. one of Belleville's best engines and crew of firemen came to tender their help to the firemen of the stricken city who had been forced to fight the fire with buckets. Help came in the nick of time, for although they had made a noble fight, they were not able to make a successful stand against such odds as confronted them.

A million dollars will not cover the damage to property. Freight cars stand in all shapes and forms about the yards of the dwellings, as well as the railway yards, and several were carried beyond the Vandalia embankment and thrown into the slough. The Lake house, Gross building, the Tremont hotel, Martel house, Vandalia round house, twenty dwellings around it, the Howe institute, the watch tower, Lynch's hotel, Beard's store, all near the dyke, were demolished. Hundreds of cars stand in all shapes far away from their proper places. Two engines in the Vandalia yards were thrown down an embankment and destroyed.

Far down along the levee from the bridge wrecks of steamboats are found. The following boats are known to have been sunk: S. C. Club, Henry Stockman, tug Rescue, Milliken, Christy Wiggins, Medill and all the wharves. The church ferryboat was the only one not damaged. Mayor's lumber yard was completely carried away, as was the upper Louisville & Nashville freight depot. All streets are lined with debris of buildings. It is asserted that there is not a whole line of wire between any two points in the Western states.

After the wind and rain had done its work, fire added to the destruction. Hazel's mill was the first to become ignited, and it was totally destroyed, causing a loss of $150,000. Harris' barrel factory, nearly fifty loaded cars in the terminal yards, Lynch's boarding house, Beards feed store, Lee's blacksmith shop and other places were burned. The destruction of the waterworks early in the storm cut off the water supply, and Chief Purdy and firemen fought the fire with a bucket brigade as best they could. The whole central portion of the city was threatened by the burning mill, but all hands worked with such a will that its further spread was prevented. The fire caused great consternation. Hundreds of people hurried to the scene, believing people meant the complete destruction of the desolate district.

THE WRECKED TRAINS.

The passengers and trainmen of the two trains wrecked on the bridge were taken to private places in East St. Louis. There was not a single fatality reported in these two trains, which were passing along at a rapid rate when the wind struck. The whole top abutment of the first pier, as well as the big rocks and iron girders of the approach, were picked up and thrown up on the roadbed just behind the train. In front two baggage cars were picked up and placed across the tracks. The upper roadway was torn down and thrown upon the train along with four wagons loaded with merchandise. A sudden stop was made, and although the cars careened, the passengers escaped through the wreckage, and were taken care of. All the way down the approach every pole and signal wire were torn away, and in many places piled on the tracks.

EAST ST. LOUIS DEAD.

Following are some of the dead whose bodies have been recovered from the debris:

Charles Wait, William Surrer, Mrs. Scott, J. A. Porter, a Cincinnati drummer, name not known; A. L. Richardson, flagman for Vandalia railroad; Amelia Seurer, John Reams, Scott Hayward, Peter Walmsley, John Anderson, Mrs. Bruce, Emma Sullivan, Jacob Klntze, P. J. NEAR ST. LOUIS.

Centralia Escaped But Many Were Killed Elsewhere.

Centralia, Ills., May 28.—The storm of last night passed through southern Illinois and spread destruction over a large extent of territory west, south and southeast of Centralia. New Baden, a village on the Air Line railroad west of Centralia was completely wiped out. only six houses remaining. Thirty-six lives were lost. New Madrid, southeast of this city, also suffered great loss of life and property. Seven persons are reported killed and 50 injured.

The cyclone pursued an easterly course taking in the villages of Irvington, Richview, Ashley, Boyld and Dix. Houses were blown down and persons killed in all these places and throughout the country. Farm property, crops and orchards have suffered immense loss and it is estimated that in counties of Clinton, Washington and Jefferson fifty lives have been lost. It is impossible to give details as all wires are down, but while the storm was on all sides of Centralia it did not touch this city.

ANOTHER FATAL STORM.

Keewanee, Ill., May 28.—A terrific wind and electric storm visited this section early this morning doing great damage to buildings and stock. One dwelling north of town was completely shattered, and several people were killed.

RELIEF RESOLUTION PASSED.

Washington, May 28.—The resolution passed by the house, looking to the relief of the sufferers at St. Louis, reached the senate, and unanimous consent was given to consider it. Senator Vest expressed his dissent to the resolution, saying the people of Missouri and St. Louis were able to take care of the people, and later reports had shown that the first accounts of the terrible calamity had been exaggerated. He said it would do no harm to pass the resolution, however. Senator Cullom expressed the opinion that the states could take care of the people. The resolution was changed from concurrent to joint, and passed.

GOVERNMENT TO LEND TENTS.

Washington, May 28.—Representative Joy, of St. Louis, has drawn a resolution, which Speaker Reed will permit him to call up in the house this morning, and which Mr. Joy will endeavor to have introduced in the senate. It follows: "Be it resolved by the senate and house of representatives in congress assembled, that the secretary of war be and is hereby authorized to lend the mayors of the cities of St. Louis and East St. Louis, under such regulations and restrictions as he may deem proper, a sufficient number of tents to temporarily shelter such citizens of said cities as may have lost their homes by the tornado of yesterday.

AN INDIANA STORM.

Anderson, Ind., May 28.—A storm struck this city last night, injuring several people and doing $250,000 damage. The new building of the American Strawboard company was blown down, with a loss of $40,000. The buildings of the Anderson Bicycle company, the National Tin Plate company, the Presbyterian church and other buildings were blown down. The postoffice was also damaged.

PENNSYLVANIA CYCLONES.

Lancaster, Pa., May 28.—Columbia was struck by a cyclone at noon today and the Columbia rolling mill was razed to the ground. The ruins are on fire. One man is reported killed.

Carlisle, Pa., May 28.—A heavy storm passed over this city today. Lightning struck a Carlisle trolly car today while running in the central part of the town. Mrs. Florence Stiler and daughter, of Hagerstown, passengers, were badly burned.

STRUCK IN INDIANA.

Mount Vernon, Ind., May 28.—A tornado struck the southern portion of this city at 10 o'clock last night, wrecking nineteen buildings, numerous outhouses, trees, etc. The people escaped death or serious injury. The loss is great, and a relief force is now at work securing aid for the stricken people.

LATEST ACCOUNTS.

Lives Lost May Reach 500---Property Loss Enormous.

St. Louis, May 28, 2:30 p. m.—The awful sweep of last night's tornado is marked by a devastated district in the southwestern portion of the city, more than a mile wide and four miles long, with wrecked buildings, tottering walls, debris, choked streets and rescuing parties to tell the story of havoc and death.

St. Louis is dazed by the amount of the calamity and it will be days before the total loss of life and the amount of property destroyed will be known. The estimates of the number killed vary from 200 to 500, with the belief that the latter figures are the nearer correct. Coroner Waltie, at 12 o'clock, said that the death in St. Louis proper would easily reach 200 and that in East St. Louis it would be, perhaps, as large. At police headquarters the dead in St. Louis were estimated at 300, and in East St. Louis at 200. Extra editions of the local papers place the total amount of life at 500 or more.

The storm left its path littered with dead and dying, and patrol wagons, ambulances and undertakers' cars were busy all day long carrying the identified dead to their homes and homes of relatives and friends, or leaving the unidentified with the city morgue authorities.

The property loss is terrific, estimates ranging from $10,000,000 to $30,000,000. The storm which wrought the havoc was a most peculiar one and scarcely two people in all the city agree as to just how the damage was done. The heavy damage was in the vicinity of Lower Grove and Lafayette Park, where handsome residences were wrecked and many injured. The tornado swept from there northeast as far as the river, and then with a sudden turn to the north it cleared the Mississippi and tore its way into the heart of East St. Louis. One of the remarkable features was the destruction of a wing of the city hospital carrying 200 patients and nurses down in the wreck and killing only one person.

The steamer Pittsburg, of the Diamond Joe line; City of Vicksburg and City of Providence, of the Columbia Excursion company; the City of Monroe, of the Anchor line, and all sorts of small craft were pitched and tossed about until a final blast tore them from their moorings. They were swept across the river and struck the Illinois shore within a few blocks of each other. The loss of life on these boats is though to be slight, as everybody was cautioned not to jump and they would be brought safely to land. The City of Vicksburg is a total wreck. The City of Providence was blown up on the Illinois bank. Her rudder is gone and her cabin and smokestacks were blown away. The St. Louis and St. Paul Packet company's steamer St. Paul had started for Keokuk when the tornado struck the city. She has not been heard of. She had a full cabin. The Belle of Calhoun, the Madill and the Libbie Conger, which were moored near Chotteau avenue, were almost totally broken up.

The loss of boat property can only be estimated. A riverman says that $1,500,000 would not repair and replace the boats alone that figured in yesterday's disastrous storm.

Among the injured are: Mary Otsson, cut and bruised; Florence Childress, cut and bruised; Mary Finan, slightly cut; Carolina Roland, aged 64, slightly cut; Frank Guckey, fractured skull; Peter Herbenger, not serious; Edward Janzen, 34, arm broken; Lawrence Ward, 54, cut by flying glass; John Herman, 52, badly cut; Miss Clara Herman, daughter of John F., badly hurt; right arm broken; Mary Walters, forehead badly gashed by glass; Emma Walters, severely cut about head and arms; Edward S. Peck, 13 years, slightly injured; Mrs. Mary Wagener, Carlinville, Ill., badly injured by being blown against railing on Eads bridge; John Rudder, 1907 Sullivan avenue, blown from wagon, right knee injured.

Among the killed are: Mrs. John F. Herman, 57 years, 3561 Center avenue; John Byrne, 25, East St. Louis, badly injured; L. F. Sims, 37, married, 1707 Park avenue; Tylor Hileman, colored, 1401 Missouri avenue; Miss Louise Woodruff, 30, 2743 Ann avenue; C. S. Gallagher, 4 years, California and Ann avenues; unknown man found, 606 South Seventh; 2-year-old child, Peter McGivens, 2725 St. Vincent avenue; Anna Leva, killed by falling wall; Peter Deadrick, Ninth and Marion; unknown man taken from Loman's quarry.

FIGHTING

Silver Men Are on Top Today at the Prohibition Convention.

Two Reports on Resolutions Received Which Are Being Debated.

Sympathy For St. Louis Cyclone Sufferers Was Passed Unanimously.

Pittsburg, May 28.—It was 9:30 o'clock before the second day's session of the Prohibition national convention was called to order. The attendance at that hour was light, as many of the delegates had been laboring in committees until the early morning hours. When comparative quiet had been obtained, Rev. Gideon P. Macklen, of Ohio, offered prayer. A resolution was then presented expressing sympathy for the sufferers of the cyclone at St. Louis, and it was adopted by a standing vote. After the consideration of some routine matters a report from the committee on platform was called for. Chairman Frank stated that the narrow and broad gauge factions were unable to agree, and that two reports would be presented. The narrow gauge was the majority report.

The committee on platform presented two reports to the convention. The majority or "the narrow guage" report declares its agreement with the United States supreme court that statistics of every state show more crime and misery resulting from the use of ardent spirits than corrupt legislation and makes good government impossible.

That the party is unalterably opposed to the drink traffic and declares for its total suppression for beverage purposes, rejecting all compromise measures, whether license, local option, taxation or public control. Wage earners attention is called to the enormous waste caused by the liquor traffic at the cost of production and that the success of the Prohibition party will remove this great burden from industry. That they stand for good government, honestly and economically administered. That there is no greater peril to the nation than the complication of political parties for the liquor vote, and calls upon voters to enforce the declaration of the churches against the liquor traffic.

The minority report which was presented by the "broad guagers," has the following declaration on the money question: "That all money should be issued by the government only, without the intervention of any banking association. It should be based upon the wealth, stability and integrity of the nation, and should be a full legal tender for all debts, public and private, and should be of sufficient volume to meet the demands of the legitimate business interests of the country. And for the purpose of honestly liquidating all our outstanding coin obligations, was demanded, the free and unlimited coinage of both silver and gold, at a ratio of 16 to 1, without consulting any other nation.

Other planks in the platform declare against the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes. The use of liquors for medical and legitimate purposes should be controlled by the state. Equal rights of suffrage for both sexes is favored, and also acquisition of Cuba, opposed, also government control of railroads. That English in the public schools and no public funds for sectarian institutions. Election of a president by the popular vote, liberal pensions, amended immigration laws, none but citizens to vote, and naturalized citizens to vote only after being naturalized a year, are other recommendations.

The final declarations of the platform are: "There should be proportional representation in state and nation, and the initiative and referendum should be adopted so as to secure free expression of the popular will. We favor the imperative mandate as a guarantee against the misrepresentation of the people by men chosen to be their representatives."

Gov. St. John presented the minority report and moved that it be made a part of the majority report and the whole should be considered section by section. A motion to lay the minority report on the table was then made, but was defeated by a vote of 492 to 310. This was a test vote, and was regarded as a signal victory for the broad gauggers or silver men.

Mr. St. John then spoke in advocacy of the monthly report. The motion to make the minority report a part of the majority report was carried. The motion to take up the report section by section was carried with a cheer, and the broads were confident of carrying everything, including free silver.

The first seven planks, including the one favoring woman's suffrage, were then taken up, and as they did not differ materially in either report, were adopted. The convention at 12:20 p. m. then took a recess for dinner.

When the convention reassembled at 2:45 p. m., Mr. St. John announced that after a conference with Chairman Funk, it had been decided to take up the money plank next. The minority resolution, favoring free coinage of silver, was then read, and the battle between the silver and gold men was inaugurated. The discussion was heated from the start, and much feeling was manifested by both factions. It promises to be protracted.

MARINE MATTERS.

Fines Being Illegally Imposed on Vesselmen.

Under a mistake government officials on the revenue cutters are said to have been illegally collecting fins from hundreds of vessels on the lakes. The revenue cutter people and the customs officials at the Sault have been boarding all vessels that pass there and examining their papers. In cases where the endorsement of master had been made on the vessel's license and not on her enrollment the master was "held up" and $10 taken from him as a fine for what the cutter men and customs officers suppose to be a violation of that law.

Synopsis 4321 and 5299 of the treasury decisions cover this point, and state that an endorsement on the license is all that is required. Recent decisions by the treasury department are to the effect that an endorsement on the license is all that is required. Many vesselmen are in ignorance of this requirement, and keep on paying their little $10 bills into the United States treasury for an error which they have never made.

There is a section of the United States statues which contains a sort of blanket provision for that sort of thing, and in the absence of specific information as to the nature of the alleged offense, the discovery has not probably been made in Washington that the money thus collected is illegally extorted from vesselmen.

CYCLONE IN CONGRESS.

Joint Resolution For Relief Passes the Senate.

Washington, May 28.—The St. Louis horror was a theme of an eloquent prayer by the Rev. W. H. Milburn, the blind chaplain, at the opening of the senate today. When the house resolution authorizing the secretary of war to loan tents and render aid to the mayors of St. Louis and East St. Louis came up Mr. Palmer asked immediate consideration. Mr. Vest interposed the suggestion that while it might seem undesirous for him to interpose objection yet in view of late reports, showing the usual exaggeration attending the first reports of the calamity, he did not consider this action necessary. The people of St. Louis, he said, could take care of themselves, and although the resolution could do no harm, yet he deprecated the tendency to rush impulsively to federal sources for relief.

Mr. Harris said he fully sympathized with this view, although the resolution being acted on was made a joint instead of a current one. Mr. Cullom said he felt that from the latest reports that there was no occasion for the passage of the resolution, and that the respective states would be able to take care of their people on both sides of the river. Yet the house had acted, the resolution had been amended to be joint instead of current, thus requiring presentation to the president, and was then adopted.

IN THE HOUSE.

Washington, May 28.—Almost the sole topic of conversation among the members of the house today was the St. Louis tornado. Members stood about in groups and discussed the horrible details. The St. Louis members, Messrs. Cobb, Barthold and Joy, and Mr. Murphy, of Illinois, who lives in East St. Louis, were almost frantic with anxiety. In the death lists they recognized many whom they knew. M. Barthold, whose family resides within a block of Concordia hall in South St. Louis which was razed to the ground, was especially solicitous for news from his family. Chaplain Couden in his invocation referred feelingly to the sorrow and suffering in the grief stricken district.

The house has aggreed to the senate amendment to the St. Louis tornado resolution, which makes the resolution joint instead of concurrent. It now goes to the president.

The house concurred in the senate amendments to the sundry civil appropriation bill, increasing the appropriation for the St. Paul public building from $60,000 to $125,000, and $43,000 for the building at Little Rock. The sundry civil appropriation bill thus was sent back to the conference on the remaining amendments.

A $75 Wheel

For $45.00!

Everyone Warranted.

To do this we had to buy 1000 Wheels of this one make. We have already sold 700 of them, and offer the balance at above price. These are as good Wheels as are offered by most dealers at $75.00. They have large tubing and barrel hubs and are bang-up good Wheels.

We are having a large sale on the "Eldredge" and "Belvidere," which are so popular with the trade. But the "Lochinar" we bought at a low price to sell at a close margin to those who want a good Wheel, but do not care to invest in a high-priced one.

We have made deductions on other Wheels also; prospective buyers would do well to call and see our stock.

HIS TALE OF TROUBLE.

James D. Reekie Cannot Agree With W. T. Bailey.

James D. Reekie this morning began a suit against W. T. Bailey in which he makes various and sundry charges and narrates a tale of woe of considerable length. He alleges that some time ago he owned a sawmill at Virginia. He sold it to Bailey a half interest in the mill for $750, and then he claims his troubles began. The agreement was that the defendant was to furnish the logs to be sawed for which the plaintiff was to pay Bailey $2.50 per thousand feet. He claims now that the defendant has begun a process which is intended to freeze him out. He claims that Bailey will not let him take the books and look at them, that he has not paid the purchase price and that he has abstracted large sums of money from the partnership for his own use. He says that they are both constantly engaged in some quarrel and hopeless dissensions. For these reasons Reekie wants the partnership dissolved, a receiver appointed and an accounting made. Fryberger & Johnson are the attorneys.

PROGRAM

Outline of the Entertainment For the State Firemen's Associations.

Excursion on the Christopher and Ball at the Pavilion.

The Delegates Will Send in Their Credentials in Advance.

The arrangements for entertaining the delegates to the convention of the State Firemen's association, which will be in session in this city on June 9, 10 and 11, are practically completed, the sub-committees having completed their labors and presented their reports at a meeting of the fire commissioners held at the city hall this afternoon.

Among the diversions offered the guests will be an excursion on the whaleback steamer Christopher Columbus, the boat going down beyond Two Harbors. A band will be taken along to discourse music to those who wish to trip the light fantastic, and the owners of the big steamer will see to it that she will show what she can do in the way of showing her heels. The excursion will take place on Tuesday afternoon, if the weather permits, but if old Superior should happen to be in the sulks it will be postponed to Wednesday.

On Wednesday evening there will be a ball at the Pavilion, at which everybody will be requested to forget they are a day over 18, and to keep up the fun until the "out" signal is given.

On Thursday afternoon it is probable that a trip up the river, with lunch at Fond du Lac, will be given, although the program may be changed to a ride over the boulevard.

The forenoons of Tuesday and Thursday and all of Wednesday will be devoted to the business of the convention, which will be held in the hall at the fire department headquarters. To save time in effecting an organization the secretary will probably reques; that delegates' credentials be sent in by mail in advance, in which case the work can be so prepared that the committee on credentials can complete its labors in about an hour. The session will be devoted to the presentation and discussion of papers on topics assigned.

The topics are selected by a committee of the Minnesota State Fire association, appointed for that purpose. In accordance with a resolution passed at the meeting for 1895, one-half of the departments are assigned a topic each year. The topics and assignments are as follows:

Topic 1. "Should the waterworks and fire alarm systems be the property of the city?"—New Ulm, Wadena, New Prague, Pipestone, Warren, Worthington.

Topic 2. "What is the most practical system of water supply for city or village, with estimate cost per foot?"—Sauk Center, Northfield, Red Wing, Wells, Zumbrota, Waseca.

Topic 3. "The best plan to extinguish a fire in cellar stored with oil, when the only entrance to the same is on the inside of the building?"—St. Paul, Winona, St. Cloud, South St. Paul, Owatonna, Stillwater.

Topic 4. "Are coal oil and gasoline stoves hazardous, and should they be permitted for general use only by permit from proper authorities?"—Rochester, New York Mills, Hastings, St. Charles, Renville, North St. Paul.

Topic 5. "Are our state laws governing the handling and storing of explosives properly enforced?"—Wilmar, Perham, Richmond, Springfield, Stephen.

Topic 6. "Should fire insurance companies contribute to the support and maintenance of volunteer companies?"—Shakopee, Tracy, Wessly, Royalton, St. Paul Park.

NEW COMPLAINT FILED.

Bill in the Dickerman vs. Bull Equity Case.

A new bill of complaint in the case in equity in the United States court of Charles E. Dickerman vs. J. W. Bull and wife and John B. Turner has been filed. The suit is brought to clear title to Highland Park addition and East Lawn division property. The complaint is a lengthy one. The plaintiff traces his title back to John D. Howard who secured it from W. H. Little on foreclosure proceedings.

It is then alleged that J. W. Bull searched the records for the purpose of finding flaws in the sale of property and stirring up litigation that he found the first and original judgment book of the district court in which the Little-Howard foreclosure proceedings were recorded, lost or mislaid and began a search for Little. He found him in Michigan, made a contract to endeavor to get the property back for an undivided one-half interest and then secured a quit claim deed to half and instituted a suit to recover title. It is further alleged that W. E. Richardson secured from Little for $1 a deed for his half interest in April, 1891, and in September, 1895, gave Bull a blank deed which was filled out to J. B. Turner, Bull's brother-in-law, in what the plaintiff believes to be Bull's handwriting. He alleges that neither of these deeds is recorded.

The court is asked to declare the title in the plaintiff.

HIS WIFE

Miss Kathryn Weston Claims to Be Rish A. Gray's Widow.

This Announcement Was Made to the Heirs This Afternoon.

Claims They Were Married Six Years Ago In Hudson, Wis.

A surprise party was spring this afternoon upon the heirs of Rish Gray, who died in Boston recently. Miss Kathryn Weston, formerly of St. Paul, and now of Duluth, claims to be the dead man's widow, and as such she will of course put in a claim for a dower right in the estate, which in this state includes everything.

Miss Weston, or Mrs. Gray, is a sister-in-law of John C. Bullitt, Jr., the well-known attorney, and she has lived with his family ever since his removal here from St. Paul two years ago. Mr. Gray and she are said to have been intimate in St. Paul, and friends of both say that they were together there a good deal. The story goes that they were married in Hudson, Wis., six years ago.

They are said to have gone over quietly without letting anyone know, to Hudson, and there married in the Gretna Green of the Twin cities. Her relative and representative, John C. Bullitt, Jr., was seen this afternoon, but he would say nothing beyond the fact that the announcement had been made to the heirs today. Why the affair was kept quiet so long and why it was just announced will probably come out later.

Mr. Gray, as is well known, left a large fortune; in fact, he had an income of considerably more than $100 a day. He owned the sawmill property at the end of Rice's Point, the west half of the Mesaba block and many other valuable properties. He always carried a heavy bank account, and there were few men in Duluth who were in better circumstances. His estate is not encumbered in any way, and was probably worth fully $500,000.

WILL BE REMODELED.

Changes Will Be Made in the Burrows Block.

Plans for the complete remodeling of the Burrows block are being prepared, and the improvement will doubtless be made. It will be very desirable, for it will afford M. S. Burrows & Co. much more room, and they need it badly, and will make the offices much more in demand.

The plans under consideration provide for a Superior street entrance to the office portion of the building and the closing of the Third avenue west entrance. The two floors occupied by the store will be extended back to the alley wall, giving rooms 140 feet deep instead of 100, as they are now. This will add about 4000 square feet of floor space and will greatly improve the appearance of the store and give it an enlarged capacity.

An entrance and half six feet wide will be cut next the west wall of the building and the elevator will be located there. The offices on the upper floors will be considerably changed in arrangement.

The improvement will be an expensive one. It will be made during the summer, in time to be completed before the fall trade begins.

Fined For Begging.

William Moore was fined $5 and costs in the municipal court today for begging on the street. He went up on the hill. John Calwell and Oley Nelson secured positions on the rock pile to work out fines of $10 and costs each for drunkenness. John Johnson and Frank Bochwick, who pleaded guilty to charges of drunkenness and vagrancy respectively, were let off with sentences suspended.
